George, Mussolini Warn of Approach Of World Wide War

Nations Never Before Were So Close To Conflict Through Failure To Seek Understanding.

RACE TO PREPARE ON IN EARNEST

Leaders of Italy and England Take Gloomy View of Continued Peace in Near Future.

Manchester, England, December 8. (United News.)—Chaotic international relations are leading the world towards war "not because any one wants it but because nobody has the courage to stop the runaway horse of the war chariot," David Lloyd George, Britain's war premier, said in a speech here today.

Lloyd George's address opened the liberal party's campaign to promote world peace.

The fiery little Welchman questioned the effectiveness of the Kellogg treaty.

"What more is needed," he asked, "but to sing the 'Hallelujah Chorus' and go on building our new Jerusalem in England, free and unfettered? That is how it is intended to be but that is not how it is.

Sees Arms Increasing.

"Since we signed the Kellogg pact, armaments are steadily increasing. Kellogg says 'Thou Shalt Not Kill' and at the same time 'Fill your waist belt with knives and pistols so as to be ready to kill'."

"Why should there be all this hush and whisper 'don't say anything in case it might make it worse'? In 1922 we were able to discuss relations between the United States and England, but now we can't do it.

"We must face the realty of it because it was not faced in 1914 when we had the greatest war on earth.

"As things are now, the world is heading straight for war. Unless the nations are prepared to accept soon and wholeheartedly, good faith and peaceable means for settling disputes, God alone can save us from a calamity more terrible than has ever been seen.

"We are heading for war not because any one wants it, but because nobody has the courage to stop the runaway horse of the war chariot.

BOLIVIANS EXPEL PARAGUAY'S ENVOY FOLLOWING BATTLE

Skirmish Between Soldiers of Two Nations Brings High Tension as Passport Is Issued.

Buenos Aires, December 8.—(AP)—Information from Paraguay received in official circles here late tonight said that reinforcements were being made along the Bolivian frontier where two clashes have occurred.

Word was received that the Bolivian forces had recaptured the Fort Vanguardia in a bloody battle. The exact number of casualties was not reported.

La Paz, Bolivia, December 8.—(AP) The Paraguayan charge d'affaires was given his passport and started under guard for Peru today while President Siles suspended the municipal election because of the situation created in the Bolivian-Paraguayan frontier clash. Congress met in secret session and a commission was appointed to take care of the situation.

Popular demonstrations took place in the capital with thousands of citizens parading through the streets.

LOWE SAYS DAVIS FORESAW HIS FATE

Slain Motor Car Dealer Had Kept Guard in His Home Several Times Prior to Fate.

That R. Hall Davis, West End motor car dealer and civic leader, lived three months in fear of the fate he met Thursday morning, when he was shot and killed by W. Lawrence Shippey, shipping clerk, over his alleged relations with Mrs. Shippey, was learned Saturday night.

Resuming his investigation into the Davis murder, Detective John W. Lowe learned that the slain motor car dealer had had his home guarded at various times during the last three months, so strong was his belief that Shippey intended to do him bodily harm. A friend, Lieutenant Jack T. Malcom, of the police department,

Nephew of Swedish King Finds Football Rough Game But Most Fascinating Sport

Count and Countess Folke Bernadotte watching the Tech Georgia game.

Count Bernadotte and His Bride Are Guests of Dr. M. L. Brittain, President of Georgia Tech.

It was a puzzled representative of Swedish royalty who sat in President M. L. Brittain's box at Grant field Saturday afternoon and watched 22 red and yellow-clad young men imperil their lives and limbs chasing after an inflated pigskin.

"But do you know," Count Folk Bernadotte, descendant of one of Napoleon's marshals and the nephew of the king of Sweden, confided in me, "I rather like it. It's exhilirating and wonderful—but awfully rough."

Nobody took exception to the observation that the game between Tech and Georgia was "rather rough," with the accent on both words.

"Do you play football in Sweden?" the count was asked.

"Oh, no. We play soccer, and that's pretty rough. But nothing like this."

Count Bernadotte, whose wedding to the former Estelle Manville, the New Jersey asbestos heiress, was a brilliant social event of a few days ago, motored over from Aiken, S. C., with his bride to see the game. They are honeymooning at Aiken, S. C., and were guests of President Brittain at the gridiron battle.

The count admitted that he had spent the entire first half in total ignorance of what was going on or why. It was just a mess of jumbled arms and legs, of yelling thousands and blaring bands to him.

But in the second half he caught the idea, which is to carry the ball over your opponent's goal line. After that he became a football enthusiast.

"It's a great game," was his decision.

The count and countess returned by motor Saturday night to Aiken, where they are spending their honeymoon. He said they would spend Christmas in Pleasantville and sail for Sweden December 29.

32,000 Fans See Tech Defeat Ancient Rival

:: GOOD-NATURED RIVALRY FEATURES CONTEST ::

BY LOYD A. WILHOIT.

A perfect climax to a colorful football season was written in Crimson and Gold on Grant field while 32,000 pop-eyed fans looked on Saturday afternoon.

The score—20 to 6—doesn't half tell the story.

Only those who expected to see Tech stage a field day at Georgia's expense were disappointed. If ever a battered and bloody cripple put up a dead game fight and forced its opponent to call forth every ounce of strength to win, it was Georgia against Tech.

Bands Blaze Forth.

Even the two bands caught the spirit of intense rivalry and put more force behind their resounding blasts. Authorities estimated that there wasn't a hair's breadth difference between the height of the goose-steps executed by the two drug majors.

Those who sat huddled in blankets in the chill east stand with elbow-bending going on everywhere (and never a show of hospitality that this writer could discover) had every reason to realize that it was Georgia playing Tech, with the fires of clan rivalry blazing on the hills about Atlanta.

Today's papers all over the country will tell of Tech's magnificent victory over Georgia. Everything good that's said about those gold-clad boys will be deserved. Statistics will show they gained more yardage from scrimmage, ran back punts with greater success and all that sort of thing dear to the heart of the statistician.

But in this writer's opinion, the chief paean of praise should be sounded for the Red and Black. Playing against a team that plainly outclassed it; finishing a season that has been little short of disastrous, and pitting its strength against one of the greatest machines of the whole country, Georgia went to meet defeat with heads up and shoulders squared bravely.

Praise for Georgia.

It's far harder to be great in defeat than in victory, but if ever a team went down with pennons flying valiantly at the masthead that team was Georgia.

After seeing the Bulldog victims of influenza and injuries play, I hope that no gentleman fresh out of the hospital will take it into his head to challenge me to mortal combat.

The stands appreciated Georgia's magnificent rally. They sent roar after roar sweeping across the flats in approval of Georgia's fighting courage at the same time they were shouting encouragement to the Tech steamroller piloted by the bow-legged Stumpy Thomason.

As for the crowd, it matched the players in spirit and gaiety. It was the biggest and the most colorful of the entire 1928 season, and it filed out of the stadium universally pleased at the outcome of the game.

A victory for Georgia would have meant little, but for Tech it meant an unblemished record when Alexander's stalwarts go west to meet California in the Rose Bowl on New Year's day. There was a sinister hint for California to meditate upon when

Scottish Rite Hospital Auxiliary Leaders Thank All Who Aided In Making Special Constitution Gravure Section Big Success

The word "cooperation" has come to be a symbol of power and accomplishment, and it is this word that we, the undersigned, find uppermost in mind when we come to thank all who worked with us to make possible the Scottish Rite hospital pictorial gravure advertising which appears on Pages 2 and 6 of the regular gravure section of The Sunday Constitution and the entire special eight-page gravure section which is a part of this issue. Our gratitude is expressed to The Constitution and its capable and courteous staff; to the Ruralist Press; to the prominent Atlantans who permitted their names and photographs to be used as sponsors for products advertised, and last—as a climax in the chorus of appreciation—to the merchants and other business men of the city and section who so generously proved their faith in our work and the advertising medium we represented.

$500 To Be Paid For Information Leading to Arrest

"Reward Offered by Constitution Undoubtedly Will Aid Us in Capturing Slayer," Declares Chief of Detectives Lamar Poole; Police at Present Without Clues as to Identity of Killer of Undertaker.

The Constitution offers a reward of $500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Robert M. Brandon.

This newspaper, believing that it is impossible for a murderer to commit his crime in the heart of the city, jump from a moving automobile and vanish without any person knowing or having an indication of his identity, wants that man arrested and brought before the bar of justice. It is to aid the police in their search for the slayer that The Constitution offers the cash reward.

To anyone—man, woman or child, white or colored—who furnishes The Constitution with information as to the identity of the murderer with evidence that will later lead to conviction The Constitution will pay $500.

Atlanta's recent series of murders and other crimes has brought the city before outside citizens in a bad light. The Constitution believes the city's name is impaired and it believes the best way to stop crime is to apprehend and punish the guilty.

Reward for Evidence.

To anyone who supplies The Constitution with evidence not already in possession of the police, and which, upon being referred by this newspaper to the authorities, should result in the unearthing of evidence which would result in the arrest and conviction of the murderer, The Constitution will pay this reward.

Any person having the slightest direct information concerning the plot which resulted in the killing of Brandon or concerning the murder itself, should get in touch with The Constitution. The information thus brought to The Constitution will be turned over immediately to Chief of Detectives A. Lamar Poole, whose staff of investigators will run down every clue thus secured.

The offer is simple: $500 to the person who brings to The Constitution information which will result in the arrest of the murderer with evidence that will result in conviction.

Police Gratified.

"The reward offered by The Constitution undoubtedly will aid us in capturing the slayer," Chief Poole said Saturday night. "It is a fine spirit of cooperation and shows that The Constitution, as ever, is striving only for the public good. Persons who have knowledge of crimes of this character oftentimes will not divulge what they know until they have been promised compensation. The Constitution's offer opens the way to new assistance in solving this case."

Brandon, a prominent citizen, vice president and general manager of the Barclay & Brandon Undertaking company, was found in his moving motor car last Monday night near the corner of Baker and Ivy streets. Two shots had been heard by persons on the street. A man in a gray suit and brown hat dashed from the moving vehicle and sped away on foot. No trace of him has been found.

At a coroner's inquest and to investigating detectives nearly a score of persons gave a description of the slayer. He is tall and slender. He moved too swiftly for these persons to observe his contour, the color of his eyes and hair and other information which would assist the police in apprehending him.

Leads Exploded.

Detectives under Chief Poole and John W. Lowe have run down score after score of clues. Each lead has been exploded. Saturday night they admitted that the crime was no nearer solution than it was on the night of the murder. Hundreds of persons have volunteered information which has proved fruitless. But The Constitution and the police believe that some one person, if not a number of persons, knows the name of the man who jumped from the moving car—the man who killed Brandon.

The public wants to know who shot down this man in the heart of the city. The Constitution wants to know. The police want to know.

A reward of $500 will be paid by The Constitution for information furnished this newspaper which will lead to the arrest and conviction of the slayer.

Fumbles Pave Way for First Scores by Both Teams; Lumpkin Proves Athenians' Nemesis.

BY DICK HAWKINS.

"California, here we come!"

Saturday 100 Tech students brandishing musical instruments formed a huge "T" in the center of Grant field and played a challenge to California. At that time the score of the Tech-Georgia game was 7-6 in Tech's favor but those bandmen flung their challenge just the same and before the echoes of that far-flung blast had died away the score was Tech 20; Georgia 6.

"California, here we come!"

Barely a week ago the Tornado changed its course. It had been pursuing a path through the southern conference and it shifted to head west for Pasadena. Just ahead was the looming form of a Bulldog, teeth bared and hair bristling on its back. The path of the Tornado was not a path of roses. Saturday at Grant field the Bulldog, teeth still bared and fighting instinct still predominant, was left panting on the field as the Tornado whipped away toward the west.

If the Golden Tornado of Tech sweeps its way through California and if it could tear from California through every other state in the union it would never find a storm wall any tougher than that of Georgia. The Bulldogs, beset by sickness and belabored by the jinx of a bad season, played their hearts out before inevitable defeat. They never gave an inch without leaving bloody tracks behind and they never quit for the fraction of a minute.

Glorious In Defeat.

Georgia Tech won the first leg on the beautiful Constitution trophy and won it decisively but the score does not represent the gallant effort of the Red and Black. Seldom does any team look glorious in defeat but Georgia played Saturday with a halo of glory around its head.

From the first quarter when Maffett snagged Hooks' pass behind Tech's goal for a touchdown after Palmer had recovered a fumble until the last minute of play, when Tech

BRANDON MURDER BAFFLES POLICE

Detectives Admit They Have No Clues to Man Who Killed Prominent Undertaker.

Six days of investigation having proved futile, the police Saturday night admitted that the murder of Robert M. Brandon, Monday night while driving his motor car near the intersection of Baker and Ivy streets, still was no nearer solution than on the night of the murder.

"We have spent six days following false leads," Chief of Detectives A. Lamar Poole said. "We have investigated and found out a great deal about persons we now know had nothing to do with the murder but we have yet to find anything concerning the man who did."

The detective homicide squad, headed by John W. Lowe, continued its search for the elusive "tall, slender man in the gray suit and brown hat," reported to have been seen dashing from the Brandon car after firing the fatal shots into the body of the undertaker, vice president and manager of the Barclay & Brandon company.

"I am sorry to admit that we are no nearer solving this case than we were six days ago," Lowe said. "We have run down many clues and all have proven false. We still have others but concerning them I must keep silent until I follow them and learn just what there is in them."

Chief Poole, anxious to solve the mystery behind the slaying, announced Saturday night that all men working on the case would continue their efforts today, despite the fact Sunday usually is a holiday for most men in the detective bureau.

"We want this man and want him badly," Poole said. "We are not going to rest until we have him behind the bars downstairs."

Unlimited Era Is Seen In Air Transportation By Alderman Hartsfield

Atlanta Airport Is Best South of Chicago, According To Chairman of Aviation Committee.

Air travel as an important factor in diplomatic relations between nations and as the safe, economical and dependable transportation system of the future was envisioned Saturday by Alderman William B. Hartsfield, of the third ward, chairman of the aviation committee of city council who returned from the national aviation exhibition held at Chicago.

An unlimited era of development was predicted by Mr. Hartsfield, who declared that Candler field Atlanta's air port, is the best south of Chicago. Mr. Hartsfield flew from Atlanta to Chicago over the Interstate lines.

"We were told by W. Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster in charge of air mail, that all first class mail would be transported by plane within the next five years," Mr. Hartsfield said.

Big Development Seen.

"Assistant Secretary of Commerce in Charge of Aeronautics William P. McCracken said that planes will tie distant corners of the world together in a new diplomatic network caused by common knowledge and common interests undeveloped before the advent of the plane. Predictions also were made that new air mail lines will link the United States with Central America within the near future.

"In fact aviation will revolutionize commerce and relations of the entire world, if forecasts of experts are to be accepted at face value.

"Candler field has been criticized, but it has been unwarranted. Atlanta's air port is the best I saw south of Chicago. It is highly developed and is well equipped. Of course with the advent of the larger plane, we must lengthen the runways. We also must buy the tract on which it rests.

"The field, however, as a whole, is far ahead of those of other cities. Atlanta is well recognized as the aviation center of the entire south among those well versed in aeronautical circles. I found the leaders of the nation well informed as to the facilities offered by Atlanta and they praised the development of the field. It is one of the few in the south which it properly equipped to protect flyers and passengers by furnishing radio reports and weather reports to pilots.

Needs of Atlanta Airport.

"Great amphibian planes bearing a score of passengers will be swooping down on Atlanta within the next few months. We must get ready for them. The flying school should be continued; additional hangars should be provided, concrete aprons constructed, and the ridge in the center of the field graded down. When this is done, Atlanta will be able to compete with any other city in the entire country, and will have ample claim to the hub of aeronautical activities of the entire south.

"She now has practically a monopoly in southern aviation circles through her natural position as the south's greatest distributing center. There is only a little more work to do after the field is purchased. We should take steps to do that.

Mr. Hartsfield told of his trip by air to Chicago. He left at 9 o'clock in the morning and arrived at the Windy City at 5 o'clock the same afternoon.

"The plane was heated and although we traveled over snow clad country we were as comfortable as if we had been housed in a pullman car," he said.

Adequate fields are a necessity and a prime consideration of life insurance companies contemplating extension of policy protection to those engaged in or utilizing air travel, according to a Walton L. Crocker, president of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance company, of Boston.

KIDNAP-SLAYER IS TAKEN EAST TO FACE CHARGE

Detroit, Mich., December 8.—(AP)—Closely guarded by three detectives, Peter Kudzinowski, who became intoxicated here this week and confessed to two slayings in the east, left today by train to return to Jersey City, N. J., to answer for one of the crimes.

He is being returned to New Jersey to face a charge of kidnaping and slaying Joe Storelli, 7-year-old New York city boy, whose body was found in a swamp where Kudzinowski told Detroit police he left it after slashing the boy's throat.

TWO MEN BADLY CUT.

Unidentified Negro Sought in One Stabbing.

Two men were seriously slashed Saturday night when J. Bragman, of 223 East Hunter street, fell victim to an unidentified negro at 166 Decatur street. R. W. Jones, 337 Dill avenue, was cut by Ralph Benton, negro, in Jones' store at 317 Decatur street.

Details of the Bragman cutting were not furnished police. Bragman had several serious slashes about the throat and was admitted to Grady hospital. Jones told police he returned to his place of business shortly after leaving Saturday night and found the Benton negro in the store talking with the nightwatchman. Jones ordered the negro out and the latter slashed him, he said. Call Officers Portwood and Harper and Higgins and Tanner investigated.

Roosevelt Visits "The Cove" And Learns It Was for Al

:: TOURS AREA SELDOM ENTERED ::

Warm Springs, Ga., December 8.—(AP)—Governor-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt Saturday traveled a dozen miles through the piney woods of Georgia to meet the folks in "the Cove," a secluded section wherein the inhabitants have lived for generations in rustic simplicity.

He found there little evidence of the automobile and the radio. But as he "came out," well after dark, it was to the tune of old "Bun" Wright's fiddle, and with the promise of a chicken dinner next April "like there ain't no better."

The governor-elect made the trip as the guest of Meriwether County Judge H. H. Revill and Sheriff Jack Farrell. He was first driven to Chaly Beate Springs, a famous Georgia summer resort before the civil war, located near Manchester, Ga. The party then traveled over winding mountain roads through a gap which let them down into "the Cove."

For many years it has been known in this region simply by that name. It is an area of several dozen square miles, wherein reside about 300 persons. They are completely surrounded by mountains, with the Flint river making the only outlet.

Judge Revill said that for generations the same families have tilled the soil and strangers are always viewed with suspicion. But the people themselves were described by both the judge and Sheriff Farrell as "honest, hard-working, and God-fearing citizens."

One of the first things Mr. Roosevelt learned from the several men who gathered about his car when it stopped before a country store was that he was in an Al Smith stronghold.

"How did the election go here?" the governor-elect asked Charlie Gilbert, justice of the peace.

"Sixty to nothing for Al," Gilbert replied with a grin. It remained for Judge Revill to explain that Charlie was the only voter there who did not support Smith. But they wouldn't let him vote, according to the bystanders.

"Bun" Wright, the fiddler, appeared on the scene after the governor-elect had been escorted down the Jake Waddell's place by the river. There Mr. Roosevelt viewed a 450-pound hog, "just about ready for butcherin'", and heard Mr. Waddell, hat in hand, graciously thank him for the visit.

"I never thought the next president of the United States would ever set foot in my house," said Mr. Waddell.

Wright, the fiddler, played several selections for the governor-elect, among them "The Devil's Dream," "Billy in the Low Ground," and "Down in the Piney Woods." At Judge Revill's suggestion, he said he would be in Washington in 1932 to 'play at your inauguration." The judge said he would dance a buck and wing while "Bun" furnished the music.

Gilbert then made the offer of the chicken dinner and Mr. Roosevelt said he would try to bring "Al along to show that he hasn't horns." The trip took the greater portion of Mr. Roosevelt's day, and he laid aside all other affairs in favor of it. He is almost ready for his return to New York, planning to start Monday.

He plans for tomorrow a luncheon and swimming party at the new glass-inclosed pool completed here recently.

ATLANTA EDUCATORS WELCOME MRS. HANSON

Assembling prominent educators of the state and city, the Atlanta Public School Teachers' association Saturday night gave a dinner in honor of Mrs. Florence Curtis Hanson, secretary of the American Federation of Teachers.

Addresses of welcome to Mrs. Hanson were delivered by Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of city schools; Carl Karston, George W. Powell, president of the Atlanta board of education; Mrs. H. G. Parks, president of the Parent-Teacher council, and others.

Speakers expressed appreciation of the opportunity of having Mrs. Hanson, as representative of the American Federation of Teachers, visit the city, and each of the speakers stressed the the splendid results which have come to the educational system of Atlanta as a result of the affiliation of the Atlanta Public School Teachers' association with the American Federation of Teachers.

In her address, Mrs. Hanson dealt with the defects in the modern education system, chief among which are a lack of intellectual honesty and a loss of spiritual values, she said. She stressed the fact that in public education there is a vital need for truth and an insight into evil.

The speaker pointed out the responsibility of the teacher for development of proper educational ideals and methods of teaching, and stressed the fact that on their shoulders would rest the blame for failure to correct defects in the modern educational system.

She said that with the teachers more than any other group rested the amazing potential power for effecting social changes. This, she said, constituted a challenge to the teachers of the nation to organize themselves into that type of organization which promotes proper conditions under which teachers may work and freedom from such restraints as would make their work ineffective.

"DRUNK" CHARGES ARE PREFERRED AGAINST 'SUICIDE'

He followed the ostrich's wisdom and "committed suicide" by shooting out the lights of his home, lying down on the floor in the darkness and waiting for the judgment day.

But Call Officers Ginn and McGarity, summoned to the scene by alarmed neighbors, proved rude Gabriels Saturday night to H. L. Thompson, of 488 Peeples street, booking charges of drunk and disorderly conduct and shooting against him.

"Mean licker" was assigned by officers as the reason for a note he wrote to his absent wife: "Baby: I don't know where you will find me. I am drunk, and if I get drunk enough I'll shoot myself." All lights of the residence were shot out and officers found fifteen empty cartridges in the house.

GOOD-WILL SHIP NEAR TOUR'S END

BY JAMES L. WEST,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

U. S. S. Maryland, en route Valparaiso, December 8.—(AP)—A brilliant function on the after-deck of the U. S. S. Marfland, anchored off Antofagasta, Chile, today marked an exchange of expressions of good will between President-elect Hoover and Foreign Minister Alberto Palacios, of Bolivia, personal representative of President Hermando Siles.

Besides Dr. Palacios and other members of the Bolivian cabinet, the function was attended by the president and members of the house of deputies who made the long journey from La Paz across Chile so that Mr. Hoover might receive in person felicitations from the inland republic during his Latin-American good will mission.

End of West Coast Trip.

Mr. Hoover requested Dr. Palacios personally to convey to President Siles his regret that the inexorable limit of time made it impossible for him to go to La Paz and to express his appreciation of the cordial sentiments of the Bolivian government toward both himself and Mrs. Hoover. He added that friendship between the United States and Bolivia had been cemented on many occasions.

In his address Dr. Palacios told Mr. Hoover that his visit would "Establish a historical moment in the fraternal relations of both Americas, establishing new rules for the common comprehension and understanding of the spiritual aspirations and material interests of our continent."

Anchoring off Antofagasta a little after 9 o'clock this morning, the Maryland was saluted by the Chilean cruiser Chacabuco which continued her escort after the American vessel sailed for Valparaiso this afternoon. The Maryland is due at Valparaiso early Monday for the end of the west coast part of the Hoover tour.

Bolivia Seeks No Favors.

In his formal speech of welcome, the foreign minister paid tribute to such American efforts to insure peace as the Dawes plan, efforts to limit naval armaments, Secretary Kellogg's efforts to find equitable solutions for international differences, and the Belgian relief work of Mr. Hoover.

"Bolivia aspires only to the opportunity that other countries enjoy," he said, "and with it the consequent right of life and improvement. We do not seek this to the detriment of our sister countries, but with their fraternal cooperation.

"I do not desire to end these remarks without expressing to you how effectively Minister David Kaufman has contributed a more complete comprehension of the sentiment and interests of your country and mine. His indefatigable work has cemented the relations of both countries, has promoted the appreciation not only of my government but also of all the people of Bolivia."

Mr. Hoover said in reply: 'I wish to express deep gratitude for your tribute to my country. The friendship between Bolivia and the United States has become fixed in the traditions of our countries. They have been cemented on many occasions throughout our history, and it is indeed emphasized by the great effort which you have undertaken in order to give me the pleasure of your acquaintance. In this appreciation and gratitude, my country will join.

Regrets Missing President.

"I desire greatly that you should convey to President Siles my infinite regret that the inexorable limitations of time prevents my having the great pleasure of a journey to La Paz and a personal call upon him. I should have deemed it a great privilege to have made his personal acquaintance and to add to my reading an actual visualization of Bolivia and its great progress.

"I regret that I have but a few weeks available before I shall need to take up actively the question of organization of my own administration. Short as the time is, I am grateful for this meeting, as it will enable me to have a better understanding. . .

"Bolivia is especially implanted in the hearts of our people because all of our school children learn to associate the great name of your country with the great liberator, Bolivar. I should desire no better foundation for national esteem than that the builders of our country should stand equally high in the minds of your school children. It would indeed be a high compliment to me if you would convey to the president and people of Bolivia that friendliness and good will which the people of the United States hold within their hearts."

Another Fine Day Forecast By Weatherman

Not satisfied with having provided the anxious thousands of grid fans with an absolutely perfect day for the Tech-Georgia classic, C. F. von Herrmann, chief forecaster for the local United States weather bureau, says that today will be just as good and perhaps a little better, if a slight temperature rise can make it so. "A fine clear day," is his prediction.

Atlanta experienced an unexpected drop to below freezing Saturday morning, when the official thermometer began its daily climb from a minimum of 30 degrees. The sun, however, unobscured by clouds, soon had its warming effect and a maximum of 44 was reached in the middle of the afternoon. Both the minimum and maximum will be increased by about four degrees today, the weatherman thinks.

BLANKET OF SNOW FAILS TO DETER NEW YORK BUYERS

New York, December 8.—(United News.)—The first heavy snow storm of the season blanketed New York city under a white coating today, bringing added realization to the nation's largest city that Christmas approaches.

The heavy snow storm, driven by a hard north wind, kept up from early morning. Thousands of Christmas shoppers paraded Fifth avenue and the shopping districts through the first really uncomfortable winter weather.

But the snow failed to halt the avalanche of Christmas buying as even tonight, as the snow continued under promises of lasting through the week-end, streets were crowded with shoppers. Storekeepers are expecting their greatest Christmas year and sales in New York city alone will amount to millions.

spent several nights with Davis at his home.

Told Lawyer of Plight.

Davis also bared his plight to his attorney, Grover Middlebrooks, Lowe learned, consulting the lawyer on meetings with Shippey, a series of which ended with the shipping clerk firing five bullets into the auto dealer's body.

"It appears to me that Davis was extremely cautious when Shippey first learned of the reported relations with Mrs. Shippey," Lowe asserted. "But he seems to have thrown caution to the winds lately and as a result was off his guard when Shippey began firing Thursday morning."

Trial Date Unset.

With the trial date of Shippey a matter of conjecture, both the state and the defense Saturday were moving forward with plans for a fight over the life of the 29-year-old husband, who claims that he slew Hall Davis, automobile dealer, because of Davis' alleged attentions to Mrs. Shippey.

Reaffirming Saturday his statement that he is undecided as to when he will place Shippey on trial, Solicitor General John A. Boykin said that he plans to investigate the case fully before placing it upon the calendar. Mr. Boykin promised an extremely searching inquiry by his office, and said that he will investigate a number of different angles of the case which have been told to him.

Trial Probably in January.

Shippey's case probably will be reached about the middle or latter part of January, according to present indications. It was said Saturday at the solicitor's office that there is no hope that the case will be reached this week, the last five days for court business in the criminal division this year.

It is believed that the case of George R. Harsh and Richard Gray Gallogly, alleged slayers of Willard Smith and S. H. Meeks, will be put on the calendar for the early part of January, as this case was sidetracked in order to allow defense attorneys to participate in the Adair case at Gainesville. The trial of Clinton S. Carnes, who is under numerous indictments for embezzlement from the Baptist Home Mission board while treasurer of that body, also is regarded as a virtual certainty for a place on the early January calendar.

Thomas and Moore.

Judge E. D. Thomas will preside in the first criminal division and Judge Virlyn B. Moore in the second criminal division of Fulton superior court during January and February, while Judge E. E. Pomeroy will sit on the motions division. Judges John D. Humphries and G. H. Howard will preside in the civil divisions.

Cases of unusual significance will crowd the calendar of the criminal division just after the holiday session, it is indicated. Harsh, Gallogly and Shippey are awaiting trial for murder, while Carnes is to be tried for embezzlement. And if the slayer of R. M. Brandon, undertaker, is captured in the next few days, it is likely that this case also will figure in the January or early February sessions.

Uncle Believes Plea.

J. K. Shippey, uncle of the indicted slayer of Davis, Saturday scouted the idea that there could be anything but "defense of his home" in Shippey's motive for killing Davis. "I believe firmly in my nephew's statement that he slew Davis because Davis had wrecked his home," the uncle said.

Shippey's uncle said that he had not heard of any dispute between Davis and Shippey which might have given rise to another motive, and that he understood that when Shippey turned the automobile bought from Davis' company back to the company because he was unable to meet the payments the financial matter had been fairly settled between the parties.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Shippey, Sr., parents of the defendant, visited their son Saturday in Fulton Tower to cooperate with plans for the defense. Mr. and Mrs. Shippey spent Friday night with J. K. Shippey, and will return today to their home at Jones Cross Roads, Harris county.

Shippey's uncle said that his nephew had two reasons for returning the car to the Hall Davis company: one, that he was unable to meet the payments, and the second, to put a stop to all business relations with Davis in the hope that it would end all dealings between Davis and the Shippeys, in an effort to avoid trouble.

Judge W. W. Tindall, attorney for Shippey, Saturday said that he had refused the offer of an Augusta attorney to aid in Shippey's defense free of charge. The out-of-town lawyer called on Judge Tindall following a conference with Shippey Friday afternoon at Fulton Tower, it was said. Shippey's uncle said that he would discuss the matter of employing additional counsel with Judge Tindall, but that at present Judge Tindall is the only attorney connected with the case.

Davis was slain Thursday morning when he kept an appointment with Shippey at the place of Shippey's employment, the Rogers wholesale grocery warehouse, on Whitehall street, according to police. Shippey is said to have walked up to Davis' car, firing five bullets into Davis' head at point blank range. The slayer then went to the police station and surrendered, stating to police that he shot Davis because Davis "broke up" his home.

Shippey Declines to Talk.

If W. L. Shippey knows anything new about his case, he is keeping it to himself. Messages sent in to Shippey's cell Saturday night by reporters asking to see him proved to be in vain, for the slayer sent word out by the inside jailor that he appreciated the interest of the newspapermen but had nothing to say.

Further messages relayed by the inside jailor brought out the same reply: Shippey did not want to see newspapermen. He had nothing to add to his statements to police, in spite of the persistence of the reporters that there had been important developments in the case.

"Tell him we've just got to see him," the jailor was instructed. "It's no use," the jailer replied, "he won't see anybody but his lawyer, relatives and close friends."

Many Noted Prisoners.

One condemned white murderer and several men convicted of murder whose sentences have been stayed by appeals to the state supreme court are in Fulton Tower. One of the convicted men, Fred Fair, whose appeal was recently argued before the state supreme court, is a cellmate of Shippey.

R. H. Sheppard, the doomed murderer, is scheduled to die on December 19. Sheppard was convicted twice on a charge of murdering Homery Fowler with an ax, and recently was re-sentenced to death by Judge E. D. Thomas. Fred Fair was convicted for the slaying of Patrolman J. E. McDaniel.

Two of the white men in murder cases are "foreign prisoners" at the tower. One is Wash Smith, from Banks county, and the other is George Wylie, alias Buster McElwaney, from Campbell county. Tom King, of Butts county, negro, is also held in the tower for safe keeping in a murder case.

Two Appeals Pending.

Tower prisoners whose appeals in murder cases are pending before the state supreme court include Ed Capers and Will George, both negroes.

Among those awaiting trial on murder charges are George R. Harsh and Richard Gray Gallogly, alleged slayers of Willard Smith and S. H. Meeks, R. L. Weaver, alleged slayer of Tom C. Davis, and Abdon Bradley, alleged slayer of J. L. Simmons.

SARGON IS REVELATION TO PEOPLE OF ATLANTA

FATHER AND SON'S LONG SUFFERING ENDED BY SARGON

Atlantan Declares He Could Have Saved Much Money and Suffering If He Had Known of It Years Ago.

"If I had only been able to get Sargon years ago I could have saved myself lots of money and suffering.

"I took Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills for a bad case of stomach trouble. My case was diagnosed as nervous indigestion, and since 1914 I have not known what it was to sit down at the table and enjoy a good meal. I almost had to starve myself to death dieting, and then everything I ate would disagree with me and cause me the worst kind of suffering and distress. My food simply would not digest, and gas would form on my stomach, and I am telling you that it was so bad it would affect my heart and I thought I had serious heart trouble. I would be in such misery that I would have to get up and take something to give me relief. After going through a night like this I was always tired and sick when morning came, and was in a worst condition than when I went to bed the night before. I did not feel like doing a day's work. It was an effort to pull myself out of bed and try to make a day of it. I lost lots of weight, and when I began the Sargon treatment I was thinner than I had been since I was a boy.

"Stomach Like New."

"I was constipated to such an extent that I had to take a laxative every night. My head ached most of the time and I would have dizzy spells and a bad taste in my mouth, but there is no need of suffering from constipation when you can get Sargon Soft Mass Pills. One bottle of these Pills have done more for me than all the laxative medicines I have used in the past 10 years. I am now normal and Sargon Pills have done the work without griping or making me sick.

"My stomach is like new. I am eating things now that used to double me in a knot. My appetite is fine and I enjoy my meals. I go to sleep by the time I get in bed and get up feeling fit for a day's work.

"I have given my son, LeRoy, age 14, Sargon and it has done him so much good we are going to keep this medicine in our home for a household remedy.

"I have been telling the boys down at the Southern Transfer Yards about this medicine, and several of them are trying it since they have seen how it has helped me."

The above statement was made by C. S. Barnes, who resides with his family on Route 53, Box 220, Atlanta. Mr. Barnes is 41 years of age, married and the father of six children. He is well known and highly respected among his friends and acquaintances.

ATLANTA OFFICER PRAISES SARGON

Feels Like It Was Made Specially for His Case; Believes It Prevented Complete Breakdown.

"I was on the verge of a complete nervous and physical breakdown and it was one of the luckiest days of my life when I decided to try Sargon for my trouble.

"I consider what this medicine has done for me to be worth more than a fortune. I was awfully run down when I began taking Sargon. My nerves were on edge and I was just dragging through life. The life of a policeman is hard enough when one is in good health and feeling his best, and I tell you I have seen the time when it was an effort for me to pull through the day. I would go home so tired at night that I did not want to move. I did not want to go anywhere—did not have any energy at all.

Hundred Per Cent Better.

"I suffered a great deal with my back and kidneys. At times I felt like my back would break in two. I don't know what it is, but there is something about Sargon that does the work. Today I am 100 per cent better than I was when I began the treatment. It just seems like Sargon was made specially for m, case, and I honestly believe that it has prevented a complete breakdown. I can go out on my beat now feeling fine, full of pep and energy. My nerves are fine and it makes no difference how heavy the traffic gets I am able to take care of it. The whole day's work does not tire me so much now as an hour used to. I have a fine appetite and it is no trouble to digest everything I eat.

"Yes, sir, I am glad to say my health is being restored and I want to tell everybody about Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills."

Almost everybody in Atlanta knows Officer W. A. McKinney, who is a familiar figure daily, as he directs the complex streams of traffic at Peachtree street and Ponce de Leon avenue. Officer McKinney volunteered the above remarkable statement to the Sargon representative and is one of many well-known Atlanta people who have put Sargon to the test and found new health and vigor as a result.

Mass of Evidence Given by Atlanta People Fully Corroborates Claims Made for New Scientific Formula; Health-Giving Ingredients Based Soundly on Latest Findings of Medical Science.

Sargon was introduced in Atlanta Monday, November 26. Today, just three weeks later, it stands pre-eminent in the field of proprietary medicines in this city. Thousands are using it with the most astonishing and gratifying results and it is now a foregone conclusion that the phenomenal and unprecedented success that Sargon has achieved in scores of other cities will be repeated in Atlanta.

Reports pouring in to leading druggists daily tell of the amazing powers of this new and epoch-making formula. This mass of evidence, given by Atlanta people, fully verifies the claims of science that good health is largely maintained by the proper functioning of certain organs and fluids of the body which may be stimulated and invigorated by the health-giving ingredients contained in Sargon.

Not only in Atlanta, but in scores of other cities and towns throughout Georgia, Sargon is fulfilling its great mission.

The Sargon representative can be seen at Jacobs' main store, 6 and 8 Marietta street, where sufferers throng daily to hear more of this new revolutionary formula.

HAPPIEST WOMAN IN ATLANTA, SAYS MRS. J. M. BALES

"When I Tell You All Sargon Has Done for Me, People Will Not Believe It Possible," She Says.

"When I tell you what Sargon did for me, some folks are not going to believe it, but I can't help it. It's every word the truth. I could not possibly expect more from a medicine. Why, I had not been taking Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills any time before I know I had found the right medicine at last.

"Yes, others helped me by telling what Sargon did for them and now I want to help somebody else by telling what it has done for me. I think I can say I had the worst case of indigestion in Atlanta. In half an hour after eating I would be so sick I would have to go to bed. My stomach was in such condition that I could not digest solid food. After each meal my stomach would be as sour as vinegar. I could not eat solid food. Anything with acid or grease would make me sick. I could not eat meat, potatoes, onions and such foods. I had to live on light foods and milk.

Worst At Night.

"My worst time was at night. I would go to bed tired and try to sleep but there was no rest for me. I was so nervous, weak and trembly I could not close my eyes. I would have some kind of smothering spells and would have to get up and sit in a chair and be propped up in the bed. At times the gas on my stomach would be so bad it would almost choke me to death. I would get frightened and my heart would almost jump out. I went from bad to worse until I began taking the Sargon treatment and three months before I was too weak to do my housework. It would tire me out just to sweep the floor. Only half an hour's work would tire me out more than a whole day's work does now since taking Sargon.

"Then to make it worse, I was suffering all the time from constipation. My head ached all the time. I had bad dizzy spells and dark spots would form before my eyes. I had a bad breath and my tongue was always coated. I had to be taking some kind of strong laxative medicine most of the time. I also had brown spots on my face and arms.

Grateful to Sargon.

"I had lost my taste for food—nothing seemed to taste right. Things I used to enjoy would not agree with me. I have had to deny myself from eating so long I was nothing but skin and bones and did not know which way to turn for relief. A few days ago I began to read about Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills. I certainly am grateful for these wonderful medicines, for they have done so much for me. I have already stopped dieting and gone to eating anything I want and everything agrees with me splendidly. I never have an ache or a pain. Sargon is the best medicine I have ever used—it will do all that is claimed for it. I am the happiest woman in Atlanta today. Sargon has given me a new lease on life. My nerves are quiet now and I am sleeping as soundly as a child. I can't sit down to the table without feeling grateful for Sargon for relieving me of that awful stomach trouble of three years' standing.

"The Sargon Soft Mass Pills are the best medicine I have found for constipation, and for the first time in years my elimination has become regular and normal."

The above statement was made by Mrs. J. M. Bales, well-known Atlanta woman, who resides at 1007 Howell Mill road. Mrs. Bales, the mother of two children, is a member of the Baptist church and is a highly-respected member of her community, where she has lived for many years.

'IT PUT ME RIGHT BACK ON MY FEET,' SAYS W. D. DALTON

Railroad Man Now Knows What It Is To Enjoy Life and Good Health for First Time in Six Months.

"Yes, sir, you can say for me that Sargon is 100 per cent. I needed an all-round building up and Sargon did that very thing for me. I could not expect more from a medicine. I know now what it is to enjoy life and good health for the first time in six months, and my enthusiasm for Sargon is unbounded.

"I have been a fireman for 12 years and some people think a railroader's life is a healthy life, but they are all wrong. I do believe there is more chronic illness among trainmen than any other class of working men. But there is no longer an excuse for this—now that they can get Sargon. My case is a fair example of conditions that exist among the railroad men. I was never so sick I could not make my run, but I hadn't felt good in several months. I knew all along I needed some good tonic to put me back on my feet, but I was at a loss to know what to buy.

"I suffered daily from constipation and all of its many ailments, such as headaches and that let-down feeling that always has you tired out before your day's work has begun. My entire system was all shot to pieces. Why, I could not ever enjoy my meals. I suffered from chronic indigestion—gas on my stomach, and nothing helped me until I got Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills.

Like a New Man.

"I tell you it is nothing short of a miracle how this treatment has relieved me of chronic stomach trouble.

"Sargon Soft Mass Pills have proven to be the best laxative I have ever used. They have completely relieved me of constipation and corrected that condition in short order.

"Just as soon as I began taking the Sargon treatment I said 'I have found the medicine I needed for my trouble.' I feel just like I was made all over again since taking this medicine. My indigestion is a thing of the past and my entire system seems to be in perfect order. I am only too glad to say a word for such a wonderful medicine. I am telling all my friends to use this good medicine. It will keep them in trim for their work."

Mr. W. B. Dalton, who related the foregoing remarkable experience to the Sargon representative, is a fireman on the Southern railroad, where he has worked for the past twelve years. He is also well known in labor circles, being an active member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers. Mr. Dalton is 35 years old, married and the father of one child. He lives with his family on Route 53, Atlanta.

Atlanta Youth Had Been Sick Most of His Life

Remarkable Recovery Talk of Entire Neighborhood—Happy Father and Mother Say They Will Always Be Grateful.

"What has convinced me that Sargon is the best medicine for children is what it has done for my son, LeRoy.

"Sargon had done so much for me that I decided to give LeRoy the treatment—he has been sick most all of his life. He never wanted to eat. He always wanted to stay in bed or sit around and always complained of his stomach hurting. We have been treating him for indigestion for three years. Nothing he ate seemed to agree with him and he complained most of the time.

"His kidneys were out of order also. We have spent all we had on medicines for him. He used to have to get up three or four times every night. His color was bad and he suffered from constipation. His mother and I used to have a time giving him oil and salts, but after what Sargon did for me I was convinced that it was the medicine for LeRoy.

Now Romps All Day.

"LeRoy is just like a different child. He romps about all day. His stomach doesn't trouble him one bit since he began taking Sargon, and instead of eating half of one biscuit, he eats a hearty meal now and goes out-of-doors full of pep, where he used to drag about, and if he went out to play he soon came back feeling bad. Since taking Sargon his kidneys are as normal as any child's and he doesn't have to get up one time during the night.

"Sargon Soft Mass Pills have relieved him of constipation, and today I can't realize he is the same child. He is gaining every day. This medicine has proven to be different from anything I have ever seen, and we are so happy over what it has done for our son that we are glad to give this statement.

"I am telling all my neighbors to get Sargon as we had looked so long for something to help LeRoy that we just want to let others know how wonderful Sargon is."

The above statement was made by C. S. Barnes, who relates his own remarkable experience with Sargon in another column on this page. This is just one of many instances throughout America where two or more people in the same family have been restored to health through the use of this new revolutionary formula.

Sargon can be obtained from the Jacobs' Pharmacy Company stores all over Atlanta. A special representative of the Sargon Laboratories can be seen at Jacobs' main store, 6 and 8 Marietta street, where he will gladly explain the therapeutic action of Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills to all who are interested.—(adv.)

Newnan Mill Makes Fine Worsted For Suits Featured by Eiseman's

A view of the weaving room of the National Dixie mill at Newnan, whose busy looms now are producing 1,600 yards of fine worsted per day.

Georgia's ever-growing importance as a manufacturing state still further is emphasized.

In the past few years plants have come to this state to take advantage of its many resources to turn out cotton goods, towels, hosiery, automobile tires, blankets, furniture and a wide assortment of commodities.

Now it's Georgia-made suits for men—suits of the softest and finest worsted, woven on Georgia looms by Georgia workers and sold by a Georgia store to Georgians.

The first of the new suits made in this state now are on display at Eiseman's, veteran Atlanta men's store, the worsted of which they are made being turned out from the looms of the National Dixie mills at Newnan, Georgia.

Newnan Mill Inspected.

An Atlanta party last week took a trip to the Newnan mill, first in Georgia to produce worsted. In the party that inspected the plant were Morris Eiseman, of the Eiseman store, who conceived the idea of featuring a Georgia-made suit called "the Georgian." Other officials of Eiseman's and advertising experts were along to see the home of this new suit and to get a glimpse of its surroundings.

In Newnan, the party were guests of F. G. Murch, head of the International Worsted mills of Methuen, Mass., and George Carson, manager of the Newnan mill and its designer and chief factotum. The Georgia plant is a branch of the mighty International organization, and Mr. Murch and Mr. Carson made no secret of the fact that it is here as an experiment, with every probability that eventually Newnan will be the site of the entire International mill group.

"Water power is plentiful here," they pointed out. "The community is hospitable to us; labor is intelligent, Anglo-Saxon and sincere. We come here to see if it would not be a good idea to gradually increase the Georgia mill until it will comprise all our looms. The experiment, after 18 months, can be said to be a complete success."

Starting with only a few looms in 1927, the Newnan plant now has 45 looms and employes 87 people with a payroll of $1,500 a week. The plant now is turning out 1,600 yards of worsted a day, with a maximum capacity a little short of 2,500. The product is of the finest quality, being made in two grades of both Australian and American wool.

Modern Equipment.

The mill looms are of the latest and most modern type, as is all the equipment of the small but model Georgia plant. It now is housed in a big building near the center of Newnan, but eventually there is expected to be a big building program that will put the mill's home on a parity of modernness with its appointments.

"The Georgian," the new suit made of home-woven worsted which Eiseman's is featuring, is tailored by one of Baltimore's best-known tailoring concerns, Mr. Eiseman stated. Mr. Carson, who for 28 years has been an international figure in woolen mill circles, designs patterns exclusively for Eiseman's and every cooperation is supplied by the mill to make the new suits a great success.

"We feel that Georgians will be interested in this new home product," Morris Eiseman stated, and we cordially invite all our friends to call at the store and inspect it. We feel proud to sponsor such a splendid product here and unhesitatingly recommend it."

An interesting display of wool in its various stages, together with pictures showing the various operations involved in manufacturing worsted, now are being shown at the Eiseman store and are attracting wide attention among passersby.

Frances Porter, In U. S., Boards Train for North

Key West, Fla., December 8.—(AP) Miss Frances Porter, former show girl, who was refused permission to land in Cuba after C. P. Whitehead, wealthy Atlantan, filed a charge of assault against her on their arrival at Havana aboard his yacht, cleared the customs house here last night and boarded a train for the north.

The young woman arrived aboard Whitehead's yacht, the Malvern, which will return to Havana tomorrow afternoon to pick up its owner who has been reported ill in a hotel there.

Whitehead charged that Miss Porter stuck him with pins and hit him over the head with a shoe. She boarded his yacht in Jacksonville about a month ago.

On leaving Havana, the young woman was quoted as having said she would hurry to Washington after landing in the United States and would place her case before the "proper authorities."

Her destination on taking the train here at 6:30 o'clock last night could not be learned. She boarded a fast train, operating between Key West and New York, via Jacksonville, Savannah and Washington.

The yacht belongs to C. P. Whitehead, wealthy Atlantan, who on arrival in Havana a few days ago filed charges of assault against Miss Porter who, he charged, stuck him with pins and kicked him.

Whitehead was said to be ill in Havana.

MANY PROMINENT PEOPLE ON OCEAN PASSENGER LISTS

New York, December 8.—(AP)—European-bound liners today carried many noted figures, most of them hurrying home for Christmas.

Aboard the liner Majestic were the Infante Don Alfonso, cousin of the king of Spain; John McCormack, the tenor, and Marjorie and Isabelle Meuser, nine and ten years, respectively, of Chicago, who are being taken to the home of their great-aunt, the Marchioness of Huntly, in England.

Sailing shortly after the Majestic this morning was the Ile de France, carrying Lieutenant Commander George O. Noville, one of Byrd's aides on the trans-Atlantic flight of the America; John Erskine, Columbia professor and noted author; O. O. McIntyre, columnist; Count and Countess Carl Bernadotte and Count and Countess Nils Wachtmeister, who came here for the wedding of Count Folke Bernadotte to Miss Estelle Manville, American heiress.

Noville was bound for a two-month air tour of Europe. He recently announced that he would be one of the flight officers aboard the British dirigible R-100 on her projected flight to the United States.

CALIFORNIAN DIES OF HURT RECEIVED BY STRAY BULLET

Reno, Nev., December 8.—(AP)—Elmer S. Melke, 52, of Berkeley, Calif., zone manager of operations for the Frigidaire corporation for Nevada, and California, died today from a gunshot would received last night when a stay bullet struck him as he was waiting to board a train at the Southern Pacific station.

The bullet was one fired in a gun fight between a Reno police officer and a man who attempted to hold up a filling station.

H. Mercer, 22, was arrested this morning, and police said he confessed that he took part in the shooting. He was wounded in the left ankle.

OIL CONTRACTS AGAIN TO SURFACE IN SENATE

Committee Calls West and Work To Report Salt Creek Contracts.

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—Oil rose to the surface in the senate today to retake the major place it has occupied since the Teapot Dome disclosures.

The senate public lands committee decided to go into the Salt Creek Royalty Oil contracts held until recently by Harry F. Sinclair and in doing so it asked that Roy O. West, present secretary of the interior, and Hubert Work, former secretary and now republican national chairman, appear next week for questioning. Mr. West's nomination is before the committee. The Salt Creek contract, later declared invalid, was renewed by Work while he was in office, but Senator Walsh, of Montana, prosecutor of the oil inquiry, wanted to know if Mr. West had any knowledge of the situation.

The house rested today, after its first week of work, having during that time passed one of the appropriation bills, that for the treasury and post-office departments, carrying more than a billion dollars. The senate, however, worked along with the Boulder dam bill, cheered at the outset by a prediction of Senator Oddie, Nevada, that California and Arizona would get together on the question of water distribution involved in the project.

On the senate side of the capitol, with the exception of the public lands committee, there was little activity. A few house committees were in session and one of them, the rules committee, voted to recommend privileged status to measures providing for settlement of the Greek and Austrian debts, and appointment of a congressional committee to attend the Wright Brothers' ceremonies at Kitty Hawk, N. C., on December 17.

All three proposals probably will be taken up Monday on the floor. The rules committee allotted three hours for general debate on the Greek debt and one and a half hours for debate on the Austrian obligation.

A fight on the Greek debt is in prospect, Representative Garrett, of Tennessee, the democratic floor leader, announcing today he would join Representative Crisp, democrat, Georgia, in opposing the proposed settlement. Crisp was a member of the American debt commission and as a member of the house ways and means committee filed a minority report opposing the settlement at the last session.

JAIME DEL RIO FUNERAL PLANNED MONDAY MORNING

Berlin, December 8.—(AP)—Funeral services will be held Monday morning at the Catholic Matthias cemetery for Jaime Martinez del Rio, Mexican banker and former husband of Dolores del Rio, film actress. His body will be entombed there six months and then sent to Mexico.

Dolores del Rio sent this telegram to Curtis Melnitz, Berlin representative of United Artists: "Please purchase an abundance of flowers including a wreath bearing the inscription: 'My Beloved'."

MORROW WILLING TO KEEP MEXICAN AMBASSADOR JOB

St. Louis, December 8:—(AP)—Dwight Morrow, United States ambassador to Mexico, who passed through here last night en route from Mexico City to his home at Englewood, N. J., said he would be willing to go back to Mexico as ambassador after next March 4, if reappointed. He added he had no understanding on this point with President-elect Hoover.

31 ARRESTS ORDERED IN ELECTION FRAUDS

Grand Jury at Cleveland Convinced Fraud and Error Rampant.

Cleveland, December 8.—(AP)—Another chapter in the story of frauds in the August primary election in Cuyahoga county was written today as capiases for the arrest of 31 persons named in 41 secret indictments returned by a special county grand jury were issued.

Charges contained in the indictments are principally ballot box stuffing, illegal handling of absent voters ballots, erasures and alterations, flagrant errors in making the count and other irregularities. The grand jury which started its work September 24, declared that the investigation is incomplete and recommended that further inquiry be made at the next term of court.

"A shocking recklessness and carelessness in the handling of the elections in Cuyahoga county, both in the booths and at the board of elections, has been disclosed," said the jury's report. "We are thoroughly convinced that both fraud and error were prevalent."

Election officials and workers were held solely to blame for instances of "juggling" the count in certain precincts. The present board of elections which was appointed a few days before the November 6 election following the removal of the old board and some of its employees, was not criticized by the investigators. The grand jury in its first report recommended the removal of all but one member of the old board for nonfeasance. Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown ordered this member, Mrs. Bernice S. Pyke, democratic national committeewoman from Ohio, removed also. He said she was legally guilty in not reporting existing conditions to him.

The grand jury's report discloses the use of dead men's names on poll books with instances of wholesale ballot box stuffing. Ballots were sometimes torn from the pad by the fistfull and folded direct into the ballot bag together, the report says.

It charges that in more than 200 precincts a larger number of votes than there were voters was reported.

Herrick Offer To Raise U. S. Flag Told by Poincare

Paris, December 8.—(AP)—How ambassador Herrick offered to raise the American flag over the Louvre and other famous museums and buildings containing treasures and art when it was feared that Paris would be captured by the Germans in September, 1914, is told by Premier Poincare in the fifth volume of his wartime memoirs which have just been published.

Ambassador Herrick had a few days previously communicated President Wilson's offer to serve as intermediary for peace, he then was invited to the Elysee palace on September 2 to receive M. Poincare's thanks for all the good-will he had shown to France.

"I asked my friend, Mr. Herrick, who still exercises the functions of ambassador of the United States, to come and have a talk with me," the former premier's notes say, "I was anxious to tell him how much I regretted to see him leave his post because I knew him as a sincere and faithful friend of France.

"I wanted to thank him for the devotion with which he defended the right of man before the world.

"He arrived visibly under grent emotion, with drawn features under his handsome head of curly hair. He told me he intended, if our government left Paris, to remain in the capital until the end of his mission and that Mr. Bryan (then secretary of state) had given him full liberty on that point. Herrick would invoke the authority of his country and if need be the star-spangled banner to protect the monuments and museums.

"Mr. Herrick had resolved to do the impossible to save the inhabitants from vexations and pillage. He had tears in his eyes while speaking. I assured him France would not lay down her arms, come what may, before gaining the victory."

Howard Student Cleared in Death Case in Birmingham

Birmingham, Ala., December 8.—(AP) C. H. Westbrook, Howard college junior, was exonerated today of a manslaughter charge which grew out of the slaying November 22 of Montress Freeman, Birmingham-Southern freshman. Action of the Jefferson county grand jury yesterday in returning a "no" bill in the case automatically removed all charges aganist the youth, County Solicitor George Lewis Bailes said today.

Westbrook, prior to the grand jury investigation, had been under $1,000 bond a charge of second degree manslaughter.

The killing of Freeman was attributed by officials to student rivalry between the two colleges.

It is only sensible . . .

Of course it is essential to close the tiny pores of your face and throat after using a cleansing or an emollient cream, or else you leave them open to the coarsening attacks of dust andexposure. Dorothy Gray's Orange Flower Skin Tonic is a mild astringent which should always be patted on freely, in place of water, as the last step in your morning facial treatment, just before you apply your finishing preparations and powder.

Orange Flower Skin Tonic gently closes the pores and stimulates the skin, leaving it protected, refreshed and cleanly cool.

BUDGET OF $220,792 FOR LIBRARY SOUGHT

Salary Hikes in Several Departments Asked by Miss Barker.

City council will be asked to appropriate $220,792 for the Carnegie library in 1929, according to a tentative budget prepared Saturday by Miss Tommie Dora Barker, librarian.

Included in the list of additions are $7,020 for increases in salaries and $6,480 for additional help. Salary increases in accordance with the finance sheet Miss Barker prepared provide for a $90 increase monthly for the librarian; $35 monthly for the assistant; $30 monthly for three department heads, with the exception of the children's department, in which the increase is only $30, and $10 monthly for six branch librarians.

Proposed Scale.

The proposed new scale would provide $300 monthly for the librarian; $210 for the assistant; and $185 for the four department heads for whom raises are asked, and $150 monthly for the branch librarians. Salary of the board of review secretary also would be increased from $100 to $150 monthly, thus pushing the total increases to $585 a month.

Assistants in the charge book department, a first assistint in the lending and another in the children's department and a cleaner for the main library, at salaries set, respectively, at $175, $150, $150 a month, and at $15 a week are included in the list of additional help.

Pay of Librarians.

Miss Barker released a list of comparative figures designed to show the comparative salaries paid the chief librarian in southern cities. It follows:

CITY—	Salary	Popu.
Atlanta	$3,000	255,110
Birmingham	4,000	222,400
Charlotte, N. C.	3,000	82,100
Greenville, S. C.	3,000	23,127
Houston, Texas	3,500	175,000
Jacksonville, Fla.	4,000	140,700
Knoxville, Tenn.	3,600	105,400
Memphis, Tenn.	5,300	190,200
Nashville, Tenn.	4,500	139,600
Orlando, Fla.	3,000	9,282
Savannah, Ga.	3,000	99,900

At the same time, Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, related how children of the fifth and sixth grades of the schools are given a course in the use of the library and reference departments through the cooperation of Miss Barker and Miss Mary Frances Cox, of the department. The students are assigned to library duty for one hour each semester. Miss Josie Slocumb, elementary supervisor, is assisting Miss Mary Postell, superintendent of elementary schools, in arranging the schedules for this work, which officials declare is yielding excellent results.

World's Health Is Favorable, Cummings Says

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—Health conditions were declared generally favorable throughout the world during the fiscal year, 1928, in the annual report of Surgeon General H. S. Cummings, submitted today to congress.

Importation of any quarantinable disease during the year was prevented, the report said, as a result of the public health service's examination of prospective immigrants abroad, its inspection of vessels, passengers and seamen, and its medical examination of alien passengers and seamen arriving at domestic and insular ports.

Yellow fever, plague, cholera and other diseases were said to be more or less prevalent in endemic localities throughout the world.

Pointing to nearly 7,000 deaths from whooping cough in 42 states during 1927, the surgeon general cautioned this was not a harmless disease as many regarded it. Measles caused nearly 4,000 deaths in 41 states—little more than half of the number from this disease.

During the preceding year, an increase in deaths from pellagra was reported in the lower Mississippi valley region, consequent upon unfavorable industrial and economic conditions following the flood.

130-POUND OFFICER DOWNS 203-POUND "PRACTICAL JOKER"

New York, December 8.—(AP)—John Jaslowski is a six-foot longshoreman who weighs 203 pounds and is addicted to practical jokes. He tried one of them on today, but it didn't go over so well.

John telephoned the Greenpoint police station that he had been robbed of $300 and asked for a policeman. Patrolman William Real, five feet seven, and weighing 130 pounds, responded.

"Ha, ha," shouted John. "I wasn't robbed. The only reason I phoned was to get a policeman here so I could beat him up." With that he made a swing at the policeman, who ducked and countered with a left between the eyes that sent John down. Arrainged in police court, John was sentenced to jail for three days. Magistrate Folwell told Real he was "one of the many thousands of policemen of whom New York was proud."

Wreckage Believed Part of Ill-Fated Trans-Ocean Plane

Akron, Ohio, December 8.—(AP)—Only the type of tread on a tire washed ashore with the undercarriage of an airplane off the coast of Ireland near Donegal, prevented its positive identification tonight as part of the ship in which Capt. Walter Hinchliffe and the Hon. Elsie MacKay lost their lives in an attempted flight across the Atlantic last March.

Officials of the B. F. Goodrich company here believed the tire belonged to the ill-fated Stinson-Detroiter "Endeavour." It was of the same size, they said, and if the tire found off the Irish coast is of the "non-skid" tread, there can be no doubt but what it was fitted on the "Endeavour."

A further check of records and with Irish authorities was started in the hope of establishing positive identification.

SIXTH DISTRICT P.-T. ASSOCIATION NAMES TWO MACON WOMEN

Macon, Ga., December 8.—(AP)—Mrs. L. C. Rader was appointed chairman of publicity for the Sixth District Parent-Teacher association, and Mrs. H. D. Cutter was named chairman of speakers' directory, at the eighth annual convention of the district held here today. Both are from Macon. About 105 delegates from eleven Georgia towns were present at the convention.

Mrs. R. V. Lassiter, recording secreary of the district, and Mrs. Piercy Chestney, also of Macon, were chosen life members of the Georgia congress of Parents and Teachers.

During the sessions of the one-day convention it was brought out that the sixth district has a larger number of new associations than any other district in the state.

Addresses of Mrs. R. H. Hankinson, president of the district; Mrs. J. D. Miller, state president, and Miss Lucile Bowden, acting third vice president of the district, were outstanding features of the morning session.

The only address of the afternoon session was that of Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones, vice president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, who spoke briefly on health.

DAVIS TO LAY STONE FOR AERIAL MEMORIAL

Celebration To Honor 25th Anniversary of First Flight by Wrights.

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—Secretary of War Davis will lay the cornerstone for the National Memorial to be erected at Killdevil Hill, near Kitty Hawk, N. C., Monday, December 17, to commemorate the first flight in an airplane by Orville and Wilbur Wright.

The cornerstone will be laid at the celebration in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the first successful flight, at which Orville, the surviving brother, will be the honor guest.

Many notables will attend the event, including delegates to the international civil aeronautic conference, probably a congressional committee, famous aviators and air enthusiasts, and Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

Two sets of exercises are scheduled, Representative Warren, democrat, North Carolina, in whose district the historic spot is located, announced today for the Killdevil Hill Memorial association, under whose auspices the event was arranged.

The first exercises will open in the morning on the top of Killdevil Hill, with Assistant Secretary of War F. Trubee Davison for aeronautics, in charge. Governor Angus W. McLean, of North Carolina, will welcome the visitors and Representative Warren will deliver an address about the Wrights' achievement.

Secretary Davis will lay the cornerstone for a tower, one of three units of the memorial, which will include a new coast guard station at Kitty Hawk, and a bronze tablet.

The second exercise will be held on the exact spot from which the first airplane flight was launched, these to be under the supervision of the National Aeronautical association. W. O. Saunders, of Elizabeth City, N. C., president of the Killdevil Hill Memorial association, will deliver an address of welcome, and Captain W. J. Tate, of the coast guard, in whose yard the Wrights assembled their aircraft for the first flight, will relate the story of the flight.

Senator Bingham, republican, Connecticut, will deliver an address at the unveiling of the bronze tablet on a boulder.

The house rules committee today decided to give a resolution authorizing the attendance of a congressional committee privilege Monday and Warren said that he expected it to pass both houses in sufficient time for three senators and six representatives to attend the ceremony.

Cost of the memorial will amount to $150,000, of which $25,000 has been made available, Warren said.

JUDGE O'DOHERTY ESTATE $5,000,000, FRIENDS BELIEVE

Louisville, Ky., December 8.—(AP)—Friends of Judge Matthew O'Doherty, long a leader in Kentucky legal, business and church circles, today estimated his estate at as high as $5,000,000 following the announcement that his will was found when experts opened the safe in his office.

While terms of the will were not divulged, it was understood Mrs. O'Doherty received the bulk of the estate during her life.

Judge O'Doherty came to this country from Ireland when a youth. He died at his home here from a heart attack November 30.

Salvation Army Only Hope Of Poor Kiddies at Yuletide

Cadet Ethel Ludlow, daughter of the chaplain at the United States penitentiary here, with two of Atlanta's poor children whose only hope for Christmas this year rests with the arrival of Santa Claus via the Salvation Army.

The annual Christmas appeal of the Salvation Army will begin Monday for used clothing and toys which can be repaired and distributed to homes that face a cheerless Yuletide unless generous people intervene in Santa's behalf, it was announced Saturday by Captain Hugo Bloomberg, officer in charge of the social service center. A truck will be sent to collect bundles on call to Ivy 2224.

Families on the relief list of the Salvation Army include nearly 1,200 children, few of whom have even adequate clothing, and with no prospects of either clothing or toys except at the bounty of a real Santa Claus, army officers said.

Included among the number are widowed mothers who earn barely enough to provide food and shelter; fathers who have been helpless from serious accident or disease for months and some who are permanent invalids; families so large that the joint efforts of the father and mother can keep the door but insecurely shut against the ever-present wolf of hunger.

Toys will be repaired in the industrial home by old men, who find there an alternative for outright charity, and will be included in the baskets distributed annually by the Army, in cooperation with other organizations.

Captain Bloomberg stated that toys, would mean a great deal more to scores of children on the Army's lists if they were accompanied by warm clothing which would enable the youngster to play in comfort.

"It is often hard for the well-fed, snugly-housed and comfortably-clad people of a prosperous city to realize that there are people, and many of them, who actually haven't enough clothing to keep them warm in cold weather, he said. "The Army is hopeful that the Christmas spirit may move enough people to give up the things they don't really need so that at this season anyway, we will have enough to meet all the deserving requests that come to us."

MARINE SERGEANT IN NICARAGUA DIES BY BANDIT BULLET

Managua Nicaragua, December 8. (AP)—Another American marine has been killed in attempting to suppress banditry in northern Nicaragua.

Gunnery Sergeant Charles Williams, of Astoria, N. Y., was fatally wounded by a stray bullet when a marine patrol of which he was a member intercepted a band of marauders in the department of Neuva Segovia. The bandits had killed a defenseless peasant south of Ocotal.

A marine patrol under Captain Maurice G. Holmes of Pontotoc, Miss., intercepted the band between Ocotal and Telepahca.

The bandits were routed. A chance shot wounded Sergeant Williams in the head and he died an hour later. This was the first marine corps tragedy since August 6.

Marine headquarters announced today that banditry had not yet been completely wiped out in the northern area and that an intensive patrol had been in progress there since November 17. It was stated that rumors of early withdrawal of the marines were probably the greatest factor in keeping the marauders in the field.

LONE AMERICAN HURT IN COLUMBIAN STRIKE

No U.S. or British Employees Killed, Fruit Company Announces.

New York, December 8.—(AP)—The United Fruit company, whose banana plantations in Colombia have been affected by strikes in Magdalena province, announced today that reports to its offices here indicate that no British or American employees have been killed, although one American was slightly wounded.

M. C. O'Hearn, vice president of the company, said very few authoritative reports had been received because of destruction of the company's telephone communication lines with its plantations. Available reports were that some buildings had been burned, railroad bridges destroyed, and some damage done to plantations.

"Our reports indicate that the Colombian government has the situation under control," Mr. O'Hearn said. "We are convinced that only this prompt action by the government prevented great loss of life and possibly a serious internal crisis."

O'Hearn said the Colombian trouble was caused by persons who were neither employees of his company nor recognized representatives of an established body of laborers in the banana zone. The strike arose, he said, out of "recognized steps in the standard program of extreme radicals for weakening or destroying the forces of government throughout the world."

One of the company's steamers sailed from Santa Marta on Friday with a banana cargo, he said, and the company expects to resume regular movement of steamers and fruit at an early date.

CONVICT SUCCUMBS TO GUNSHOT WOUND IN ESCAPE EFFORT

Tampa, Fla., December 8.—(AP)—Bertrand J. Knowles, 23, said to be from Key West, died this afternoon in a hospital here as a result of a gunshot wound said to have been inflicted by a guard at a convict camp near here this morning. Knowles was said to have attempted to escape when the guard, John Hughes, fired, striking him in the left lung.

Knowles was sentenced Thursday last to serve a year on a charge of grand larceny, having pleaded guilty to the theft of some clothing from a local department store. Captain M. L. Fletcher, warden at the camp, stated Knowles was shot by Hughes when he attemnted to escape. He had been sent from the county jail to the convict camp yesterday.

Bogus Federal Man Sought; Huge Building Dream Fades

:: SELF-STYLED GOVERNMENT WORKER DISAPPEARS ::

Waycross, Ga., December 8.—(Special.)—Posing as a government engineer in charge of extensive surveys to be made in southeast Georgia, and with seeming credentials to support his story, a confidence man who gave his name as H. T. Holland has heaped charges upon his head in south Georgia and north Florida during the past week. Officers of the two states are making every effort today to locate him.

Holland, well dressed and the possessor of a roll of bills of large proportions, drifted into Waycross last Tuesday, coming from Brunswick on a bus. En route from Brunswick to Waycross, Holland became confidential with the driver of the bus, R. R. Bell, telling him of his proposed surveys to be made in Waycross territory. He went to Brunswick by mistake, he explained, finding after he reached the port city that his work was scheduled to start within three miles of Waycross, instead of in the Brunswick vicinity.

After reaching Waycross, Holland called Mr. Bell, the driver of the bus, and several other parties into a conference, explaining his work as a government engineer. He contemplated establishing a mammoth camp several miles from the city, where he would house a small army of workmen who would be employed in the survey work.

In the conference were R. R. Bell, C. F. Bell, J. F. Kohn, A. F. Horner and others, it is said. The automobile of C. F. Bell was engaged to do the "running around" and preliminary work about the city, and Mr. Bell, who had to go to Brunswick for the day, left the car in charge of Mr. Horner, telling him to use it as he saw fit in aiding Mr. Holland.

After securing a map of the county from the county surveyor and telling his men that a shipment of automobile trucks, instruments and provisions was being sent to Waycross by government officials, Holland went to the Hiers Planing mill and ordered a bill of lumber amounting to several hundred dollars, it is said. The lumber was delivered to the Woodard farm, several miles from Waycross, where the camp was to be erected.

Then Holland went to a local department store and bought a suit of clothes and other garments, giving a draft on the Fourth National bank, of Atlanta. He changed his clothes at the Phoenix hotel, where his old suit has been found. The draft proved to be "cold."

Six Waycross carpenters were employed and ordered to report early Tuesday to the proposed camp site on the Woodard farm, and it is understood that they reported as ordered, and spent a lonesome day in the woods waiting for Holland to show up.

After having supper Tuesday night, Holland invited all of his employees to be his dinner guests. He announced to Mr. Horner that he was suddenly called to Jacksonville. Mr. Horner, who was led to believe that Holland had made proper arrangements for the use of the Bell automobile, accompanied him to the Florida city, and from there they went to Tallahassee, Holland stating that he received a telegram in Jacksonville calling him on to the capital city.

By Friday Mr. Horner discovered that he had been deserted in Tallahassee with a garage bill and a hotel bill, incurred by Holland, against him personally. Mr. Horner arrived back in Waycross late Friday to find that things were in a sad state of affairs in his home town.

Several warrants have been sworn out against Holland. The lumber has been recovered by Hiers Planing mill. Several carpenters, one of whom quit his job to accept a position with the government survey, are sadder but wiser.

REVOLVER MAY SAVE ADA LE BOUEF, DREHER

Efforts for Hearing of Condemned Pair Centers Around Weapon.

New Orleans, La., December 8.—(AP) A blue steel pistol stood out today as an instrument that might save Ada Bonner Lebouef and Thomas E. Dreher from the hangman's noose for the murder of the woman's husband.

Around this weapon will center the efforts of counsel and friends to obtain a new hearing before the state board of pardons on December 17. Recently the board declined to recommend commutation to life imprisonment and Governor Long set January 5 as the date of execution.

Now a pistol has been brought forth accompanied by the story that it was the one James J. Lebouef used on the night he was slain in Lake Palourde. The weapon is in possession of Sheriff Charles Pecot, of St. Mary parish, who said it had four loaded cartridges and one empty shell. Two boys were reported to have found it in a six-foot channel near the lake while crabbing.

In what Mrs. Lebouef and Dr. Dreher said was the true story of the killing, as told yesterday in their cell to their lawyers and a newspaper man, they claimed it was thrown there by James Beadle, trapper, serving life at the Angola prison, and who Dr. Dreher charges killed Lebouef. This is the first time the pistol has figured in the case. Sheriff Pecot said it was found about four months ago, but its ownership has not been proved.

In their statement the condemned pair put the whole burden of the murder on the victim and Beadle. They denied that they had been intimate and declared that James Lebouef was driven insane by jealousy aroused by an anonymous letter. Both charged that Lebouef fired from his boat upon Dr. Dreher and Beadle as they paddled about in the darkness of the lake and that Beadle had answered the fire with both barrels of his shotgun, which he had taken along to shoot alligators. They went to the lake for a reconciliation at the invitation of James Lebouef, both said.

They did not tell of the killing, they said, for fear they would not be believed and would be charged with murder. Beadle, Dr. Dreher asserted, weighted the body with irons, slashed it and dropped it into the lake. Mrs. Lebouef had gone home when that was done, and he had sat in the boat, stiff with horror, he added. Dreher said Beadle admitted all of this before the trial, but after he had broken with him and Mrs. Lebouef, he declined to testify on these points. So far Beadle has refused to discuss the case at the prison farm.

With this new evidence, another attempt will be made to get the pardon board to recommend life imprisonment. A mass meeting has been called to determine if any organized citizens' support will be given the case.

Atlantans Inspect Giant Motor Sleeper Exhibited Here by Greyhound Bus Lines

Atlantans last week were given their first glimpse of the new de luxe road Pullman, one of the features of the service offered by Greyhound Lines, which recently absorbed the Dixie Safety Coach company's interests in Atlanta and the southeast.

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, Perry T. Knight and R. W. Woodruff, of the Georgia Public Service commission, and Alderman Robert F. Pennington, of the first ward, were among the city and state officials to give the new motor coach their official okay and pronounce it the most modern, best equipped and most beautiful ever seen in Georgia.

The machine is a Pullman on wheels. It is equipped to sleep nine passengers. There is a modern diner, a kitchen, bath with a shower, an observation compartment, electric fans, steam heat and every convenience for the passengers. A porter and steward are among the crew which mans it.

A total of 26 of the giant road coaches are being constructed for operation on the Greyhound lines. They will be finished in polished walnut with deep mohair upholstery, thus offering an interior of luxury and comfort. Lockers will provide ample baggage space inside the buses. The one on display in Atlanta was the same type which is now under construction.

Exhibited in Jacksonville.

Following the inspection in Atlanta where thousands viewed it, the automobile sleeper left for Jacksonville and intermediate cities. They will be placed into service in Georgia just as soon as road conditions permit, according to J. C. Steinmetz, southeastern division manager of the company.

S. C. Wall is in charge of the first official tour of the machine, and motion pictures were made of it here as it plied its way through Atlanta traffic.

Immediately after the Dixie coaches were absorbed by the Greyhound lines Atlanta was connected with practically every important city in the United States through the Greyhound and Pickwick lines hook-ups. The large fleet spreads a network of bus lines from coast to coast and from the Mexican border to Canada. It is the largest bus transportation system in the entire country.

Atlanta is the southern hub of the company, connection being had through the south's Gate City into Florida, to the east and westward. Some of the important cities which are thus linked are Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland, Indianapolis and Cincinnati. The line to New York will be opened about December 15.

Motor Travel Widespread.

"Few people realize the extent to which motor bus travel has grown in the last few years," says Mr. Steinmetz. "Our own system, the Greyhound lines, while one of the largest, is but one of many, yet it alone operates over 2,000,000 miles of bus travel per month during the busy season.

"This service is provided by an organization of nearly 5,000 people, and the buses are run on schedule time with almost the same efficiency and dependability as a railroad.

"The company takes every possible precaution to insure safety. All drivers are carefully selected, trained and bonded. They must pass and repass the most rigid tests. Every coach is thoroughly inspected before being permitted to leave on a trip. Engine, brakes, wheels, tires are all gone over by a corps of experts.

"These methods have borne fruit in the fact that over 2,000,000 passengers have been carried to date this year by the Greyhound lines without a single fatal accident to a passenger.

"Daily schedules are operated from Atlanta to all the points which the company serves and the system is reliable, economical and safe."

SOUTH CAROLINA PATRONAGE QUIZ SET FOR TUESDAY

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—Distribution of federal patronage in South Carolina will come up again for the attention of the senate committee investigating patronage at the resumption of its hearings on Tuesday.

Chairman Brookhart, of the committee, intends to present affidavit evidence at the Tuesday meeting which will be the first gathering of the committee since the national campaign. Reports from the postmaster-general and from the civil service commission also will be presented.

Senator Brookhart also will invite South Carolina members of congress to appear at the meeting. While particular attention will be given to that state, the committee also will receive further reports on the investigation it undertook in Georgia and Tennessee.

Requests for an inquiry into the disposition of postmasterships in Alabama are before the committee, but no decision has been reached in respect to an investigation in that state. Pending the outcome of court proceedings in Mississippi the committee intends to take no further action there either.

THIRTEEN RESCUED FROM PERU MINE; DEATH TOLL IS 27

Lima, Peru, December 8.—(AP)—Dispatches from Morococha telling of the rescue of 13 men from the Alejandria mine, flooded when a pond broke through the roof of another mine, state that the men were entombed for nine hours before they could be taken to safety. All thirteen were suffering greatly, but it was hoped that they would recover.

The ministry of public works yesterday announced the death total in the Campana mine where the roof collapsed as 27 and told briefly of the rescue of the 13 in the Alejandria mine.

A governmental mining expert today estimated that 265,000 tons of mud entered the various galleries of the mines. The question of responsibility for claims by the relatives of victims was brought up in the senate yesterday. The activity of the government in sending aid to the victims was praised.

The newspaper El Comercio said that troops sent from Lima to keep order had been ordered home because they were found unnecessary.

FATHER OF SANDINO ASKS SON TO QUIT

American Marine Commander Uses Parental Influence on Outlaw.

Managua, Nicaragua, December 8.—(AP)—Letters to Augustino Sandino asking him to abandon his struggle against the authorities have been delivered to him by his stepfather as part of the plan of Brigadier General Logan Feland to bring about pacification of the country. One letter was from Sandino's mother.

This was disclosed today, with the statement that replies were expected shortly. Previous efforts to talk matters over with Sandino or with a representative of the young leader who is classed variously as a bandit and as a rebel against tyranny had failed.

General Feland, who heads the marine forces in Nicaragua, believed that with the completion of the successful national election, to a large extent a liberal victory, and the obvious satisfaction of the general populace the time was ripe for an attempt to induce the outlaw to abandon his resistance.

Both the mother and stepfather of Sandino were known to hold friendship and respect for the marines. The mother always had opposed the violent career of her son. She therefore willingly wrote a letter urging her son to abandon his attitude. She herself desired to fly to San Rafael to start the letter on the journey to him, but illness presented. Her husband, Gregorio, acted for her, and carried also an authorization from Admiral Sellers and an expression of willingness to listen to whatever Sandino might have to say.

LIEUTENANT GILL TESTS ANTI-FREEZE LIQUID ON FLIGHT

Lieutenant Johnny Gill, widely-known southern air pilot, and L. J. Sauerborn, vice president and general manager of the United States Products corporation, Saturday began one of the most rigid tests ever made of an anti-freeze solution when they left Atlanta in 30-degree weather to give the product a trial from Dixie to Canada.

The compound is called Veet, and its sponsors claim it is the best compound yet developed for liquid-cooled motors. To prove the assertion they have devised the test by using it in a plane which Gill is flying from Birmingham, the home of the new product, to Canada.

They arrived in Atlanta Friday and continued the journey northward Saturday. Vett, it is claimed will not corrode, affect paint, varnish, duco or laquer. It is a liquid chemical which, when placed in radiators, will not freeze at a temperature less than 36 degrees F. below zero. Its boiling point is 240 degrees F. and is odorless.

The large plane being used on the test swooped down on Candler field Friday afternoon and attracted wide attention. The product is distributed locally by L. N. Campbell who has offices in the Glenn building.

Omaha Judge Bars Garnishment Writs Before January 1

Omaha, Neb., December 8.—(AP)—A moratorium on the writ of garnishment is Judge George Holmes' Christmas gift to the Omaha workman.

The Christmas season is no time, Judge Holmes believes, to garnishee a man's wages or replevin a man's furniture, so effective until January 1 no such writs will be issued in his court.

"I haven't the heart to take the pay envelope or the furniture away from a family at Christmas time," he said.

Permanent Body Planned By Democrats of County

Permanent organization of the Young Men's Democratic League of Fulton county to assist in obtaining efficiency, economy and wise administration of government, will take place at 12:30 o'clock Friday afternoon at a luncheon to be held at the Chamber of Commerce building, it was announced Saturday by Bond Almand, president.

Officers of the league for 1929 will be selected at the meeting and a tentative constitution embodying the principles of the organization will be submittrd to the membership.

Mr. Almand issued a blanket invitation to all men in Fulton county between 18 and 50 years of age to attend and to become members.

The league proposes to take a non-partisan interest in political and civic activities of the city and county, and formation of the permanent organization is the first step in performance of the purpose, according to Mr. Almand's statement.

Binns Vice President.

Carlton W. Binns, solicitor of the city criminal court, is vice president of the league at the present time, and Roy LeCraw, prominent Atlanta insurance man, is treasurer.

The foreword of the proposed constitution sets out that "everyone is bound to recognize the following facts:"

"Georgia is not keeping in step with her sister states and the other states of the union.

"There is inefficiency and waste in the administration of our state government.

"Our public institutions, such as schools and charities, are not meeting the demands of the children and wards of the state.

"Our agricultural interests have been so neglected that today thousands of farmers are bankrupt and many thousands of our farms abandoned.

"Our public highway building program has been so inadequate that we are far behind other states who have built more roads, and better roads, at less cost than our state.

Tax System Hit.

"That our present tax system, or its administration does not meet the demands of growing public needs.

"That partisan politics has been, and is, hampering the efficiency of local and state government."

Belief that the democratic party exists for the purpose of carrying into effect and promoting the principles and ideals of its founders, as illustrated in the public careers of Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland and Wilson; for the purpose of serving the people when in power, recognizing at all times that the thought of promoting better government for the common welfare, has led to the decision to perfect and keep in operation the league in this county.

To Name Committee.

In addition to the president, vice president and secretary and treasurer, there will be an executive committee of 12 members, appointed by the president for the year in which he serves. No member shall be eligible to any office in the league if he holds an elective or appointed position in the city, county, state or federal governments, if the proposed constitution is adopted.

A committee of three shall be named to investigate the city and another the state government to suggest changes in educational, road, agricultural, taxation and governmental administration departments if defects are found.

Another committee of three will furnish speakers to appear before schools, civic organizations, clubs or groups to give information concerning the democratic party, its ideals and principles.

All Saints' Group To Present Play At Egleston Hall

One of the outstanding attractions of this week will be "My Spanish Sweetheart," a musical comedy in two acts, which will be presented in Egleston hall, West Peachtree street at North avenue, at 8:15 o'clock Thursday night. The play, which embodies a number of catchy musical numbers and plenty of rhythm, will be given by the Young People's Service league of All Saints church, under the direction of Miss Helen Battle, well-known director of theatricals. Fritz Roberts, president of the All Saints Service league, is acting as business manager of the production.

The scene is laid in Spain, and the play tells a pretty story in a pretty way, interspersed with plenty of comedy, clean humor, good singing and dancing. The cast comprises approximately 25 members of the league, who were carefully chosen by Miss Battle for their talent and voices as well as for their adaptability for the various parts. Add to this a cast made up of handsome young men, attractive girls and picturesque Spanish costumes and settings, in which are intermingled the smart American dress worn by those members of the cast representing a party of American tourists, and one can easily visualize the beauty of the play.

Under the able direction of Miss Battle, nightly rehearsals have been under way for some weeks, and the prospects are that those who are fortunate enough to see the play will witness a production that will compare favorably with the professional stage, with the additional charm of clean-cut, vivacious youth. Proceeds from the play will be devoted toward the endowment of a bed at Egleston Memorial hospital, Atlanta's new hospital for children, and a capacity audience is expected. Among those who will have parts are the following: Misses Helen Smith, Dorothy Jackson, Louisa Howard, Betty Hambright, Billy Linthicum, Elizabeth Howard, Nancy Keeler, Betty Gilmore, Isabelle Ingles, Charlotte Cundell, Becky Collingsworth, Hortense Roberts and Howard Callaghan, Bill Dawson, Charles von Herrmann, Fritz Roberts and Fred Stover. Tickets will be on sale Monday.

JUNIOR RED CROSS TO HONOR FAMILIES OF EX-SERVICE MEN

Plans for a great Christmas party for the families of ex-service men to be held December 21, have been completed by the Junior Red Cross with the exception of the selection of a meeting place, which will be announced later.

One hundred guests have been invited to the party and all representatives of the Junior Red Cross are asked to be present to serve as hosts.

Many of the school chapters have announced individual plans for Christmas celebrations at the institutions sponsored by them and also for the marking of the holiday for the patients at Battle Hill sanatorium by those schools where the patients had been pupils.

In response to a request from the government hospital at Augusta for the Atlanta Junior Red Cross to remember 100 ex-service men who are at that institution and who otherwise would not have gifts, the men were apportioned to the various schools to care for the request and a list of gift suggestions furnished.

The grammar school council of the Junior Red Cross met at Rich's Tea room last week. Reports of the thrift projects conducted by the Atlanta juniors were made and it was shown that hundreds of empty bottles for the tuberculosis association have been collected and that shoes also are being saved for repair and distribution.

Juniors are requested to call the Red Cross office, Walnut 0471, for any information needed about the Christmas party and also to report on the disposition of the service fund.

YOUTH WHIPPED IN LIEU OF JAIL AT COURT ORDER

Clarksville, Tenn., December 8.—(AP) Alfred Ferrell, 15, took a whipping at the hands of his father today in lieu of a two-year sentence in the state reformatory. He was charged with having struck his teacher, Miss Nannie Swift, on the head with a tobacco stick when she reprimanded him for monopolizing the water cooler in the Marion school a few weeks ago.

The whipping, offered by Judge John T. Cunningham, of the county juvenile court, as an alternative for the reformatory term, was administered with a strap by Frank Farrell in the office of A. W. Jobe, superintendent of county schools.

When the superintendent reported to the judge that a "sound threshing" had been given the boy, the assault charge was dismissed. The boy was adjudged guilty by Judge Cunningham last Saturday, and imposition of the punishment deferred until today.

Wilcox Farmer Killed in Crash Near Perry, Ga.

Perry, Ga., December 8.—(AP)—W. M. Bloodworth, 32 years old, Wilcox county farmer, was killed and his brother, Dewey, 29, was is a hospital here not expected to recover as the result of their roadster overturning about a mile from here on the Dixie highway this afternoon.

The elder brother was killed instantly, suffering a broken neck, and Dewey has been unconscious since the accident occurred. There were no eye witnesses but officers who investigated believe the driver of the machine lost control while traveling at a fast rate of speed.

The two men had been on a visit here and were on their way home at the time the car overturned. They are well known in this section. Both the brothers are single.

'PHONE NUMBERS ARE ONLY CLUES IN POLICE KILLING

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—Three telephone numbers were the clues tonight by which state investigators hoped to trace the slayers of Chief Leroy Gilbert, of the South Chicago Heights police.

The numbers were given the chief himself by two Italian truck drivers whom he arrested two weeks ago with a load of alcohol. Gilbert was told to call the three numbers and the arrest would be fixed. Instead he delivered the Italians, their contraband and the evidence they gave to the United States district attorney.

"Gilbert was a martyr to law enforcement," Assistant Federal Attorney Daniel Anderson said today. "The hoomlums have had undisputed control of South Chicago Heights for four years. Police officers were forced to consult the racketeers before they made a move. Gilbert disregarded two of them and paid with his life.

"Before he died he was in here and furnished me with three telephone numbers he was ordered to call for a 'fix' after he arrested Joseph Arini and Joseph Rossi, two bootleggers. I have furnished State's Attorney Swanson with those numbers."

Warrants against five of the six men forming the posse who fired upon several automobiles when they failed to stop after Gilbert had been shot were issued today and given to the county highway police to serve. It was this posse which mistakenly shot to death Thomas Scanlon, a printer.

JIMMY IS LATE BECAUSE HE HAS GOOD DISPOSITION

New Orleans, December 8.—(AP)—Mayor Jimmy Walker's world-famous reputation of being late is not his fault, says Mrs. Jimmie Walker, who came here to witness the Mrs. James A. Walker handicap at Jefferson Park today.

"Why is Jimmie always late?" she asked with a smile. "It is due to his good disposition. He gets up in the morning in plenty of time, but the telephone will ring. He will answer it and will talk as long as the other party wishes. He is never abrupt, and is always afraid of hurting somebody's feelings."

Thus explains the wife of the man who runs for his trains, keeps cabinet officers and presidents waiting and who held up a formal banquet in Ireland and was late coming to other official functions in Europe and America.

After the race, which was won by Crossco, of the Wild Rose farm, the same owners that won the Jimmie Walker handicap last year, Mrs. Walker congratulated both the horse and jockey.

OFFICERS DOUBT KIDNAPING STORY TOLD BY GAMBLER

Louisville, Ky., December 8.—(AP)—Detectives today said they had been told by Ed Alvey, 60-year-old bookmaker abducted from his home here Monday night and freed two days later by his captors, that he would be able to recognize one of the group.

Alvey told police the first demand made on him was for $200,000, but that the experience cost him less than $500.

Alvey's story was termed "ridiculous and unbelievable" by Captain M. Ray Yarberry, chief of detectives, but every effort will be made to solve the mystery, "if there is a mystery," despite the lack of clues, he said.

Mint Head Renamed.

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—Robert J. Grant, of Denver, Colo., was nominated by President Coolidge today to succeed himself as director of the mint.

NEWSPAPER OPENS FUND TO PAY FINE OF "SCHOOL MARM"

Kansas City, December 8.—(AP)—The Kansas City Star tonight announced subscriptions of $100 to a fund to pay the $500 damages and costs assessed against Miss Mary Hickman, veteran school teacher by a jury yesterday for a whipping she gave James Edwin Christmas, a pupil, three years ago. The Star said Miss Hickman did not have the money to pay the judgment.

The whipping was administered when, the teacher said, the boy grew stubborn and refused to answer how many times four goes into thirty-two. The parents alleged their son was permanently injured and asked $15,000 damages.

Rooster Afflicted With Insomni Gets His Owner Fined

St. Petersburg, Fla., December 8.—(AP)—After more than an hour of heated wrangling Judge Frank Houghton in city court fined a southside woman $10 for harboring a rooster suffering from insomnia and then suspended the fine.

"One more crow and I'll assess the fine," the judge said in conclusion.

"We wouldn't mind if the rooster would crow at dawn," said one witness, "but he insists on crowing at the moon in the middle of the night." Witnesses against the rooster were neighbors of the woman.

The city attorney asked one witness if "the rooster crowed in transit." The witness replied: "No, he crowed under the house."

3 Die in Crash.

Long Beach, Calif., December 8.—(AP)—Three persons were killed when a wing of the airplane in which they were flying at an altitude of 2,000 feet crumpled and the plane crashed near the Long Beach municipal airport late this afternoon.

The dead:

Earl Daugherty, 35, veteran pilot.

W. E. Monfort, 43, city editor of the Long Beach Press-Telegram.

Elmer M. Starr, 32, engraver.

CHICAGO TO ATLANTA FREIGHT TIME IS CUT

Elimination of One Day's Time Expected To Be of Value to Trade.

Chicago, December 8.—(Special.)—Effective with the fastest freight schedules ever established between Chicago and Atlanta by way of the Illinois Central, Eastern Illinois, Louisville & Nashville and Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis roads, providing for second noon arrival, the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis has further established special handling of Chicago-Atlanta merchandise cars by arrangements whereby cars are unloaded in Atlanta the second afternoon immediately upon arrival and shipments for connecting lines are transferred by truck for destinations beyond Atlanta, improving the through service from Chicago to ultimate destination from 24 to 48 hours. The service will be of considerable value to the Chicago market with the southeastern trade.

Improvements in fast freight deliveries to the southeast are announced by the Chicago Association of Commerce, to take effect immediately. Working in conjunction with the "way to ship" department of the association, the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, the Louisville & Nashville and the Illinois Central have speeded up schedules to Birmingham, Ala., which assure the unloading of package-car consignments at destination the second day after leaving here, instead of the third day, as heretofore. Columbia, S. C., has also been brought closer by arrangements with the Chesapeake & Ohio and connecting lines. Fast freight to this point from Chicago is being turned over to consignees on the third day, instead of the fourth.

BOLIVIANS EXPEL PARAGUAY'S ENVOY

Three cavalry squadrons were placed about the Paraguayan legation.

Elias Ayala, the Paraguayan charge, was given his passport this afternoon by Under Secretary Virreiera. The latter acted in the absence of his chief, Acting Foreign Minister Alberto Palacios, who had journeyed to Antofagasta, Chile, to meet Herbert Hoover.

Ayala left immediately under heavy guard for the railway junction at Vinchi, eighteen miles away. A train bound for Guaqui, near the Peruvian border, had been held for him there by the government.

This action followed upon information in official circles that twenty-five soldiers, led by Lieutenant Galindo at a small border fort, "Vanguardia," had been attacked by a much greater number of Paraguayan troops. The invaders were at first repulsed but returned in numbers of about three hundred and killed most of the Bolivian soldiers, who defended their post heroically.

Dispatches from Asuncion, Paraguay, yesterday said that Paraguayan troops had been fired upon when they approached a fort built by the Bolivians near Fortin Galpon. They were said to have returned the fire and to have captured several officers and soldiers.

The two republics signed a protocol in April, 1927, which established at Buenos Aires a joint commission to attempt a settlement of the long-standing boundary dispute. No settlement has been reached, however, and in October Paraguayan newspapers claimed that the Bolivians were advancing into the disputed region.

The Bolivian legation at Washington today issued a formal statement that Bolivia has established for a long time past many forts in the province of Chaco Boreal, one of which was attacked yesterday at dawn by three squadrons of Paraguayan cavalry.

The section known as Chaco Boreal holds some 100,000 square miles of land in the fork of the Pilcomayo and Paraguay rivers. Bolivia's interest in this territory which provides a river outlet to the Atlantic ,was heightened by the loss of her Pacific ports to Chile.

Snow in Richmond.

Contractor Predicts That Atlanta's New Twin Viaducts and All Approaches Will Be Completed February 15; Progress of Work Inspected by City Chiefs

Progress on the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts is seen in the above pictures. The photographs were made at the same time that a committee of city officials inspected the structures and praised Alex MacDougald, president of the MacDougald Construction company, contractors on the work, for the manner in which he is pushing the improvements to completion. Mr. MacDougald declared he planned to have the bridges ready by February 15.

Completion by February 15 of Atlanta's largest and most expensive single civic improvement, the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts, which call for the revamping of the heart of the city, was seen Saturday by Alex MacDougald, president of the MacDougald Construction company, contractors.

The prediction was made as city chiefs surveyed the projects which Mr. MacDougald declared are being prosecuted to as early a completion as is physically possible under all circumstances.

New grades have been established on Hunter street to conform with the approaches of the two main bridges, and Hunter street is now open to traffic. Much improvement of property already is noted along that thoroughfare. Owners are renovating buildings, and fronts are being reestablished in conformity with the new grades. In fact, the whole area is engaged in the most activity ever noted in any section of Atlanta.

Central avenue viaduct is practically ready for traffic. There is one small stretch on which the finishing concrete has not yet been poured, but engineers declared Saturday this will be done in the next few days.

Pryor Street.

On Pryor street, the foundations are practically laid. There is one small stretch between Hunter and Alabama on which the foundation has not been laid. This will be completed within the next week, according to estimates.

The Wall street bridge, which will connect the Central avenue viaduct with the Whitehall street structure, is completed between Pryor street and Central avenue and the foundation work between Pryor street and Whitehall is progressing with marked rapidity.

In fact every phase of the work is developing with dazzling speed. The Alabama street approach is almost ready to be poured, and when it is completed will connect that street from Whitehall to Central avenue.

The network of elevated streets, which will be offered and which will permit unimpeded crossings over the railways in the center of the city, are being constructed at a cost of approximately $2,400,000. This is the largest outlay the city, in conjunction with utilities, has ever made on any single group of improvements, and is an indication of the city's progress and prosperity. It also is a barometer of the growth of Atlanta.

Completion of the structures will offer new and heretofore undeveloped traffic arteries and will relieve much of the traffic congestion in the heart of the city, experts declare.

Officials Pleased.

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, Frank H. Neely, chairman of the Atlanta bond commission; Alderman W. Guy Dobbs, chairman of the bridge committee of city council, and other members of the bridge committee, who were present at the inspection, were pleased with the progress of the work, and praised the efficient and rapid manner in which progress is being registered on the structures.

Councilman Harry York, a member of the bridge committee and chairman of the traffic committee, pointed out that the center of the city would be relieved of much of its congestion after the bridges are officially opened.

GEORGE, MUSSOLINI WARN OF NEW WAR

Mankind has often lacked bread ,but it has never lacked quarrels.

"The vanquished nations of the last war were naturally sore and it would have been wisdom on the part of the conquerors to have done everything in their power to let the sore heal."

Lloyd George then told his audience of the militaristic bent as he saw its evidence among the powers.

"Gigantic preparations for defense that were made before 1914 made war and they will make it again," he continued.

"We must re-establish terms of goodwill with the United States. Without that disarmament is impossible—with it disarmament would be irresistible."

Lloyd George said that France now has four times as many rifles and three times as many machine guns as Germany had when the war began.

"The pact for disarmament is not a pact—it is a conspiracy," he said. "Neither the Locarno or Kellogg pacts will be of the slightest use unless we observe the letter of the covenant which binds us to reduce armament to the lowest point compatible with security."

BY THOMAS B. MORGAN,
United News Staff Correspondent.

Rome, December 8.—(United News.)—Premier Benito Mussolini, of Italy, warned his country's legislature tonight that "the truth is that the whole world is arming."

"Newspapers daily are recording the launchings of submarines and other devices which certainly are not peaceful," he told the final session of the twenty-seventh legislature.

"The number of cannon and bayonets is increasing.

"It is advisable that we harbor no illusion about the general political situation in Europe.

"We do not want to perturb the European equilibrium, but we must be watchful."

The premier, faultlessly dressed, spoke in a low voice which he infrequently raised for emphasis. A white handkerchief protruded from the pocket of his black coat. In his hand he held a rose and refreshed himself from time to time by smelling it.

Foresees Memorable Events.

"We are most careful in extending our amity," Mussolini said, "but when the same—or the contrary—is extended we go to the bottom.

"I want to announce that you will be spectators of memorable events in the course of the 28th legislature. (The next Italian legislature will be the 28th.)

"When I think of the rather peculiar destiny of my life, which I seldom do, I raise a prayer that the Almighty may grant me not to close my earthly life before seeing on land and sea the dawn of new greatness for Italy."

He referred briefly to the Kellogg peace pact.

"We all favor peace and all of us signed for peace," he said, "the Kellogg pact, so sublime that we could characterize it as transcendental."

Much laughter by both spectators and deputies greeted that statement.

"If tomorrow similar pacts were in sight," he went on, "we would hasten to sign. We should not, however, delude ourselves if others speak of peace. The truth is that the whole world is arming."

To Bolster Air, Land Forces.

Then Mussolini announced that as soon as the country's financial convalescence has advanced to a stage to permit it, he would ask that another effort be made towards "bringing the land, sea, and air forces to the right point."

After saying he considered it inadvisable to harbor illusions as to the political situation to Europe, he added:

"When the storms are getting nearer, it is then that talk of quiet and peace is heard, as if by profound need of the spirit."

The session, which was the dissolution session of parliament, had none of the atmosphere of a farewell to departing deputies who were going home to face constituencies with doubt as to the results, but was more like a mid-summer vacation at school, when boys go home joyfully and plan with certainty their return in the autumn.

The deputies all wore the black shirts of Fascismo, leaving only a sprinkling of a bare dozen white collars through the house. On the government bench there were the white collars of Admiral Sirianni, undersecretary of the navy; General Gazzera, under-secretary of war.

Deputy Mattei-Gentili, Catholic, was the only remaining non-Fascist deputy present.

Even with their black shirts, there was an air of elegance in the attire of the deputies, as most of them wore morning coats.

The manner in which they spread themselves throughout the chamber showed how thoroughly all opposition has been withdrawn. There were barely half a dozen former followers of Giolitti in the chamber, the last remnants of the liberals almost lost among the fascists.

Mussolini himself wore a black shirt, but over it was an elegant morning coat, his white handkerchief and a bright, red rose, which now and then he raised to his face, setting off his attire.

He was greeted with an ovation which lasted several minutes.

The premier was fearlessly confident throughout his speech. He announced without qualification that the great majority of the deputies present would return, and that the next parliament would be 100 per cent fascist.

"This twenty-seventh legislature is destined to remain in the history of our country," he said.

"This chamber worked worthily and has been disciplined and firm even in difficult moments.

Faithful to Its Post.

"In 1924, during the period of the Aventine fascist majority, with a few isolated exceptions, it remained faithful to its post.

"The elections of 1929 have nothing in common with the elections held in other countries," he went on. "The electoral campaign as it used to be done on a basis of multi-colored placards, speeches, meetings and maneuvers will not be seen again.

"Most of you will sit here again, but some will set sail toward Madama Palace."

Mussolini meant that, while many will be returned as deputies, others will be sent to the senate, of which Madama Palace is the seat.

"The chamber which meets here the 20th of April, 1929, will be 100 per cent fascist, consisting of regularly inscribed members of the party," he declared.

"Tomorrow's chamber will be able to discuss extensively the government's work, not with the idea of overthrowing the government, but for legislative criticism."

RYAN BENEFICIARY TO CONTINUE LIFE AS NOW PLANNED

El Paso, Texas, December 8.—Life will be just what it "used to be" for Thomas Fortune Ryan, III, when he receives the $6,000,000 fortune bequeathed by his wealthy grandfather who died a few days ago in New York city.

Young Ryan—he is 24—will be given the money when he is 30 under the terms of the will.

"I am going to continue to make my home in El Paso, and I shall live my life as I always have," he said today. "I have mining interests in Silver City, New Mexico, and I shall continue to make two trips there each month just as usual."

GREATEST MINDS AID NEWSPAPER IN ANNIVERSARY

St. Louis, December 8.—(AP)—President Calvin Coolidge heads the list of prominent contributors in the fiftieth anniversary number of the St. Louis Post Dispatch out tomorrow.

The contributors, the newspaper says, compose "the greatest number of the world's eminent thinkers ever grouped in one publication." They include William Howard Taft, Henry Ford, Richard E. Byrd, H. G. Wells, Owen D. Young, Sir Philip Gibbs, Dean William R. Inge, and Rev. Siegfried, Count Hermann Keyserling, J. B. S. Haldane, Guglielmo Ferrero, Maxim Gorky, Martin Anderson Nexo, Bertrand Russell, Hans Driesch, James Harvey Robinson, Professor Albert Einstein, Harryson Estell Howe, Dr. Morris Fishbein, Sidney Hillman, Michael Pupin, Dr. Charles Greeley Abbot, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Rudolph M. Holzapfel, Benedetto Croce, Paul de Kruif and Stephen Leacock.

The anniversary number, which is copyrighted, contained 232 pages, 72 of which are in color rotogravure, and weighs more than three pounds. It was published at an expenditure of $100,000 in addition to the usual publication cost of the Sunday Post Dispatch. Circulation was limited to 400,000 and thousands of orders could not be filled.

Planes Crash in Fog.

Colmar, France, December 8.—(AP)—One person was killed and 27 injured in the collision of a freight and passenger train duirng a fog near Sunhofen today.

32,000 FANS SEE TECH BEAT GEORGIA

the big Tech band took the field between halves and broke into the saucy strains of "California, Here I Come."

If the western lads don't take the game mighty seriously, they're likely to retain very unpleasant memories of the rough treatment of Pund, Mizell and company.

Write Page in History.

Thus the fact that Tech emerged victor scarcely disappointed even the Georgia supporters, particularly in view of the fact that the Bulldogs, from Athens, covered themselves with glory and wrote a page in gridiron history that will bear relating to the grandbabies years hence.

It was a mighty crowd that packed the concrete bowl on North avenue and a happy and contented one. It began gathering early, and by the time the rival bands had taken their places and struck up the first strains of "Glory" and "Ramblin' Wreck," it began to roar approval of the battle of the Titans impending on the frost-seared sod down below.

Cheer-leaders executed their fanciest contortions, Georgia's noise-making chiefs revealing several new trick formations of limbs and arms, having nothing to keep back for future games. Freshmen caps whipped in the crisp breezes as the intricate "rah-rahing" get well under way.

To borrow a phrase from sport writings of ancient vintage, the chivalry of Dixie was on hand to see the game. Old grads and their youngsters, bibulous gents from nowhere in particular, and excited ladies blocked the aisles and ate peanuts while the cheering sections gave their all for Tech and Georgia.

Football coaches from here, there and everywhere were in the press box to see the gridiron classic of the south, and people everywhere were saying that Tech would confine itself strictly to straight football because California had a whole battalion of scouts here to make notes.

Everybody Present.

It was a motly collections of humans—men, women and children, all forgetful of their formal manners, and conversing easily with the butcher and the slightly-inebriated lawyer from Winder over the relative merits of Peter Pund and Herdis McCrary.

Down in the president's box sat Swedish royalty side by side with a new and wealthy bride. They had motored here from their honeymoon resort in South Carolina and had eaten the same dust that the endless caravans bound for the Tech-Georgia game had sworn at.

There was one young lady who made a charming picture of youth and innocence, of carefree grace and wholesome sweetness as she sat all bundled in furs in the east stand and watched Tech and Georgia charge and tear like a couple of infuriated bulls. Her flushed face was a study in conflicting emotions as she watched the score mount, and her disappointment was evident. Probably some Jack or Bill at Athens had caused her sentiments to veer sharply Georgia-ward.

When Georgia got the ball she was tense with hope, quivering like a taut bow-string and far more beautiful than she could ever hope to be before a mirror. And when the Bulldogs drew first blood her sweet voice rang clear and bell-like above all the howling chorus as she yelled a lusty:

Of such stuff is this fascinating youth of today made.

Quebec, Quebec.—The minister of fisheries is planning a war of extermination against porpoises off the coast of Gaspe and along the north shore of the St. Lawrence. The details of the campaign against these marauders has yet to be worked out, but it is understood its main features will be the offering of inducements to fishermen to capture porpoises and the provision of facilities to try out their oil, salvage their skins and perhaps utilize the carcases as fertilizer.

Old Folks Say Doctor Caldwell was Right

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will last a family several months, and all can use it. It is good for the baby because pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. In proper dose, given in the directions, it is equally effective at all ages. Elderly people will find it especially ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write your name and address in the special coupon you see at the end of this announcement, and send for a bottle to try. This complimentary bottle is forwarded, prepaid without charge of any kind.

HUGH CALDWELL TRIAL IS SLATED FOR MONDAY

West End Real Estate Man To Face Jury for Wounding J. R. Hanson.

Trial of Hugh Caldwell, West End real estate operator, on a charge of assault with intent to murder, is scheduled for Monday morning in Judge G. H. Howard's division of Fulton superior court. Caldwell is under indictment for shooting J. R. Hanson, contractor, of 1238 Peachtree.

Hanson was shot while sitting in an automobile with Mrs. Caldwell near a piece of property on which he was constructing some buildings for Mrs. Caldwell, it was said. Hanson was badly wounded by the discharge of two shotgun shells, but recovered under treatment at a local hospital.

R. L. Weaver, charged with the murder of Tom C. Davis, street car operator, will go on trial Tuesday in Judge Howard's court. Davis was stabbed to death following an argument over a poker game in a house on Edgewood avenue, according to police reports.

R. B. Pettit and Paul Seymour, youths charged with involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death of Paul Hulme, who was found shot to death near Forrest road, will go on trial Thursday in Judge Howard's court. Police were told that Hulme was killed by a bullet fired through a signboard while walking along a path on the opposite side of the signboard from where Pettit and Seymour were.

Mrs. Alice Watson.

Lawrenceville, Ga., December 8.—(Special.)—Funeral services for Mrs. Alice Watson, 71 years old, who died here at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Roy Johnson, Friday, after a long illness, were conducted at Chestnut Grove church, Grayson, Saturday afternoon, the Rev. Sammie Bryant officiating. She was a member of Mount Zion Baptist church and is survived by the following children: Mrs. J. W. Ethridge, of Grayson; Mrs. J. W. Gilbert and Q. B. Watson, of Atlanta; Calloway Watson, of Loganville; F. F. Ezekiel and Miss Annie Watson, of Lawrenceville, and by 26 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

37 GEORGIA WOMEN GIVEN COUNTY POSTS

Successful Female Candidates Will Take Office on January 1.

The exercise of the franchise by Georgia women resulted in 37 members of their sex being named to office in 34 Georgia counties during the recent general election, it was learned Saturday. The successful women candidates will take office on January 1, 1929.

Twenty-three of the 37 women office-holders obtained their posts by reelection, demonstrating the satisfaction of the public with the quality of service they rendered. Sixteen women were elected superintendents of schools, while tax offices also were favored with successful women candidates, six being made tax collectors and five tax receivers. In Fulton county, Mrs. Mabel McNeal was elected treasurer.

Six women were elected to the post of ordinary, and two clerks of court.

The Georgia women elected to county office follow:

Atkinson county: Mis. Minnie F. Corbitt, ordinary; Miss Mabel Turner, superintendent of schools, reelected.
Ben Hill county: Mrs. F. M. Graham, tax collector, reelected.
Charlton county: Mrs. J. M. Roddenberry, tax collector, reelected.
Chattooga county: Miss Maud Sewell, superintendent of schools, reelected.
Clarke county: Mrs. Erie S. Greene, tax receiver, reelected.
Clinch county: Kate C. Pafford, ordinary, reelected.
Columbia county: Carrie L. McDaniel, tax collector, reelected.
Crawford county: Mrs. Z. D. Walker, superintendent of schools, reelected.
Decatur county: Miss Nell Maxwell, ordinary.
Dooly county: Mrs. J. O. Teasley, tax receiver; Miss Annie Kelly, superintendent of schools.
Early county: Mrs. McArthur Jones, superintendent of schools, reelected.
Echols county: Miss Annie Cannady, superintendent of schools.
Evans county: Mrs. Clara Varnidore, superintendent of schools.
Fulton county: Mrs. Mabel McNeal, treasurer.
Henry county: Mrs. Kate Brown, superintendent of schools, reelected.
Houston county: Mrs. J. R. Hunt, treasurer, reelected.
Jefferson county: Louisa M. Wright, ordinary, reelected.
Jenkins county: Jessie M. Gay, tax collector.
Lamar county: Mrs. Minnie Johnson, clerk of court, reelected.
McIntosh county: Mrs. Margaret Walker, clerk of court, reelected.
Meriwether county: Elsie O'Neal, ordinary, reelected.
Newton county: Miss Eva Stephenson, tax receiver, reelected.
Oconee county: Mrs. Annie Y. Avery, superintendent of schools, reelected.
Polk county: Miss Annie Brumby, superintendent of schools, reelected.
Putnam county: Mrs. F. S. Marshall, ordinary, reelected.
Randolph county: Mrs. Annie McMichael, superintendent of schools, reelected.
Rockdale county: Mrs. Violet T. King, superintendent of schools, reelected.
Stewart county: Mrs. Gladys W. Harris, tax collector.
Talbot county: Mrs. William Keller, tax collector; Mrs. L. D. Johnson, tax receiver.
Terrell county: Helen G. Gurr, superintendent of schools, reelected.
Treutlen county: Mrs. James Fowler, superintendent of schools.
Turner county: Miss Nina Cox, superintendent of schools, reelected.
Walker county: Bess Catron, tax receiver.
Webster county: Miss Hattie Adams, superintendent of schools.

MACHINISTS' BODY REELECTS QUINN AS 1929 PRESIDENT

Emmett L. Quinn, president of Atlanta lodge, No. 1, International Association of Machinists, who was instrumental in securing the recent national convention of the order for Atlanta, was reelected to the presidency of the association at the annual meeting held last week at the Labor temple.

Reelection also was accorded W. J. Purdie, as vice president; Paul Chipman as recording secretary; W. L. Hardwick as financial secretary; D. M. Goodlin as treasurer, and A. N. Aenchbacker as trustee. W. J. Bourgeois was elected conductor and W. M. Dewberry was named sentinel. R. L. Johnson, who has been serving as special business agent for this year, was elected business agent for 1929.

CLINTON CARNES PAYS $6,000 CASH FOR FURNITURE

Clinton S. Carnes, ex-treasurer of the Baptist home mission board, who now occupies a small cell in Fulton Tower awaiting trial on many indictments charging embezzlement from the board, believed in having his home furnished comfortably, it was revealed Saturday at the solicitor general's office.

The state has uncovered the fact that Carnes paid $6,000 in cash for the furniture for his home on Fairview road, it was said. The furnishings were purchased from a local store in 1924, and were housed in Carnes' handsome $50,000 home in the Fairview road section.

Yeomans To Protest Plan To Quarantine Georgia Peach Stock

M. S. Yeomans, state entomologist, will go to Washington December 17 to appear before the federal plant quarantine board to protest against a proposed quarantine against shipment of peach nursery stock out of Georgia. The quarantine has been suggested because of the prevalence of the "phony" disease in certain orchards of the state.

Mr. Yoemans said it has not been definitely established that this disease can be communicated through the shipment of peach nursery stock. Several prominent Georgia peach growers will accompany Mr. Yoemans. The proposed quarantine does not affect the shipment of peaches.

VETERANS' HOSPITALS ADDITIONS APPROVED

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—The veterans' bureau announced today that President Coolidge had approved the construction of a 137 bed acute building at the Tuskegee, Ala., hospital and a 137 bed acute building at the North Little Rock, Ark., hospital.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

BOOK BUYING A YEAR-ROUND PLEASURE

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

A Little Clown Lost. By Barry Benefield. This new author can also be called a truly modern writer. There is not much guessing about his next title, story, characters, and what the characters are going to say or do. In his former books there was not much guessing indulged in but lots of surprises in store for the reader, for he is up-to-date in his style.

This new story tells of Phoebe Dibble, a little rover to be found on the road, seen today and unseen tomorrow, do-not-belong to anybody much and yet wants to belong to somebody cheap. This unusual introduction comes at the same time with a blue norther which sweeping down the Mississippi Valley has transformed summer into winter in northern Louisiana and had thrown this little Nomad into the very home of Shep Tideboy, the dreamy scion of a broken Louisiana plantation family. There is sorrow and sadness experienced by them while she is there and then one day she slips away to hide her aching heart in the role of a little painted clown.

Hal and Ada Denham, a charming couple, come to take over the plantation house but they do not bring the happiness and contentment to Shep for he continues to long for the missing Phoebe. It is a deeply human story, one that will grip the reader's heart, and then there will be something to enjoy in the original and humorous incidents that the author knows so well how to introduce. The author who is a native of Texas knows quite well how to make his setting with the scenery, the customs and the culture of the best in these two well-known states. (The Century Co. New York.)

NEW BOOKS.

Fear. By Oliver.

Wrestle of Religion With Truth. By Wiedman.

Sunday School Lessons, 1928. By Snowden.

A Pilgrimage to Palestine. By Fosdick.

Mission Letters, Volume II. By Mary Knoll.

Does Civilization Need Religion. By Niebuhr.

The Lyric South. By Hibbard. (MacMillan's Books.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

The Silk Purse. By Elizabeth Sanxay Holding, author of "The Shoals of Honor," etc. The story has New York for its setting and is a character study of modern life there. It is woven around Archibald Grier who is called "a ladies' man," though he is never able to hold their admiration of affection very long. Something wrong! There's Archie, Kathie, Anthia, Cara, Maurice, Sammy, Emily and many others whose conversation is never very interesting, whether at the theater, dinner dance, or entertaining in their own homes. It is the story of a young man who evidently did not know his own mind. He returns from a trip to the West Indies believing that there is only one girl in the world and that is Kathie, his little school-girl sweetheart. After much indecision, however, he finally marries Anthen Gallard and was forever afterwards an unhappy man, his marriage being only one of the many unhappy incidents that crossed his path. The author can write interesting stories, is noted for her creation of live, up-to-date characters, and having worked off all the dull ones in this we are anticipating something real clever at an early date. (Dutton's Book. New York.)

The "Red Kite" Clue. By Owen Fox Jerome. Author of "The Hand of Horror," a story which gave the reader the creeps instead of thrills. This is another mystery story in which the same detective is placed in charge of the case. A well-known archaeologist who spent about ten years in the orient doing research work is murdered three days after his return home. The only thing found to be missing is a Sacred Horn brought back from Tibet. There are many baffling experiences before the climax. (Edward J. Clode, Inc. New York.)

Money For One. By Berta Ruck, author of "The Mind of a Minx." Mrs. Ruck is well known for her interesting stories and when she decided to weave a story around Kitten Robertshaw, who had always had plenty of money and plenty of time in which to spend it, there seemed to be very little to interest the reader, but when the will of Kitten's grandmother was read well, you at once realized that something exciting was going to happen, for it meant that Kitten became the sole owner of the vast steel and iron works of Fearnleigh as long as she remained single.

Now this did not worry Kitten in the least, for she was not in love with anyone, did not expect to be, was going to live an independent life, etc., and then wound up by falling desperately in love with a poor young artist. This is the beginning of all the trouble—a chase after happiness by a beautiful girl and a poor young artist. There's a lively plot, a delightful style, and as usual with Berta Ruck's characters they are thoroughly alive and entertaining (Dodd Mead & Co., New York.)

The Ghost Hunters. A thrilling mystery story. By Collins Brooks. With its locale and action in an early Tudor castle in northern England, adjacent to an ancient priory and nunnery, this book affords in ample measure the thrills, the suspense and mystery of a rattling good ghost-detective story.

The Skyscraper Murder. A modern and blood-curdling master work of crime, reminiscent of a recent notorious murder. By Samuel Spewack. This is another mystery story in which the police find a strange diary of the Russian revolution and the pursuit of the great Shah diamond—the famous jewel of the Romanoffs. (Macaulay's book, New York.)

The Hinge of Heaven. A romance by Stephena Cockrell. A critic who thoroughly enjoyed this story of a quest for old furniture in a quaint town in old Virginia, says: "It is an amusing novel of modern youth in a setting where the atmosphere and traditions of the old south still linger on." It is the story of Sally, down in Virginia, with her antique shop, and of Richard Clarke in New York, who decides that he wants a colonial highboy down in this little southern town. A most interesting story. (William Morrow & Co., New York.)

This Man and This Woman. By Florence Bongham Livingston. This is a romance of two lives and may be of hundreds of lives. There is plenty to interest and plenty for thinkers. (Doubleday, Dorran Co.)

The Sons of Cain. By James Warner Bellah. A romance of a man and a woman—a war story which will interest, impress and even grieve the readers as they follow the hero and the heroine on to the Armistice days of ten years ago. The author is a brilliant writer and he has written a most remarkable story. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

Absolution. By Alberta Stedman Eagan. Another story of a man and a woman—unloved and unloving. Edward Thurston is a young shipbuilder and on account of his unhappiness he goes on a yachting trip and there meets his first sweetheart, who had not forgotten the days of their youth. (Macaulay, New York.)

The Mountainy Singer. By Harry Harrison Kroll. The author, who has spent his life among the people of the Tennessee mountains, has written a most interesting story about them, telling many stories of the real people whose folk-song literature is so enjoyable by the people of the United States. (William Morrow & Co., New York.)

The Invader. A thrilling tale of adventure and passion. By Hilda Vaughan, author of "The Battle to the Weak." While the author has located her plot on the Welsh border it is a present-day story woven around the farmer instead of the squire of other days. She has written an understanding study of a class little known to the other peoples of the world.

Hilda Vaughan is doing for the Welsh border country what Sheila Kaye-Smith has done for Sussex. Her material is gathered from first-hand knowledge. Miss Vaughan's family has for generations lived in this locality and she herself was brought up in the countryside she describes. During the war her work with the Red Cross and the Women's Land Army took her into homes of every sort and brought her into intimate contact with the farming folk. Thus she had unrivaled opportunities to study these strange people who have kept to themselves until they are almost a race apart.

Miss Vaughan is the wife of Charles Morgan, well known English dramatic critic and author of "My Name Is Legion." (Harper & Brothers).

Infidelity. Being an account of the somewhat farcical "Pennyworth Affair." By Arthur Weigall. "What price matrimony when a companionate marriage proves to be a legal marriage and a legal marriage proves to be companionate?" (Brentano's, publisher, New York).

The Town On the Hill. By Mrs. George Norman. The author is well known for her literary work. This story will impress the reader with its plot and the manner in which she treats a subject that is now almost if not a daily occurrence. The following has been said of the story: "This novel is characterized by much human sympathy and insight. There is humor without flippancy, wisdom better than any mere cleverness, and is devoid of prudery, preachiness or priggishness." (Benziger Brothers, New York).

The Saddle Wolf. By W. D. Hoffman. This is another mystery story and among the mysterious questions asked are: Who is Saddle Wolf? Who murdered Henry Underwood? Who kidnaped Mary Harrington? But this is not all, there's two real old fashioned love affairs—love affairs of the old west that everybody likes to read about. Western romance has always been inspiring and in this story there is plenty of it, plenty of action and plenty of mystery. (McClurg's Book).

HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY.

Bismarck. The story of a fighter By Emil Ludwig, author of "Napoleon." Translated from the German by Eden and Cedar Paul. The volume is dedicated "to Gerhart Hauptman, in Veneration and Friendship—Moscia, summer 1926."

Among the interesting criticisms are the following: "There rises from its pages the noble figure of Otto von Bismarck, the man and diplomat—sharply outlined, without sentimentality or empty patriotic phrases, overwhelming in its greatness"—New York Times. "After the hundreds of volumes of pious stupidity written about the Iron Chancellor, Ludwig's candid and straightforward biography is a welcome relief."—New York Herald-Tribune. "Emil Ludwig displays once more his exceptional power of dramatic presentation and has given us another remarkable contribution to the history of our times."—The London Times. "This portrait of a fighter is not the work of a literateur, but is a chapter in world history."—The Living Age. Sixteen illustrations. This is a wonderful character study in which Bismarck is seen standing in his true light out in the open. (Little Brown & Co., Boston, $5.00).

My Friend—Robespierre. By Henri Beraud. Translated from the French by Slater Brown. "Few descriptions of the reign of terror have been invested with such reality and horror. The story of the 'Ninth Thermidor' and of the tragic fall of Robespierre, has all the glamor of those days of the French revolution." These remarks cover the subject of Robespierre who for such a long time was called the monster through whose cruelty during the French revolution "will ever be before the people" for, this strange, inscrutable revolutionist, this gigantic pedant whose mind seems to have worked in an ethereal vacuum of ideals, was not half the monster those lovers of melodrama would have us believe."

Beraud, the author, writes from the viewpoint of a friend to Robespierre. He has painted this great leader of the Jacobins in truer words than those used by Carlyle. It is a handsome and valuable volume. (The Macaulay Co., New York).

A RARE GUIDE.

Nights Abroad. By Konrad Bercovie, author of "Around the World in New York," etc. This is a rare volume with covers of blue and silver—it is the open door to old world cities. It is not a book of "night life," spent at clubs, cabarets, etc., but the author shows us these cities at the only time when they are truly themselves—"When the tourists are asleep and the natives are no longer on exhibition." Through the eyes of the author those of us who have not been old world tourists will find much to attract as well as enjoy, and those of us who have roamed in, over and around these old cities and capitals will get a new inspiration. Mr. Bercovic makes it so clear to the tourist that he soon understands the difference between Damascus and Jerusalem, Constantinople from Bucharest, and so on. Everywhere we go we meet real people. At Monte Carlo he would call on the late Ibanez; in Damascus our attention would be called to an Arab sheik, and in other places we would see some special attraction. It is a real memory book in which the reader will ever find traces not to be forgotten.

Born in a little town on the shores of the Danube in Rumania, Konrad Bercovici went at a very early age to live with his family in Paris. Here he studied music and kept a notebook in which he jotted down early memories and impressions of places and people. He first came to this country in 1904 and devoted himself to teaching and playing the church organ. He left and returned again in 1915, having in the meantime learned sufficient English to enable him to write his first book. Mr. Bercovici is an ardent traveler of extraordinary energy. Almost all of his books have been translated into several European languages. (Century Co., New York.)

NEW BOOKS RECEIVED.

The Confusion of Tongues. By Charles W. Ferguson. A review of modern isms. This volume presents a penetrating and witty survey of "The Modern Babel." It is a brief dictionary of about 57 sects, and other information. (Published by Doubleday-Dorran Co., Garden City, N. Y., $3.50.)

Sons of Africa. By Georgina A. Gollock. Decorations and cover by Aaron Douglas. The author was former joint editor of the International Review of Missions. Author of "Lives of Eminent Africans," etc. (Friendship Press, New York.)

Undergraduates. A study of morale in American colleges and universities. By R. H. Edwards, J. M. Artman and Galen M. Fisher. This volume comes under the classification "For the Institute of Social and Religious Research." It contains the confidential interviews with more than a thousand persons in 23 American colleges. The attitude of college men and women about the most vital problems, especially those that relate to the formation of character, will be a revelation. Men and women from the president down to the student were given an opportunity to make expression of his or her ideas.

The authors of a book also have an influence over the reader, and the following notes will be of interest:

R. H. Edwards is executive of the National Council of Religion in Higher Education and executive of United Christian Work Among Undergradutes in Cornell university, and J. M. Artman was formerly professor in Chicago university in the department of religious education. He now is general secretary of the Religious Education Association of the United States and Canada. (Doubleday-Doran Co.)

THE RENFREW SERIES.

Renfrew of the Royal Mounted. By Laurie Y. Erskine. There are very few, if any, boys and girls of school age who have not read something about the royal mounted police of Canada. This is the first book of this series in which Renfrew, the central figure, excites a great deal of curiosity. "How does he look?" Well, he's over six feet, I guess, always wears riding clothes, is fair though his face is bronzed. He looks lots like General Custer." But Alan forgot as he did not mention Renfrew's eyes which were always cool and clear, the eyes of a man who could be a real friend. The story has all the vigor of the great Canadian north woods and the real bravery of a courageous man.

Renfrew Rides Again. By the same author. This is the second book and the author introduces him this time as "A gallant scarlet-coated figure." He shows him at work among the mounted police in the field of action. It is his duty to maintain the law in this great wilderness for as a representative of Uncle Sam he must do his best to bring criminals to justice. This is the story of how Renfrew with the assistance of two boys who chase and battle with desperate ruffians. It is a thrilling story. Renfrew heard the call of adventure and those who love thrilling stories will enjoy this second book.

Renfrew Rides the Sky. Here's another story about the author's popular hero—Renfrew. This time it is about his experience in France with the Royal Flying corps. They are thrilling adventures which cover another step in the progress of the world—flying in the air—and there are a number of adventures in which Renfrew and his "buddies" experience many battles in the air, also an account Renfrew had with a German ace—it was at this time that all his courage and skill was put to the test. It is a breathless climax in which his readers will enjoy seeing him at his best. (Appleton & Co., New York.)

JUNIOR BOOKS RECEIVED.

Pat and Pal. By Harriet Lummis Smith, who carried on the "Polyanna Glad Books" after the death of the beloved author, Eleanor H. Porter. This is a love story and would make a lovely gift for a debutante or a sub-deb. The story is woven around a young girl, Priscilla Irwin, who finds that a certain young man is very much in love with her and that she has fallen in love with him because he is the nicest boy she has ever known. Now Priscilla is the owner of two dogs, Pat, the Boston terrier, who is telling this story, says that "the whole thing was planned, instigated, engineered and brought to a successful conclusion by the sagacity and unremitting efforts of himself and his friend, Pal, the philosophic collie whose epigrams enliven the tale."

All the world doves young lovers and all young lovers seem to love dogs, and everybody is going to have the pleasure of reading a real and charming love story. Illustrations by Griswold Tyng. (L. C. Page & Co., Boston.)

Joanna Gray. By Nelia Gardner White. Joanna is not only the title name of this story but the heroine. A young girl with all the love and the ideals and the dreams that always come with youth, and one of its brightest possessions has come to Joanna. It is a story of a father and brothers and sisters with the mother missing in the old Gray farmhouse, where Joanna has to mother them all, and while she is not able to get very near seemingly to the heart of her lonely father she does her best by trying to make a bright cheerful home for them all—an effort which in time received its reward. (Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.)

Secrets Inside. By M. M. Dancy McClendon. The story of a little old-fashioned girl who arrives in Houston, Texas, from a little village in the North Carolina mountains. Having started out on the trip alone she manages to get lost somewhere en route and finally finds herself near an old barge stranded on the beach down on Galveston bay. She tells the Cap'n of the old barge that there's a secret of some kind there and this leads to a most interesting story for young girls, and boys too, for the author's book. "Mystery Camp," was a great success for boys, and all boys and girls like mystery stories. (L. C. Page & Co. Boston.)

The Bluenose Express. By Zillah K. McDonald. This is a charming story about the adventures of Hiawatha, a plucky little railroad engine which has taken the Bluenose Express on its daily run for years, and now they are about to make scrap iron out of it, and this is where Danny, the faithful engineer, comes in with a great big idea with which all the children agree. A delightful story. (Appleton's Book.)

Boys' and Girls' Books of Indoor Games. By A. Frederick Collins. Every library needs just such a book for rainy days when everybody has to stay in on account of the weather, and then there are games for birthday parties, tea parties and lots of other kind of games that will amuse from the nursery to the parlor. The illustrations are all by the author. (Appleton's Book.)

Windows Into Asia. By Gertrude Chandler Warner, author of "The World in a Barn." Drawings by Ray Bethers. This little book tells about Bobby and his sister, Virginia, whose father is a missionary teacher in Alaska and it is there they meet the little boys and girls and see the way the Indians and Eskimos live. (The Friendship Press. New York.)

SECOND CHICAGO POLICEMAN SHOT WITHIN 30 HOURS

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—Another policeman was shot early today, the second in 30 hours to fall under the rain of gangster bullets.

Unlike the case of Leroy Gilbert, the young police chief of South Chicago Heights, who was shot dead in his home Thursday night, the shooting of County Policeman Ernest Schubert early today was not fatal. The bullet that dropped him struck his left leg. Another shot was deflected by his star.

Schubert had crossed the street in Niles Center, a north side suburb, to question several men in an automobile. Before he could speak, guns were pointed at him and triggers pressed. As he fell, the car was driven away.

DARROW SPEAKS AT MASS MEETING OF MILL STRIKERS

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—Clarence Darrow, Chicago lawyer, denounced abuses of labor injunctions last night before 160 former employees of the Allen A mills at Kenosha, Wis., whose mass meeting was to raise funds to release 16 former Allen A workers from a Milwaukee jail. The sixteen were jailed when they failed to pay $100 fines imposed for violating a federal injunction.

"Prosperity is hurting the labor movement," Darrow said. "You are becoming too well fed, too happy and contented to fight."

Invermere, British Columbia.—Apparently more Canadians are "seeing Canada first." Tourists from other provinces over the Banff-Windemere highway for the season of 1928 increased by about 2,000 as compared with last year.

Avalanche Strikes Stocks, All Profits Since Election Lost

Largest Saturday Turn-Over on Record Sees Paper Profits of Billions Vanish in Minutes.

RADIO TUMBLES $72 PER SHARE

Bankers Call Consultation in Effort To Bolster Falling List, Says Rumor of Morgan Meeting.

New York, December 8.—(AP)—The New York world will say tomorrow that four partners of J. P. Morton & Co. and several "outsiders" were in conference all this afternoon in the Morgan offices.

No information was given out regarding the conference, but the World will say a report was current in Wall street that leading banking interests were considering plans for organized support of the market.

BY STANLEY W. PRENOSIL,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, December 2.—Breaking all Saturday trading records with a turnover of 3,744,900 shares, the most violent "bear" market in stock exchange history completed its third day today with scores of issues down $5 to $72 a share below last night's quotations, thereby wiping out practically all gains recorded in the wild "bull" markets in the four weeks following election day.

The break on the New York Stock Exchange, which has reduced the aggregate quoted value of all listed securities by several billion dollars this week and has wiped out the paper profits of a small army of speculators throughout the world, has had its repercussion on all other securities markets throughout the country, and on the New York Cotton Exchange where distant futures broke $3 a bale today on heavy selling by houses with Wall street connections.

At their closing quotations today, many high-priced stocks were selling $25 to nearly $125 a share below their high levels of the week. For instance, Radio Corporation common, which established a new high record at $420 a share only last Wednesday, dropped $72 a share today to $296. Selling of this issue was attributed, in part, to speculative disappointment over the failure of directors at their meeting yesterday to split up the stock and to make provisions for the payment of dividends. STRESEMANN SEES REPARATIONS STAY

Lugano, Switzerland, December 8. (AP)—Gustav Stresemann, foreign minister of Germany, arrived here this evening with his coat collar turned up against a cold rain, but clutching in his hands a bouquet of roses presented at the station by a young German girl.

"Nothing sensational will happen," was his response to questions regarding the session of the council of the League of Nations which is to open here Monday. The entire German delegation in fact, radiated an atmosphere of pessimism in so far as Germany's expectations for early evacuation of the Rhineland or a new fixation of her total war reparations were concerned.

Herr Stresemann told league officials who met him at Olten and accompanied him to Lugano that he did not intend to discuss here any German political problems in regard to reparations and the Rhineland. He said he was coming only to attend the meeting of the council.

There was an enthusiastic welcome for the noted German rivalling the enthusiastic reception given at the station yesterday to Aristide Briand, the French foreign minister. The mayor and other municipal officials were again at the station and the crowd applauded when the distinguished visitor was given his bouquet of roses.

Although Lugano had been selected for this session of the council because it was believed the weather here would be more suitable for Stresemann's health, the city failed to liveup to its promises. It rained all day, yet Herr Stresemann smiled affably, both on the welcoming crowd and on American photographers who snapped pictures of him with the aid of a powerful lamp, the searchlight intensity of which made him blink.

With M. Briand and Herr Stresemann on the ground, only the arrival of Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary in the British cabinet, was needed to complete the modern "Big Three." Sir Austen and his lady started their journey from London last night.

This trio is expected to have much to do with decisions of the council on the 30 or more questions listed on the agenda. Disarmament, opium, health inspections, transportation, minority peoples' difficulties, economic, legal and constitutional questions all are included among the topics which the international gathering is to take up.

In addition there is the expected discussion of the rules under which the court of international justice would be asked to give an advisory opinion.

FOURTH NATIONAL TO EXPAND SCOPE OF ACTIVITY HERE

Capital Stock Increase and Formation of Subsidiary Included in Broad Program of Expansion.

Plans for a broad program of expansion on the part of the Fourth National bank, of Atlanta, already have been developed and soon will be definitely under way, it was divulged Saturday when the contents of an official letter the bank sent its stockholders during the past week became known.

Increase of the institution's capital stock by the issuance of 10,000 additional shares; the formation of a subsidiary corporation to be known as the Fourth National Associates, with a capitalization of $560,000; the reorganization and enlargement of the Fourth National company, of Atlanta, through which the investment securities business of the Fourth National Bank of Atlanta is handled and a change of the capital stock of the bank itself from a par valuation of $100 per share to a par valuation of $20 per share, are included among steps which already have been approved by the institution's board of directors, and await only the formal ratification of the annual stockholders' meeting to be held on January 8.

Movement Attracts Attention.

The projected movement, which will strengthen and emphasize anew Atlanta's recognized position as one of the country's important financial centers, was a topic of discussion in banking circles throughout the day. It was recalled that only a few months ago the Fourth Ntional paid $525,000 for additional real estate adjacent to its property at Five Points, as a result of which it now has a total frontage on Marietta street of 123 feet, with a depth along Peachtree of 110 feet, a ground area of 13,530 square feet ideally adapted from every standpoint as the site of a great banking office

The Fourth National Associates, the charter for which has been granted, will start with paid in capital of $560,000, and initial surplus of $40,000. The function of this affiliated corporation, it is understood, will be that of a holding company, with the right to invest in the stocks of well managed and successful corporations. This is a policy, it was pointed out, which has been very advantageously followed by certain large banking interests in other parts of the country, notably in New York and Boston.

The Fourth National company's capital will be increased to $280,000, with undivided profits of $35,000.

The present capitalization of the Fourth National is $1,200,000, divided into 12,000 shares of $100 each. The surplus is $1,800,000, with undivided profits over $800,000. After the proposed plans are made operative, capital will be $1,400,000, representing 70,000 shares of a par value of $20 each, with surplus of $1,800,000 and undivided profits more than $850,000, running the invested capital above $4,000,000, and with the shareholders of the bank owning the affiliated organizations, the Fourth National company and the Fourth National Associates.

At the Fourth National further details of the proposed action were not disclosed and there was no comment beyond the statement of John K. Ottley, president, to the effect that it always has been the policy of the Fourth National to set up and maintain facilities adequate to meet the steadily increasing requirements of the bank's clientele, and to assure the

BIG NAMES HEARD IN TEST OF WEST

Investigation of Coolidge Nominee Turns Upon His Connection With Oil Lease Renewals.

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—A cabinet officer, a former cabinet officer and assistants to two cabinet officers were summoned today by the senate public lands committee to appear before it beginning next Wednesday for questioning relative to the renewal of the Salt Creek Royalty Oil contract held by Harry F. Sinclair until it was recently nullified.

The committee decided to go into the oil contract renewal in connection with its consideration of the nomination of Roy O. West, of Chicago, as secretary of the interior. Mr. West, who received a recess appointment last summer, was asked to testify at the Wednesday meeting. Hubert Work, who resigned as interior secretary to become chairman of the republican national committee in the Hoover campaign; William J. Donovan, assistant to the attorney general, and E. C. Finney, assistant secretary of the interior, were summoned for Thursday. The sessions will be public.

Mr. Work renewed the Sinclair contract early this year after conversation with the solicitor of the interior department, Ernest N. O. Patterson, who has also been called by the committee. Later protests against the contract were entered and finally last October the department of justice declared the contract void after President Coolidge had forwarded to it complaints received by Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana.

Senator Walsh, a member of the public lands committee, asked the

GROCERY AND GAS FILLING STATION MANAGERS ROBBED

Holdup and knock-down men Saturday night victimized managers of the Rogers grocery store at 389 Hill street of $117 and the Gulf Refining company at Cain and Luckie street of $32, according to reports furnished police.

L. L. Ivy, manager of the Rogers store, told police that a short, unmasked negro leaped on the running board of his automobile just after he had closed the store, knocked him in the head and took $117. A lone white man entered the filling station and took $32, J. L. Shepard, manager, told police.

MEMORIAL SEEN AS DRAWING CARD

Charles A. Wickersham Tells G. F. Willis That Finished Carving Will Be Mecca for Tourists.

Calling attention to the fact that Stone mountain, now with its incompleted memorial to the Confederacy, is a subject of nation-wide interest, Charles A. Wickersham, president of the Atlanta & West Point railway, in a letter to G. F. Willis, president of the memorial, Saturday, predicted that on its completion it will be a great drawing card to conventions and tourists.

In his letter Mr. Wickersham points out that completion of the memorial undoubtedly will result in the establishment by the railroads of ticket routings through Atlanta to accommodate the vast number of travelers who will wish to come here to see Stone Mountain.

Wickersham's Letter.

Mr. Wickersham's letter follows:

"Dear Mr. Willis:

"Within the last several weeks the value of the Stone Mountain memorial from a commercial standpoint has undoubtedly made a very favorable impression upon the business interests of Atlanta and vicinity. This has been brought directly home to us by the several conventions, delegations, etc., most notably the visit of Governor Al Smith, to the site.

"There is no doubt but that the memorial, when completed, will provide a strong drawing card to our convention bureau and thus prove to be a most valuable asset to Atlanta and vicinity. We can recall no gathering of importance in Atlanta since the inception of the memorial but that the visitors were given the benefit of viewing the mountain and the process of the work.

Trip for Accountants.

"When the Railway Accounting Officers' Association of the United States and Canada met in Atlanta this past summer such a trip was provided; and in the travels of our railroad representatives over a great portion of the United States constant and most keen interest is manifested by those with whom they come in contact. In fact, it has been our observation that anyone from Atlanta is very promptly quizzed with respect to the magnitude of the undertaking, many frankly expressing the hope that at some future date it may be their privilege to view the memorial.

"Should the project be carried to further completion there is no doubt but that the railroads serving Atlanta would be glad to call to the attention of tourists the possibility of routing tickets via Atlanta to afford travelers an opportunity to visit Stone mountain.

"We sincerely hope that your well directed efforts to bring the memorial to completion may be successful and that you may have the whole-hearted support of the people of the Atlanta territory.

"Yours very truly,

(Signed)

"CHAS. A. WICKERSHAM."

VICTIM OF HOLD-UP ROBBED, WOUNDED

Victim Tells Police He was Shot Without Warning or Provocation by Young Negro.

Staggering into the captain's office at police headquarters shortly before midnight Saturday Oscar Rowden, a painter, of a Campbellton road address, threw open his coat to reveal a dangerous bullet wound in his abdomen, gasped out a story of his cold-blooded shooting by a negro and then collapsed on the floor at the feet of Captain Grover C. Fain.

He stated that he had been walking along Piedmont avenue, near Decatur street, and only a few blocks from the police station, when he was accosted by a young unmasked negro who drew a pistol and commanded him to "stand and deliver."

After he had handed over $85 in money the thug demanded that he remove his hat, overcoat and shoes. Rowden complied, he said, and after gathering these articles up the robber turned on him and, without warning, shot him down.

Felled by the shot Rowden got to his feet and was able to walk the short distance to police station and tell his story before he collapsed, and was carried to Grady hospital by Call Officers Ginn and McGarrity. Doctors at the hospital early this morning pronounced his condition serious. Detectives were immediately assigned to the case and are now combing the city for a man answering Rowden's briefly-given description.

COCA-COLA PLANS BIG STOCK ISSUE

Stockholders Approve Proposal of Directors To Issue 1,000,000 Shares of Common Stock.

Approval of the directors' plan to issue 1,000,000 shares of common stock, paying an annual dividend of $3 a share, of no par value but callable at $52.50 per share, was voted Saturday by stockholders of the Coca-Cola company, it was announced following a special called meeting of the stockholders.

The new stock issue will amount to a stock dividend of 100 per cent, as there are now 1,000,000 shares of common stock outstanding on a $6 annual dividend basis. Stockholders of record on January 15, 1929, will receive one share of the new stock for each share of the present stock held at that time. The new stock, having no voting power, is being issued as an alternative for an extra cash dividend, which was proposed by some directors at the recent New York meeting, it was said.

Once before the Coca-Cola company has doubled its common stock, the stockholders having voted on February 28, 1927, to increase the common stock of 500,000 shares to the present 1,000,000 shares. The dividend rate was raised from $5 to 6 a share on April 30, 1928.

The regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 will be paid to stockholders of record December 12, 1928, on January 2, 1929, the directors decided at the October meeting in New York.

POLICE-CAR RADIO SETS MAY BE USED IN WAR ON CRIME

Broadcasting Plan Used in Detroit Advocated Here by Head of Atlanta Police Committee.

BY HERMAN D. HANCOCK.

Modern science, radio, will be utilized to break the backbone of crime in Atlanta, should the success being experienced in Detroit in capturing criminals red-handed, often in 60 seconds after police headquarters have been notified, prove feasible for this city, Alderman Charles J. Murphy, of the eleventh ward, and chairman of the police committee of council, stated Saturday night.

Alderman Murphy's plan includes a central broadcasting station of 250 or 500 watts in power and the equipping of Atlanta's 30 police cars with receiving sets sealed to the wave length of the police broadcasting station.

Cars Termed "Cruisers."

The police cars, known in Detroit as "cruisers," would be on the move night and day, cruising through every part of the city. Time—that vital factor which is the greatest aid police can have in the apprehension of criminals—would be cut to minimum between the act of crime and the presence of the police at the scene.

Alderman Murphy declared that he would submit the proposal to the police committee of city council with a view of using every available means at the department to free Atlanta from its lawless element and to enforce the laws.

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale also said he was interested in the matter and would offer any assistance possible to help the committee in its effort to curb lawlessness in Atlanta and Fulton county. Assistance of City Electrician R. C. Turner will be sought in the effort to ascertain the cost of installation.

Time Most Vital Factor.

"Time is the most vital factor in tracking criminals and if it can be reduced by use of the radio, I shall be one of the first to champion it," Mr. Murphy said. "I have noted with interest what has been done in Detroit. It seems to me if such results could be obtained there by utilization of the radio, we could do it here.

"I shall take the matter up with experts, and then submit a plan to the police committee asking it to equip all the city cars with loud speakers tuned in with a central short wave length station broadcasting from the police department. Fulton county cars could be similarly equipped and they could be of assistance to us and we to them.

"I feel that the matter is of great importance and should be given a we found it would be impracticable to thus equip all the cars, we could hook up a few and try them out as an experiment. I am of the opinion that Atlanta should give the proposition a trial."

Now a Matter of Seconds.

Snaring criminals in a radio network woven by the police broadcasting station and swift radio-equipped police cruisers has become a matter of seconds with the Detroit police department, one of the first to enlist radio in the never-ending battle against crime and the criminal.

Burglars, car thieves, bandits, hit-run drivers and racketeers have come to fear this new police weapon—a weapon that has caused more than 400 arrests in an average time of 77 seconds each in the past eight months.

Burglars have been caught while they still were piling up their loot in Detroit homes. Bewildered automochance in Atlanta if the cost would be reasonable. If, after investigation,

WHITE WOMAN STRUCK TO GROUND BY SNATCH THIEF

Striking a white woman to the ground to snatch her pocketbook, a chunky, light-colored negro snatch-theif ran rampant in Atlanta Saturday night with three robberies and a total of $23 as loot.

Miss Evelyn Anderson, of 1044 W. Peachtree street, was struck down near her home when she resisted the negro. He took her purse containing $5. Mrs. H. C. Fischer, of 122 Baker street, lost a pocketbook containing $8 to the snatch-thief at Williams and Baker street. George Felt, of East Point, lost $10 to him at Peachtree and Harris as he stood counting his money, with his bill fold in his hand.

ATLANTA INJURED BY CRIME WAVE

Dr. Sam Small Points Out Damage Caused by Publication of Recent Killings in City.

BY DR. SAM SMALL.

Washington, December 8.—(Special.)—One day this week the newspapers here printed four press dispatches from Atlanta reporting crimes, including two murders and as many shooting affairs. The array led one of our Georgia representatives to remark: "They are killing 'em now in Atlanta at the rate of about one a day!"

The comment was an exaggeration plain enough, but it indicated a growing belief that Atlanta is acquiring an unenviable repute as a crime center. Something to that effect was mentioned in an editorial in The Constitution recently and that may have colored the congressman's comment.

Crime does not, as a rule, bulletin itself in advance. Most offenses against the person are committed in a sudden heat of passion, motivated by quick anger, hatred and the opportunity for revenge, while some others are the results of calculated premeditation and desperately fixed purpose.

Sheriffs and policemen are not clairvoyants who can visualize a person's crime in advance of its perpetration. Therefore, they are not to be charged with the prevalence of a wave of assaults and homicides. The best that can be demanded of them is detective ability and diligence in discovering the criminals and bringing them promptly to the bar of justice.

Modernity Makes for Murder.

Atlanta is no worse in degree as a crime arena than the average American city of rapid and cosmopolitan growth. It has been adopting and cultivating the "keeping up with the Joneses" complex. It has been imitating and exaggerating the customs and habits of the "white ways" and night clubs of New York and Chicago, not to extend the comparison to the purlieus of Piccadilly and Paris.

The clean, orderly and superb social character of Atlanta's representative citizens gets small public recognition outside their inner and protected circles, because it is so constantly obscured by the blinding magnesium flares of disorder and crime, flashing out from our underworld—which isn't so far "under" as it ought to be.

Modern life now is a "highball" mixed from free-thought in morals, freedom from social and legal obligations and the jazz appetite for liberties that have been tabu to decent people since the world began. Such liberties light the fires of hell in rotten human hearts, whether male or

KING'S PHYSICIAN DECLARES PATIENT IS MUCH BETTER

In First Interview Ever Granted by a Ruler's Doctor, Lord Dawson Explodes Rumors.

BREAKS PRECEDENT TO INFORM U. S.

Infection Has Been Localized But Absence of Pleural Fluid Obviates Need of Incision.

Lord Dawson of Penn, the king's doctor, granted the United News an exclusive statement tonight discussing in detail the king's case and revealing for the first time from an authoritative source the full nature of the illness as it stands at present. Such a statement, made to acquaint the people of the world with the king's condition, is unprecedented on the history of the English court. The only similar statement was made by Lord Dawson in a formal letter to the cabinet last week.

Lord Dawson has been physician-in-ordinary to the king since 1907 and to the Prince of Wales since 1923. He attended the present king's father, Edward VII. He is one of the most distinguished medical men in the world and is the author of a wealth of medical treatises used universally by doctors and medical colleges. Among his many titles and degrees is that of S. C. D. granted by the University of Pennsylvania in 1925.

BY CLIFFORD L. DAY,
United News Staff Correspondent.

London, December 8.—Lord Dawson, of Penn, physician-in-ordinary to the king, told the United News tonight that the king is holding his own against his illness, and in the last 24 hours his progress has been on the upgrade.

There would be no object in an operation, he said.

It had been understood that an operation on the king was planned for tomorrow, but Lord Dawson said that since there was no appreciable pleural effusion there would be no object in an operation.

Stops Alarmist Rumors.

Lord Dawson emphasized his desire for a cessation of "Alarmist rumors," circulating in the United States, and for that reason agreed to authorize a statement of the facts.

It was the first occasion that any of the king's doctors have authorized a direct quotation.

Lord Dawson's statement follows:

"Since the infective process which a week ago was generalized, one now is localized in the lung.

"There has been localized an infec-

ROTHSTEIN PAPERS BREAK DOPE RING

Federal Officers Uncover Narcotic Trades by Tracing Names Listed in Gambler's Ledger.

New York, December 8.—(United News.)—The neat ledger sheets on which Arnold Rothstein jotted down various items of his business transactions have proved a heavy bludgeon to the underworld—that is, that part of the underworld interested in dope selling.

Information from these papers—jestingly referred to on Broadway a week ago as "mere scraps of paper"—have led to seizure of $2,000,000 in narcotics in New York, arrest of a man in Buffalo and a woman in Chicago and federal authorities claim an international dope ring is broken.

In addition, these arrests and seizures may give light to who killed Rothstein and also who killed a number of other New York underworld prominents.

Ledgers Cause Discomfort.

A woman and a man, as mysterious and as little known about as most of those questioned in connection with Arnold Rothstein's death, were held for questioning in New York by federal authorities. They merely are witnesses, federal authorities said.

All four of the people held—Joseph Unger, in Buffalo; Mrs. June Boyd, in Chicago; Miss Esther Myers and "Crying Sam" Lowe, in New York—

Morningside Section To Light

MAYOR RAGSDALE HEADS RESIDENTS IN MOVE

Lawns, Trees for Christmas

BY ELMO HAMBY.

With the name of Mayor I. N. Ragsdale heading the list, residents of the beautiful Morningside section, one of the finest residential areas of the city, will light their living trees this Christmas season in response to a request issued Saturday night by Albert G. Mathews, newly-elected president of the Morningside Civic league.

Discussion of the plan advocated and sponsored by The Constitution for the Camp Fire girls, to have every Atlanta home this Yuletide shed a message of cheer to the outside world through the lighting of lawn trees and shrubbery, was held among members of the league Friday night, and all present unanimously were in favor of adopting the plan for their own section. This feeling on the part of the meeting led Mr. Mathews Saturday night to ask The Constitution to carry the following message for him to Morningside residents:

Response to Invitation.

"In keeping with the work the Morningside Civic league has done and is doing to maintain the Morningside section as one of the most beautiful and choice residential sections in the city, it is fitting that we of Morningside respond to the invitation of the Camp Fire Girls, through The Constitution, to make our homes places of warm color and cheer this Christmas.

"It has been pointed out by The Constitution that the plan is inexpensive, but that should not constitute a matter of consideration at all. Many of us last Christmas lighted our lawn trees and shrubbery, and the result was the transformation of each home into a little fairyland of happiness and light.

"This year, let us widen the scope of this plan and make this entire section a magic place of light; and, further, in cooperation with other clubs make the entire city a personification of the spirit which prevails at the observance time of the birth of Christ."

Ragsdale In Vanguard.

Atlanta's chief executive, Mayor Ragsdale, always in the vanguard of those who lead in the finest civic movements, enthusiastically indorsed the project and told The Constitution Saturday that his household already was engaged in planning the lighting of the exterior of the home.

Mayor Ragsdale and the Morningside league join with Governor Hardman and the Ansley Park league, who already have signified their intention of lighting their living trees this Christmas.

The plan of making the exterior of the home reflective of the cheer prevalent within was begun in Atlanta by the Camp Fire Girls and The Constitution last year and response to introduction of the plan last Christmas was wonderful.

This year, it seems that the entire city will be joined together in the move. The Constitution invites other civic leagues to unite with those who already have taken concerted action in the plan.

Prizes in Big Movietest Contest in Constitution Won by Two Georgians

Three Automobiles Are Captured by Sam Dewson, of Decatur, and Mrs. W. P. Harker, of Atlanta

In what is generaly acknowledged to be The Atlanta Constitution's most fascinating contest, and with scores of contestants urging The Constitution to conduct a similar contest, Sam S. Dewson, 156 Feld avenue, Decatur, Ga., wins both the Hudson Super-Six sedan and the Essex sedan; and Mrs. W. P. Harker, 378 Eighth street, Atlanta, wins the Essex coach, according to announcements of the judges of The Movietest, just prior to The Constitution's press time Saturday, December 8.

F. M. Seagle, of Charlotte, N. C., wins the George Steck grand piano, and Mrs. E. R. Hines, of Milledgeville, Ga., wins an orthophonic victrola valued at $300.

New Series Submitted.

Ties exist in the instances of all the remaining prizes, and a second tie-breaking series of 30 cartoons has been sent such contestants as are tied.

The full particulars, including the correct titles of all cartoons, the names and addresses of tieing contestants, etc., are given on a full-page notice published elsewhere in this issue of The Atlanta Constitution.

In Prize List No. 1 Mrs. W. F. Cox, Jr., of Moultrie, Ga., and Ted R. Bowman, 707 Erin avenue, Atlanta, are tied for third and fourth prizes, the bedroom and dining room suites. Each of these contestants is certain of winning either one or the other of the two prizes, the identity of the prize being determined by their answers to be submitted to the second series of tie-breaking cartoons which has been submitted each contestant.

Mrs. Hines Wins Fifth.

Fifth prize in Prize List No. 1, an orthophonic victrola, was won by Mrs. E. R. Hines, of Milledgeville, Ga.

Three contestants, Mrs. S. E. Price, 445 North Highland; Mrs. G. L. Houck, 1000 Boulevard, N. E., and Paul F. Nix, 553 Lee street, S. W., are tied for sixth prize in Prize List No. 1. In accordance with the rules the sixth, seventh and eighth prizes are reserved for these contestants pending receipt of their answers received to the second tie-breaking series of 30 cartoons submitted them. These three prizes will be awarded in the order of the correctness of the forthcoming answers to the new series of 30 cartoons.

Five ties exist for the remaining three prizes in Prize List No. 1. The contestants are Mrs. C. W. Walton, 311 Church street; Rachel Jabaley, Copperhill, Tenn.; Gordon B. Hulme, Kingston, Ga.; Grace Cowart, 301 North Jefferson street, and Margaret E. Roberts, 894 Virginia avenue. As Creator of 'Uncle Remus'

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS WAS BELOVED BY ALL

Born 80 Years Ago Today

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Just 80 years ago today, on December 9, 1848, a baby boy was born in a little frame dwelling in the little town of Eatonton, who later in his life was destined to give to the world some of its quaintest and most charming literature. The boy was Joel Chandler Harris, whose literary career brought to Georgia, to The Atlanta Constitution and to his people the plaudits and appreciation of the entire literary world.

Creator of the immortal "Uncle Remus" stories and writer of numerous other short stories which appeared in some of the leading magazines of the world, Joel Chandler Harris rounded out a career in the field of letters in Atlanta that should be an inspiration to every Georgia boy and girl.

What a legacy of happy smiles and laughter he left in his enchanting tales of "Uncle Remus." The grotesque and ludicrous characters such as "Brer Rabbit," "Ole Brer Fox," "The Tarbaby," "Miss Meadows and de gals," "Miss Sallie." Tales that have brought peals of merry laughter in millions of homes. Tales that have kept wide-eyed children awake far past their bedtime and tales that have brought throbs of pleasure to the hearts of many men and women. Tales that have been told in all languages and which will live forever in the literary annals of his country.

Joel Chandler Harris first began his work in a newspaper office when he was fourteen years old. J. A. Turner, a prominent citizen of Putnam county, conducted a newspaper-magazine on his farm near Eatonton. It was called "The Countryman" and young Harris obtained a place as "printer's devil" on this publication by answering an advertisement. From that time to his death in 1908 his career was developed in newspaper offices.

Contact With Slaves.

While working on "The Countryman," the lad came into contact with many negro slaves on the plantation of Mr. Turner. The old place was called "Turnwold" and was a typical ante-bellum mansion of the days "befo' de war." As the lad worked on this place he talked with many negroes, learned from them many of the entrancing stories he later was to immortalize in "Uncle Remus."

With the close of the war between the states the impoverished conditions of the country brought an end to "The Countryman" and the Harris boy looked around for new frields. He tried Macon for a short time and later went to New Orleans, where he worked a few months. Returning to Georgia he obtained a post on "The Advertiser," a small paper printed at Forsyth. After a short time here he went to Savannah, where he worked on a newspaper. Here he met Miss Esther Le Rose, a Canadian girl, whom he married on April 21, 1873. He remained in Savannah several years until "the yellow fever scare" came, when he moved to Atlanta.

Arriving in Atlanta in 1877 he registered at the hotel as "J. C. Harris and wife, two bow-legged children and a bilious nurse." He knew the late Henry W. Grady and through him met Captain Evan P. Howell, at that time editor of The Constitution, and obtained a position on The Constitution staff.

Began Dialect Stories.

Soon after he went to work on The Constitution he began to write his negro dialect stories. In 1878 and 1879 the "Uncle Remus" stories began to appear. "Uncle Remus" actually was an aged Putnam county negro who made his home on the Turner plantation.

The famous author always declared that his career was an "accident," and for many years he maintained that his stories possessed no literary value. But they found such popular favor that his fame soon became world-wide, and there was a steady demand for his books, which has in no whit decreased in the present day.

Mr. Harris was a close personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt, Captain Evan Howell, Dr. Sam W. Small, Washington correspondent of The Constitution; Henry W. Grady, the famous editor of The Constitution; Clark Howell, present editor of The Constitution; Frank L. Stanton, the famous Georgia poet, who was a coworker on The Constitution with Harris; James Whitcomb Riley, the Indiana poet, who once visited Harris, and Stanton; Mark Twain, and numerous other men of letters of his day.

"Loving, Tender Nature."

One of his associates, speaking of the personal charm and genial humor of the famous Georgian, said.

"His was a loving, tender and true nature, with strong character and fine principles."

Through his writings Mr. Harris soon became prosperous and built a delightful home on Gordon street, Atlanta. He called this home "The Wren's Nest," and the outlying land he called "Snap Bean Farm." The home today is a shrine for the pilgrimages of numerous admirers and many people pay it a visit while passing through Atlanta. At "The Wren's Nest" he wrote many of his best stories.

Among his stories besides the "Uncle Remus" stories are "Free Joe," "Gabriel Tolliver," "The Mysteries of the Red Fox," "On the Plantation," "Stories of Georgia," "Evening Tales," "A Little Union Scout," "Wady Walderson" and "The Wings of Occasion."

With "Uncle Remus" Magazine.

For a time Mr. Harris was identified with "Uncle Remus' Magazine," which enjoyed national popularity. Mr. Harris' sons are well-known and popular citizens of Georgia. Lucian Harris served as tax collector of Fulton county, and is now in the bond and insurance business. Evelyn Harris, anther son, holds a responsible post with the Southern Bell Telephone company. Julian Harris is editor and owner of the Columbus Enquirer-Sun, formerly was editor of the Paris edition of the New York Herald and was managing editor of that paper. Joel Chandler Harris, Jr., is in the advertising business. A daughter is Mrs. Edwin Camp, wife of Edwin Camp, prominent Atlanta newspaper man.

"His was a loving, tender and true nature," said his old friends and this is thoroughly proved when a person reads his ever-delighting tales of the old southland.

THIRD MAN GETS POST OF SHERIFF IN CAROLINA RACE

Kinston, N. C., December 8.—(AP)—The race isn't always won by the fastest horse, neither does the winner of a political post always take office. But it is seldom that the third man in a political race gets the office.

That, though, is what happened here.

Lenoir county electors chose Matthew Tyndall for sheriff at the November election. Tyndall had not looked up the wages the sheriff makes in this county. When he found out that to take office would mean a heavy cut in his income he declined to qualify.

The county commissioners elected W. Snow Nunn, a leading candidate in the democratic primary. Nunn declined. Then Wiley T. Moseley, who ran third in the primary, was chosen. Moseley qualified.

THREE MEN KILLED AND THREE HURT IN TANKER BLAST

Port Arthur, Texas, December 8.—(AP)—Three unidentified men were killed and at least three injured in an explosion on the Gulf Refining company tanker Gulfland at 5:30 a. m. today. The bodies of the three men were so badly burned that identification was impossible until ship's papers could be checked.

Fire, which followed, was checked shortly after 8 a. m. The cause of the explosion, which occurred in the pumproom of the vessel, remained undetermined.

The pumproom was just below the crew's quarters and many of the seamen escaped by jumping into the ship canal when the blast rocked the vessel.

The ship was maneuvered from the gasoline loading docks immediately afterward to prevent a more serious blast, and took an isolated berth in the turning basin, where efforts to check the flames were conducted.

The Gulfland arrived yesterday afternoon and had docked at the gasoline docks to load gasoline for coastwise ports.

LINDBERGH PARTY SPENDS 4 HOURS HUNTING BIRDS

Richmond, Va., December 8.—(AP) Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, Harry Guggenheim, of the Guggenheim Foundation for the Promotion of Aeronautics, and Governor Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, together with other members of the party, landed at the Byrd airport here shortly after 6 o'clock this afternoon after spending about four hours bird-hunting in Rockingham county. They were guests at dinner tonight at the home of W. T. Reed, of Richmond.

Colonel Lindbergh left the field this afternoon with four birds out of six shots. The bag of the entire party showed 21 partridges, seven pheasants and one rabbit.

Those making the trip with Colonel Lindbergh from Richmond to Waynesboro by plane for the shooting, besides Mr. Guggenheim and Governor Byrd, were Henry G. Shirley, Virginia state highway commissioner; Nelson Page, of Winchester, Va., and Harry F. Byrd, Jr., young son of the governor.

In the field the party from Richmond was joined by Hugh B. Sproul, of Staunton, Va., who was host to members of the hunting party, and Major A. Willis Robertson, of Lexington, state game warden. Mrs. Sproul and her daughter, Miss Eugenia Sproul, served lunch in the field.

MACHINE GUN USED IN BANK ROBBERY IN COLUMBUS, OHIO

Columbus, Ohio, December 8.—(AP) For the first time in Ohio bank banditry, machine guns were used here today by four men who held up the Linden branch of the First Citizens Trust company and escaped with about $6,000 in cash.

Three of the bandits entered the bank singly, unmasked and with their firearms concealed under overcoats. The fourth remained in an automobile parked in front of the bank.

When the three were inside mingling with the 15 customers, one of them sprang upon a table and pointing a machine gun commanded the patrons and the four bank employees to lie face down in a corner of the room. Another stood at a distance with leveled revolvers. The third scooped up the loose money in the tellers cages and placing it in a black bag, dashed for the waiting automobile. The others then followed.

Walker Wins Fight To Have Trial Held In Macon Courtroom

Savannah, Ga., December 8.—(AP)—Judge William H. Barrett has signed an order in United States district court transferring the case against John D. Walker to Macon for trial.

This announcement was made today by Alex A. Lawrence, Savannah, counsel for Walker, and the announcement was confirmed at the district attorney's office.

Walker, indicted for embezzlement of $9,000 in sinking fund bonds of Sparta on deposit with the National Bank of Sparta in 1915, has been in jail here for the last few weeks, unable to furnish bond.

No indication was forthcoming as to the time that Walker will be tried. This will be determined later.

MEXICAN CRISIS ENDED BY CALLES' ATTITUDE

Former President Clears Political Air by Support of Portes Gil.

Mexico City, December 8.—(AP)—A political situation which for two days gave rise to grave worries appeared today to have been shorn of its principal menace through the attitude of former President Calles in refusing to oppose the government of his successor, Portes Gil.

Decision of the C. R. O. M., the Mexican Federation of Labor, to split with the government coupled with the manifest friendship of Calles toward the labor organization led to the fear that the former president, whose following is large, might support the stand of the labor organization. This would involve Calles and his followers in a dispute with the present administration and create a situation of serious possibilities.

Although the situation apparently has eased somewhat there was evidence of bitter feelings. A noisy throng outside the national chamber of deputies was dispersed by city firemen who turned a hose on them. The crowd was denied admittance to the chamber where the situation was being discussed and was shouting "long live Manrique, death to Morones." Luis N. Morones was secretary of labor under President Calles and is president of C. R. O. M. Aurelia Manrique, an agrarian deputy, led the attack on Calles and Morones in the discussion in the chamber.

The climax of the situation apparently was reached, however, when former President Calles issued a formal declaration allaying fears that he might throw his influence against the government. He even went further and lauded Portes Gil as a representative of legality and the revolutionary ideals and recommended that the army and the public support the present president.

As proof of his sincerity Calles announced his resignation from the presidency of the national revolutionary party and said that he was retiring definitely from public life.

The assurance that the Calles faction would not oppose the government was generally regarded as removing the principal element of danger from the situation. It was believed that the opposition of C. R. O. M. without the support of Calles did not threaten grave consequences although it would prove a troublesome problem.

After Calles had announced his retirement Aaron Saenz, who had appeared to be the most likely choice of the revolutionary party as its presidential candidate, resigned from the organizing committee of the party. He explained that his resignation was due to the political events of the last two days. He said he desired to leave the various groups which composed the party free to take a new attitude toward his candidacy if they desired to do so.

The retirement of Calles from the party in which he was the prime mover left the bothersome question of deciding upon his successor. It will be necessary to find a leader popular enough to weld the various revolutionary groups into one strong organization.

The newspaper El Universal said today that the labor party which represents C. R. O. M. in politics would hold a convention next Wednesday to nominate a presidential candidate. The principal name under discussion is that of the party's president, Morones. Reynaldo Cervantes Torres was elected secretary general of the labor organization, succeeding Ricardo Trevino, whose term had expired.

Morones told the labor convention that if there was any violence against its members the unions throughout the country would lay down their tools and refuse to work. Officials of the organization said that unions not affiliated with it had notified them of their desire to act with the organization in event of "anti-labor activities."

J. F. Monroe Funeral.

Waycross, Ga., December 8.—(Special.)—Funeral services for Joseph Franklin Monroe, of Savannah, who died in Waycross Thursday night, will be conducted at the Bethel church, 13 miles from Waycross at 3:30 Sunday afternoon. Rev. John S. Wilder, pastor of the Calvary Baptist chruch, officiating. The interment will be in thel cemetery.

Mr. Monroe, who was 78 years old, died while visiting his son, M. M. Monroe, in Waycross. He was for many years in the mercantile business in Savannah.

He is survived by three sons, W. P. I. Monroe, of Savannah; M. M. Monroe, of Waycross, and R. S. Monroe, of Charlotte, N. C., and by four daughters, Mrs. T. R. Hannevig, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. G. S. Haymans, Atlanta; Miss Gertrude Monroe, Spokane, Washington, and Mrs. W. B. Gilmer, Louisa, Va.

MARINE INSURANCE EXPERT IS DEAD

Essex, Conn., December 8.—(AP)—J. Floyd Johnson, vice president of the United States Merchants and Shippers Insurance company, who was regarded as one of the foremost experts in marine insurance in the country, died at his home here yesterday.

He was chairman of the New York board of underwriters and during the war served in Washington as a "dollar-a-year" man on a special commission.

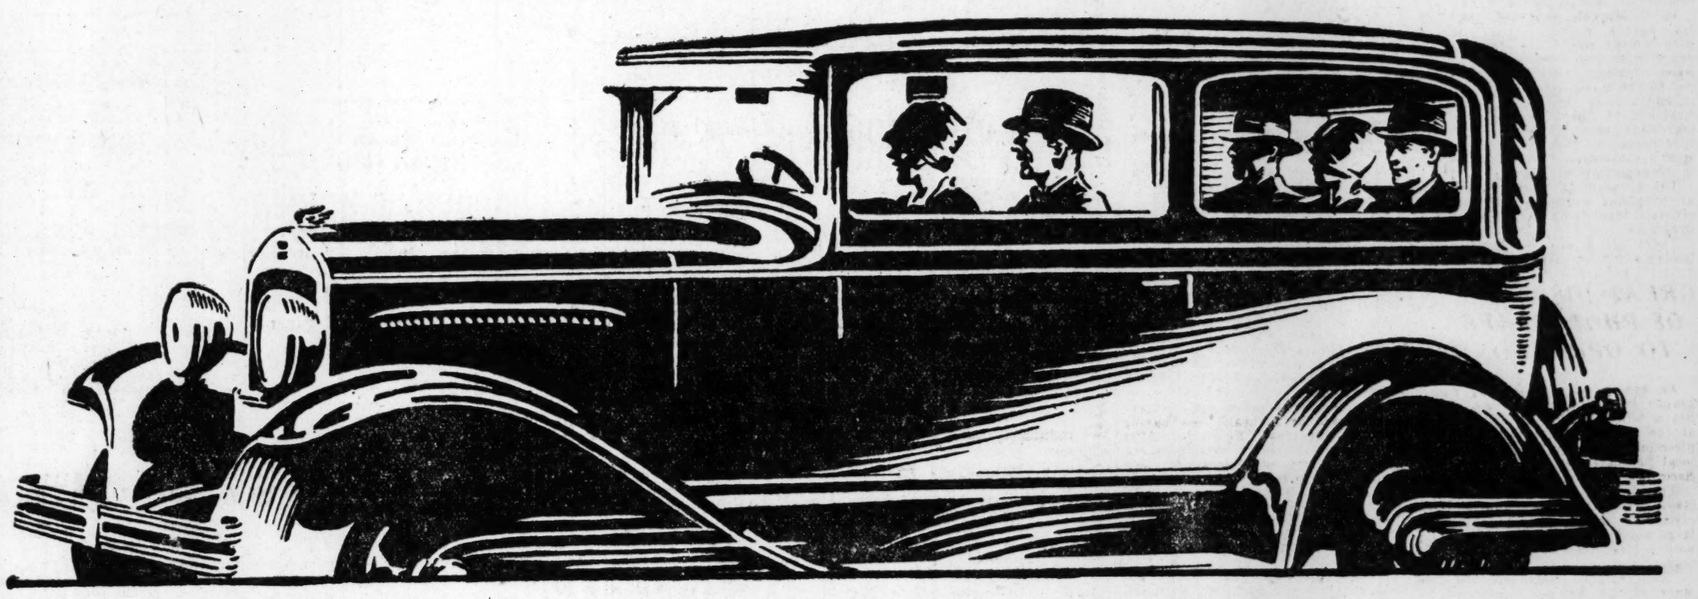
PLYMOUTH...
Still the biggest dollar value in the lowest-priced field



When all is said and done the greatest value a motor car can hand back to the buyer for his dollars is the comfort he gets out of every minute and every mile of driving and riding.

Full-Size and Comfort—Plymouth is actually the only full-size car in its price field, offering generous head room, leg room and elbow room for five adult passengers.

Marked Economy—Modern high-compression, 4-cylinder L-head engine gives marked economy of operation and upkeep. Longer engine life assured by Plymouth's exclusive torque reaction neutralizer, rubber engine mountings. Modern positive pressure feed oiling system.

Hydraulic Brakes—Chrysler light-action internal-expanding hydraulic weather-proof four-wheel brakes are used by Plymouth—a feature possessed by no other car near its price. Larger tires make for easier riding and longer mileage.

Impressive Power—45 H.P. engine gives characteristic Chrysler power, speed and acceleration coupled with unbelievable smoothness of operation. Speed with greater safety due to larger crankshaft bearings, inherent balance and general ruggedness of construction.

This greater degree of hour-by-hour, day-by-day and month-by-month comfort depends first upon that certainty of performance which Chrysler engineering has always given—and gives in superlative measure in the Plymouth.

But it also depends to a very marked and special extent upon another outstanding Chrysler characteristic—the riding and driving proportions of the car—the ease and restfulness of the seats and springs, but above all the size, which in Plymouth enables every passenger to relax and stretch without being cramped.

Plymouth owners appreciate further the safety of hydraulic internal-expanding weather-proof 4-wheel brakes which give instant and always positive stopping in any weather.

The Plymouth being Chrysler-designed is, of course, beautiful beyond anything in the low-priced field—it reveals at a glance the high grade of its upholstery, the fine quality of its cushions and springs.

In action the Chrysler-built Plymouth is a gem of soft, velvety roadability with a modern, scientific power plant such as you can always count upon from Chrysler engineers.

It is a model of economy—not merely in gas and oil mileage of its simple, sturdy, four-cylinder L-head engine, but in freedom from complications and a strong simplicity of parts which holds the upkeep costs down to a minimum throughout the year.

For convenience in driving, it has throttle and light controls on the steering wheel, as in the more expensive cars.

$675 AND UPWARDS

Give yourself the enjoyment of half an hour behind the Plymouth wheel today—and see how the test of comparison and contrast with anything in its class reveals Plymouth as the greatest dollar-value in the lowest-priced field.

Roadster (with rumble seat) $675; Coupe $685; Touring $695; 2-Door Sedan $700; De Luxe Coupe (with rumble seat) $735; 4-Door Sedan $735. All prices f. o. b. Detroit. Plymouth dealers are in position to extend the convenience of time payments. (309)

RUM SMUGGLING CASE GOES TO JURY MONDAY

Trial Takes Unexpected Turn in Closing; Expect Verdict Tomorrow Night.

Savannah, Ga., December 8.—(AP)—Defense in the Bailey-Tuten conspiracy case, as it has come to be termed, no won trial in the United States district court here and which involves the alleged smuggling into this country and distribution of 20,000 quarts of whiskey, concluded its case unexpectedly Saturday with only two of the defendants giving any testimony. These defendants were C. V. Cox, of Brunswick, and M. D. Morgan, of Dorchester, also known as Joe Morgan. Both defendants denied any complicity in the alleged violation of federal prohibition laws.

The government then closed its case and Judge Barrett announced that arguments would begin Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock, two and a half hours being allowed each side for summing up and arguing to the jury. The charge of the court will most likely be reached Monday afternoon and a verdict, if any is returned, will be expected Monday night.

None of the principal defendants, which include Richard Bailey, Chesley Tuten, Cleve Curtis, and Bob Walton, was put on the stand. The large number of character witnesses which were anticipated, failed to materialize.

Judge Barrett received a request from some of the jurors to be allowed to take trips during Sunday, the requests emanating from wives of the jurors. The court said he would permit this to be done Sunday but that bailiffs of the court must accompany the touring parties, no matter how many separate parties were enjoying the day. Provision will be made thereby that jurors may not discuss the case with any one.

C. V. Cox in his testimony in his own behalf said he was acting as purchasing agent for Hall-Mason company and was directed to ship to them in New Jersey a quantity of cross arms for telegraph poles. This he said he did in a more or less superficial way, and did not actually know the contents of the freight cars. The government found that there was much valuable liquor in the shipment. Cox denied any connection with the finding of the liquor.

M. D. Morgan, on whose place federal agents found a truck littered with whisky labels and strip stamps, denied also any complicity in the alleged violations. Five witnesses were put on the stand to prove his presence in and around Dorchester during the week-end of Labor day and for several days prior to and thereafter, this being to disprove the government's contention that he was active in transporting the liquor.

The government wound up its case by telephone and telegraph company officials identifying call charges and telegrams.

There are a total of fourteen defendants in the case.

GREAT DISPLAY OF PHOTOGRAPHS TO OPEN MONDAY

An exhibit of prize-winning photographs from all parts of the United States will be on display all this week at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, under direction of Walton Reeves, prominent local photographer, it was announced Saturday.

The display was obtained by Mr. Reeves from the Photographers' Association of America, and contains a large number of photographs, covering both portraiture and commercial photography.

"This exhibit represents the best work of the leading American photographers," Mr. Reeves said. "Each subject in the exhibit was a prize winner in the National Photographers' exhibit. Every conceivable angle of photography is represented, 'modernistic, futuristic and conventional.'"

The exhibit, which is free, will be open to the public from Monday to Saturday, inclusive, from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m.

JULIETTE FARMER SHOOTS GIANT OWL

Juliette, Ga., December 7.—(Special.)—One of the largest hooting owls seen in this part of the state for a number of years was killed recently by A. L. Mahaffey.

The wing spread of the owl from tip to tip measured 51 inches. His feet were large enough to grip the wrist of a man and his head was about the size of a 2-year-old child's. He weighed more than 12 pounds.

When killed, the owl was in the act of devouring a chicken.

Poultry owners of this section report heavy losses lately as a result of depredations by owls and a large number of unusually large owls have been killed recently. Not only are owls unusually plentiful around here but according to the oldest residents they are the largest specimens ever seen in this section.

ADAIR TRIAL RECORDS WILL BE VOLUMINOUS

300 Exhibits Already Introduced in Evidence by Government.

Gainesville, Ga., December 8.—(AP) Records in the Adair mail fraud case, in which four former officials of the bankrupt Adair Realty and Trust company, of Atlanta, are on trial, charged with fraud in the use of the mail in connection with hotel projects in Birmingham, Ala., Knoxville, Tenn., and Little Rock, Ark., promise to be some of the most voluminous in the history of Georgia courts.

Clint W. Hager, United States district attorney, leading the prosecution in federal court here, said yesterday that approximately 300 exhibits already had been introduced in evidence by the government as part of its effort to convict Forrest Adair, Sr., Forrest Adair, Jr., Frank Adair and Evans A. Erwin, the former officials.

Three More Weeks Seen.

The case, which already has run the greater part of three weeks, bids fair to require another three for its completion. The district attorney intimated that it might be week after next before the government rested its case. Attorneys for the defense had said that they probably would require a week for the presentation of their side of the story.

So far, the prosecution has used much of its time in laying a foundation, but this week began the introduction of evidence in an effort to lend concrete supports to its charges that the officials on trial fraudulently misrepresented the nature of the hotel bonds which they sold and in addition diverted the money obtained from their sale to private uses.

Testimony Regarding Operations.

Chief among this evidence has been testimony regarding Adair operations in Whitfield Estates, Inc., at Sarasota, Fla., the St. Francis hotel and apartment buildings at San Antonio, Texas, statements from bond buyers, and as a last development, testimony of Miss J .W. Minton, of Barbourville, Ky., that she sold fine show horses to Frank Adair and received payment in a check on the Adair Realty and Trust company.

While attorneys for the defense today returned to Atlanta, the district attorney and his assistants spent the day in indexing the piles of documentary evidence.

"There's much of it, but it wouldn't be worth anything to us unless we could find it," Mr. Hager said.

Woman Slashes Throat Because Of Her Ill-Health

Loganville, Ga., December 8.—(Special.)—Miss Roberta Bennett, 42 years old, member of one of the most prominent familes of this section of Georgia, died at noon Saturday as the result of slashes on her throat said to have been self-inflicted with a safety razor blade. Miss Bennett died at the home of her sister, Mrs. R. G. Livsey, of Ozora, four miles north of Loganville.

Miss Bennett's act is said to have been caused by ill health, she having been ill since last February. Miss Bennett is survived by three brothers, J. W. Bennett, of Greensboro, Ga.; John Bennett, of Florida, and Nathan Bennett, of Washington, Ga.; and five sisters, Mrs. Bennett Moore, Mrs. Ike McGaughey and Mrs. Eliza Tribble, of Monroe, Ga.; Mrs. Bart Simonton, of Lawrenceville, Ga., and Mrs. Livsey.

Funeral services and interment will take place at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon at Shiloh church near Loganville. F. Q. Sammons, of Lawrenceville, is in charge.

PENSIONER OF KING LIVES IN BROOKLYN, AND A. P. PROVES IT

New York, December 8.—(AP)—Brooklyn learned today that one of its residents was one of the few perpetual pensioners of King Charles II, of England.

The recipient of the seventeenth century monarch's bounty is George W. Pendrell, 74, a descendant of the Pendrells, of England, who helped Charles hide in an oak tree when the king was fleeing from Oliver Cromwell's army. So grateful was he that after the restoration he granted a charter providing that his benefactors and their descendants should receive forever afterward a bounty in token of a king's thanks.

The gratuity, passing down the generation to the eldest son, yields Mr. Pendrell about $400 annually. He is said to be the only King Charles pensioner in the United States. Dr. Francis E. Walker, of St. John, N. B., descended from Mrs. Elizabeth Pendrell Yates, gets about $45 annually. Thirty-eight other recipients of the payment are scattered throughout the world, receiving from two to 40 pounds sterling a year.

WINTER GREENS WILL BE OPENED AT CITY PARKS

Winter greens of the Piedmont park and James L. Key municipal golf courses will be opened today, according to announcement Saturday of Wilson Matthews, golf expert employed to maintain city links. The greens are in good condition, Mr. Matthews says, and will be maintained in good condition throughout the winter.

Calling attention to the fact that course rules prescribed that golfing shoes must be worn, Mr. Matthews cautioned feminine players against using high-heeled shoes, since these are highly injurious to the greens.

School Contracts To Be Considered At Meeting Monday

Following adversement last Monday of contract awards for a group of 10 school buildings, the contract committees of the board of education and the bond commission again will consider the contracts at a meeting called by George W. Powell, president of the school board for 4:30 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Recommendations made at this meeting will be placed before the board of education at its regular December meeting Tuesday.

All contractors' bids will be considered by the committees and an effort made to recommend an award that will be equitable and economical and will meet the approval of city council.

The contracts in question are for additions to the Commercial High, Highland Avenue, Home Park, David T. Howard, Samuel P. Inman, Moreland Avenue, Peeples Street, I. N. Ragsdale, W. F. Slaton and Kirkwood schools.

PRISONER KILLED BY GUARD TRYING TO EFFECT ESCAPE

Tampa, Fla., December 8.—(AP)—Bertrand J. Knowles, 23, of Key West, a prisoner on the county chaingang, was shot and fatally wounded by John Hughes, a guard, this morning as he tried to escape.

The shooting was a climax of four dramatic episodes in Knowles' life this week. He was caught early Wednesday morning slipping out a transom of a big department store with a suit case filled with stolen merchandise. The same day he pleaded guilty to grand larceny and was sentenced to a year on the chaingang. He was taken to the county camp Thursday and given his convict stripes yesterday. He was killed today.

Knowles tried to slip off from his gang, working on a road on the outskirts of the city. A command from Hughes brought no response and the guard fired. Knowles died several hours later at a hospital.

An inquest will be held tomorrow.

CAROLINA HOSPITAL HEAD FACES TRIAL AS EMBEZZLER

Raleigh, N. C., December 8.—(AP)—Dr. Albert Anderson, 69-year-old superintendent of the State Hospital for the Insane, today faced the prospect of another trial in superior court in connection with his administration of the institution.

Solicitor Leon S. Brassfield, who prosecuted the hospital head on malfeasance charge in a two weeks' trial last month, said he would ask Governor McLean for a special term in January to try embezzlement indictments voted against Dr. Anderson. These were found at the same time the malfeasance charges were preferred by the grand jury.

Dr. Anderson was found guilty on two counts of an indictment, involving the working of hospital patients on his private property and acquitted on 13 other counts embracing neglect and cruelty charges. He was sentenced to pay $500 fine and costs, but appealed to the supreme court.

The board of directors of the hospital met this week and after considering all the evidence against the superintendent, announced that he would be continued in office.

FORD'S MUSEUM FOR 'AMERICANA' TO BE BEGUN SOON

Detroit, December 8.—(AP)—Robert O. Derrick, architect, announced today that excavation for construction of the first of the main buildings of Henry Ford's "Americana museum" at Dearborn will start within three weeks.

The architect said the museum, in 17 units, will be completed in two years at a cost of approximately $5,000,000.

Construction of the museum will mean realization of a dream long cherished by Henry Ford. It is to house what he has carefully planned as the greatest collection ever assembled of antiques and modern pieces illustrating the development of home life, agriculture, industry and transportation in the United States, from early colonial days to the present time. The central administration building is to be a replica of Independence hall.

The museum also called the "American Village," will be built between the Ford airport and the engineering laboratories of the Ford Motor company. The ground plan is 1,000 by 800 feet.

S. S. DEWSON WINS MOVIETEST PRIZES

in the case of other tieing contestants, a tie-breaking chart has been submitted each of these five contestants and the three remaining prizes will be won in the order of the correctness of the answers submitted by these contestants to the tie-breaking series.

Dewson Wins Again.

First prize in Prize List No. 2, as in the case of Prize List No. 1, is won by Sam S. Dewson, 156 Feld avenue, Decatur, Ga.

In the case of second prize in Prize List No. 2, there are five ties, the tieing contestants being Mrs. W. P. Harker, 378 Eighth street, N. E. (also winner of the Essex coach in Prize List No. 3); Mrs. Ethel Merrill, of Smyrna, Ga.; Mrs. J. L. Wallace, Ball Ground, Ga.; Mrs. W. F. Cox, Jr., Moultrie, Ga., and Mrs. J. H. Higgins, Gainesville, Ga. In accordance with the rules, prizes 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 have been reserved for these tieing contestants, the determination of the order in which the prizes shall be awarded to await the result of the answers submitted by these contestants to the second tie-breaking series of cartoons submitted to these contestants.

Six contestants remain tied for the remaining four prizes in Prize List No. 2. These contestants are Mrs. Irene Pearson, 504 Pulliam street, Atlanta; Mrs. E. J. Reid, 1606 Emory road, Atlanta, Ga.; James Holmes, Marietta, Ga.; Floyd Nix, Copperhill, Tenn.; Hugh T. Shockley, Spartanburg, S. C., and F. M. Seagle, Charlotte, N. C. The second series of tie-breaking cartoons has been submitted each of the contestants named in the foregoing.

List Number Three.

In Prize List No. 3, Mrs. W. P. Harker, 378 Eighth street, Atlanta, wins first prize. Five ties remain for the second prize, and in accordance with the rules, prizes 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 have been reserved. These tieing contestants are Mrs. Talley Moncrief, LaGrange, Ga.; Mary E. Beacham, Asheville, N. C.; T. E. Johnson, Norcross, Ga.; Helen O. Thomas, LaGrange, Ga., and Mrs. C. H. Kimball, 1643 Jonesboro road, Atlanta. The second series of tie-breaking cartoons has been submitted to these contestants and determination of the prize won by each will await the receipt of their answers to the tie-breaking cartoons.

There are eight ties for the remaining three prizes in Prize List No. 3. The tieing contestants are Mrs. A. B. Kerns, 305 Linden avenue, Macon, Ga.; Miss Geneva Hayes, DeLand, Fla.; Mrs. Paul Stephens, 685 Vernon avenue, Atlanta; Mrs. W. F. Cox, Jr., Moultrie, Ga.; Mrs. G. F. Liles, Lumpkin, Ga.; Floyd Nix, Copperhill, Tenn.; Mrs. J. P. Womble, 39 Maddox drive, Atlanta, and F. N. Lexow, Jacksonville, Fla. The tie-breaking series of 30 cartoons has been submitted to each of the above-named contestants.

Aptitude of Contestants.

Many interesting facts may be drawn from the results of the contest. For instance, the fact that certain contestants seemed to have a greater knack in this contest than others, as evidenced by the fact that the first prize in both Prize List No. 1 and Prize List No. 2 were won by the same contestant. Furthermore, the fact that one contestant, Mrs. W. F. Cox, Jr., of Moultrie, Ga., is tied in all three prize lists, and by virtue of such ties is certain of winning two prizes, and may possibly win three prizes. Also, the fact that the winner of first prize in Prize List No. 3 is also tied for second prize in Prize List No. 2, and by virtue of the standing of the tie is also certain to win a prize in Prize List No. 2. Another contestant tied in two of the prize lists is Floyd Nix, of Copperhill, Tenn.

Another interesting summary is the fact that while there were thousands of perfect sets of answers submitted to the first 30 cartoons, that no contestant achieved a perfect set of answers to the first TIE-BREAKING SERIES. The nearest approach to a perfect list for the tie-breaking series were the answers submitted by Mr. Dewson to Prize List No. 1. In this list Mr. Dewson named 23 of the 30 titles correctly. In his list of answers to Prize List No. 2, Mr. Dewson named 22 titles correctly.

Seale Wins Piano.

F. M. Seale, of Charlotte, N. C., won the George Steck grand piano with 17 correct titles to the tie-breaking series. Mrs. W. F. Cox and Ted R. Bowman each submitted 16 correct titles. Mrs. E. R. Hines submitted 15 correct titles. Mrs. S. E. Price, Paul F. Nix and Mrs. G. L. Houck each submitted 14 correct titles. The remaining tieing contestants in Prize List No. 1 each submitted 13 correct titles.

In Prize List No. 2 Mr. Dewson's list of 22 correct titles out of 30 was nearest correct. Five contestants each submitted 13 correct titles, and five contestants each submitted 12 correct titles.

Mrs. Harker won the Essex coach, first prize in Prize List No. 3, with only 13 correct titles. Five contestants each submitted 12 correct titles, and eight contestants each submitted 11 correct titles.

Another Contest Urged.

Beginning as early as two weeks ago, contestants have been urging The Atlanta Constitution to have another Movietest.

"Give us another chance at this kind of a contest," one contestant writes. "Now I understand how to name the correct titles. Put on another contest like this and I'll win a flock of prizes."

"This is the greatest and most fascinating contest The Constitution has ever presented," another contestant said. "I don't suppose I won a prize, but the enjoyment I got out of solving the titles was more than worth all the energy I put into it."

"This contest was mental exercise that benefitted every person who entered it," another contestant comments.

Cartoons Too Few.

"The only trouble with The Movietest is that there were only 30 cartoons," says another contestant. "I got more fun out of these cartoons than I ever did out of cross-word puzzles. Keep the cartoons running, even if you don't offer any prizes for solving them. The Movietest was the first thing I turned to every morning."

"There have been all sorts of contests," said another. "But I never enjoyed any of them as much as The Movietest. Even if I don't win a prize, I am more than repaid for entering. It was a great thrill, and anyway, it gave everybody the hope that he might win a car—and that's a lot better than having no car at all."

Frank T. Conley, who followed the contest but failed to qualify with subscriptions, takes a more practical view. "You certainly had this part of the country talking Hudson and Essex cars, Phillibosian furniture, Orthophonic victrolas, Kelvinators and Steinite radios. Everywhere a fellow went he bumped into somebody who was trying to win one of those prizes. That was the greatest advertising campaign for The Constitution's merchants that I ever say in my life. I read the ads about the prizes so much that I can almost repeat them from memory, and so can my wife and my two nieces."

Dr. H. M. Copeland Dies.

Fort Valley, Ga., December 8.—(Special.)—Dr. H. M. Copeland, prominent druggist, former mayor, died Saturday from the flu. He is survived by his widow, mother and several sisters who live at Troy, Ala. His funeral will be held here Monday.

Two Government Officials Inspect Postoffice Facilities in Atlanta

Coincident with the visit here Saturday for a tour of personal inspection by John H. Bartlett, first assistant postmaster general, and Carl T. Schuneman, assistant secretary of the treasury, information was received here to the effect that the necessary appropriation for the construction of the urgently-needed new postoffice building would be included in the bill for the construction of public buildings to come before congress after the Christmas holidays and it is thought that a favorable report on Atlanta's needs will be made by Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Schuneman, who spent Saturday in Atlanta to get a first-hand view of the situation here.

The government representatives were met at the station by a number of prominent business and civic leaders, headed by Postmaster E. K. Large and J. K. Ottley, Sr., chairman of the local committee which has been pushing the move for a new federal building. At the offices of Mr. Large, shortly after their arrival, they talked over the policy of the government in dealing with such matters which they said called for a personal inspection of the needs of various communities.

Traveled Over County.

"We have traveled all over the United States in the past year on our tours of inspection," Mr. Bartlett stated, "in order to get first-hand knowledge of local situations. We have detailed statistics and surveys in Washington which are sent in by our agents. These are studied carefully, yet we feel it is always better to go over the ground personally in order to visualize the figures we have."

In regard to the situation here, Mr. Bartlett stated the government was at present paying rent for various buildings scattered throughout the city and that any new building would be designed to accommodate all these offices. If the railway postoffice is to be included a location must be found convenient to the tracks, he said, otherwise a choice will be made from the point of view of a central location, which can conveniently house the present scattered offices.

The chances of any immediate action on the proposed new building are said to be slight. Mr. Bartlett stated that the situation will be thoroughly considered by government authorities but that until that investigation is completel nothing definite will be done towards selecting a site. Opportunity will be given for submitting propositions, he declared.

Guests at Game.

Schuneman and Bartlett were guests of Dr. M. L. Brittain at the Tech-Georgia football game Saturday afternoon and were tendered a dinner at the Capital City club Saturday night, just before they left the city for Jacksonville, their next objective. From here they will travel to Miami and then to a number of west coast Florida cities before returning to Washington. It is thought that their report will be used as a basis for appropriations by congress.

The request of Senator Harris that they visit several Georgia cities where new postoffice buildings are being sought had to be declined as they stated that their limited time prevented their investigating any other city in the state on this trip.

FOURTH NATIONAL BANK IN EXPANSION

broadest possible service to its city, state and section.

The whole history of the Fourth National has been a continuous and consistent record of growth, attesting both to the large opportunity the southeast offers in the field of sound banking and finance and to the able character of the institution's management.

Organized in 1890.

Organized in 1890, with capital of $500,000 and assets of less than $1,000,000, it had grown in 1910 to capital, surplus and profits of $1,224,722.65, with deposits of more than $6,000,000, and total assets of $8,134,737.88. Gaining momentum with progress, these figures had increased at the beginning of this year to capital, surplus and profits of $3,750,000; deposits of $39,423,767.15, and aggregate resources of $44,826,028.56.

Outgrowing in a few years its first quarters, located in the old Gould building on Decatur street, the bank erected its 15-story office building at Five Points, occupying it in January, 1905. There and at its four branches in strategic centers in Atlanta and Decatur, it now serves more than 90,000 patrons.

Another distinction of the bank was that it was the first national bank in Atlanta to establish a savings department. Its woman's department, operated by women for women, was the first in any southern bank, having been established in 1902. It also was the first national bank in Atlanta to establish branches, having put its city-wide system in operation in 1922.

Besides its progressive and pioneering spirit, the Fourth National has been marked by a notable record of continuity in policies and management. Both John K. Ottley, president, and Charles I. Ryan, vice president, were with the institution when it first opened for business, being associated together in its establishment and serving side by side ever since.

A similar distinction is held by Edward C. Peters, who was a member of the institution's board of directors at the outset, and has served it continuously in that capacity throughout its history.

Ottley Heads Roster.

The officers are John K. Ottley, president; Charles I. Ryan, vice president; James D. Robinson, vice president; Robert Strickland, Jr., vice president; W. T. Perkerson, vice president and trust officer; Stewart McGinty, vice president; R. Clyde Williams, vice president; Frank M. Berry, cashier; Edward H. Daly, assistant cashier; Henry B. Longino, assistant cashier; Samuel J. Fuller, assistant cashier; Edgar A. Stubbs, auditor, and W. LeRoy Daughtry, assistant trust officer.

The Fourth National company is headed by Mr. Ottley as president, with Messrs. Ryan, Robinson, Strickland, Perkerson and Williams as vice presidents; Clement A. Evans as secretary and treasuger; W. LeRoy Daughtry as assistant secretary and treasurer, and E. A. Stubbs as auditor. The company's board of trustees is identical with the directorate of the bank.

The Fourth National's branches are located as follows: West End branch, Lee and Gordon streets, West End. Albert G. Mathews, manager; Peachtree and North Avenue branch, Peachtree and North avenue, Ralph A. Huie, manager; Euclid and Moreland branch, Euclid avenue, near Moreland, Paul Bowles, manager; Decatur branch, East Court square, Decatur, Claud H. Blount, manager.

POLICE-CAR RADIO SET MAY BE USED

bile thieves have gaped as a police cruiser roared alongside them just after they had stolen a car.

Speeding hit-run drivers have been captured and returned to the spot where they ran down and left some hapless victim. Bandits have been traced, surrounded and captured. Racketeers and bad-check passers have been caught as the result of swift orders radioed to the cruisers.

The broadcasting station, WSFS, is on Belle Isle, in the Detroit river. The station's transmitter is of the composite, master oscillator, 500-watt amplier type, operating on a wavelength of approximately 150 meters.

Fifteen fast police automobiles, termed "cruisers" because the cars and their crews are kept constantly cruising about the city, have been equipped with receiving sets and loud speakers. Each set and batteries are contained in a steel cabinet which is padlocked. The boxed receiver, together with the loud speaker, sits in a recess cut into the rear of the front seat of the cruisers. The aerial is a network of wires in the top of the car.

Sets Tuned at Station.

The sets are tuned before they leave the radio station, where they are assembled, and as they are locked in the cabinets it is impossible for the cruiser crew to tune out the police station in favor of some other station. The cruisers are under the instant and constant direction of the operator seated at the microphone miles distant.

Tests, experiments and actual use have shown it possible for the cruisers to receive a message or messages anywhere within 150 miles of the station with the car going at any speed.

Shortly after 3 a. m., one night several weeks ago, an excited man called Detroit police headquarters and reported that a prowler was attempting to enter a neighbor's house at 3645 Piquette avenue.

Operator Flashed Warning.

The telephone operator at police headquarters flashed the warning to the broadcasting station by police telephone. Station WSFS went on the air immediately, merely by the throwing of a couple of switches.

Blocks away from Piquette avenue, the Chene station cruiser, in charge of Sergeant George Pettingill and his men, was proceeding quietly along the darkened streets. The numbers of parked automobiles were being scanned and checked with lists of stolen cars. Dark spots were scrutinized, the few pedestrians swiftly observed.

Suddenly, out of the night, came a voice, tense, crisp and clear. The members of the crew stiffened, their senses alert.

"No. 7 cruiser," said the voice. "Fellow trying to get into a house at 3645 Piquette avenue."

No. 7 Speeds on Way.

Scarcely had the words left the loud speaker when No. 7 was rocketing through the night to that address.

"A neighbor called in. Said the fellow was on top of the front porch trying to cut through the screen. No 10's already made one arrest tonight. Do Your stuff."

The cruiser rounded the corner into Piquette avenue. A spotlight stabbed the darkness. It found the house numbers.

The light rested on 3645, then flashed to the roof of the porch as the cruiser stopped. The light enveloped a figure on the roof. The figure, a man, jumped. Stunned by the leap, he was handcuffed before he recovered. Sixty seconds after Station W8FS had shot the warning through the air, the prowler was in custody.

This instance is taken from the log of Station W8FS.

Fifty-eight Scout Cars.

In addition to the cruisers, there are 58 scout cars which are being equipped with receivers and loud speakers as rapidly as possible. One police boat has been equipped with radio, and two others will be soon.

When all the cars and boats have been equipped, it will be possible to mass a number of cars in any one section of the city, and to send a warning to more than 70 police cars and crews simultaneously.

Other cities are interested in what WSFS is accomplishing. Commissioner Rutledge is enthusiastic. He sees the time when it will be possible to have instant radio communication with every individual patrolman in the city. He doesn't attempt to predict how soon that will be, but he feels certain it will come, just as the police radio-equipped cruisers and boats have come.

Meanwhile, the Detroit police are trying to develop to the height of its efficiency this new crime-fighting measure science has given them.

MARINE OFFICER KILLS CHIEFTAIN OF BANDIT GANG

Managua, Nicaragua, December 8. (AP)—The notorious bandit leader, Francisco Centeno, has been killed by Lieutenant James H. Satterfield, of the Nicaraguan national guard in the department of Jinotega, it was announced today.

Centeno was one of the band which killed four members of a liberal propaganda committee in San Marcos, Jinotega, during the registration.

So we're calling this Reo Flying Cloud The Master

He must have been a grand old sea-dog, the Master of the Flying Cloud. Can't you imagine him—taking the wheel himself, driving her under full sail down the Roaring Forties, thrilling (as who would not?) to the feel and mastery of the finest clipper ship that ever rode the seven seas?

And so we call this Reo Flying Cloud The Master. The name of the car and a name that suggests still something else. Get behind the wheel yourself. Feel the thrill when you let her out for speed. Watch her for pickup and brake action. Watch the way she handles. Note the way she hugs the road, paved or dirt, at thirty miles or sixty—the clip at which she'll take a hill. She's a car—as the other Flying Cloud was a ship. And there's a Flying Cloud waiting now for a Master to take her wheel.

GIRL MURDERER STILL AT LARGE

Canton, Ohio, December 8.—(AP)—Confronted with the absence of a single tangible clue to the identity of a pale young woman who called Vernard E. Fearn, 35, a coal mine operator, to the door of his home and shot him to death, authorities tonight turned their investigation to Fearn's private life in the hope of establishing a motive for the killing.

Sheriff Ed Gibson, who took personal charge of the inquiry today, said there was "absolutely nothing new," but nevertheless hoped for developments within a few days. He was convinced, he said, that the woman still is hiding in Canton, and that she cannot long remain undiscovered. Authorities believed she had plotted Fearn's death some time regardless of the consequences.

Funeral services for Fearn, who was shot two days ago on the front porch of his home, south of here, while his wife and nine-year-old daughter, Katheryn, were preparing their evening meal, were held today.

Never Had a Quarrel.

Neither Fearn, who died in her arms, nor his wife were able to give any clues as to the identity of the woman who without a word emptied six bullets from a small pistol into his body and then boarded a bus back to Canton, where she vanished. Fearn gasped to his wife that he had never seen the girl before.

Mrs. Fearn said their ten years of married life had never been marred by even a quarrel.

What had seemed the most promising clue was dissipated today when officers learned that a young woman who had been seen by a bus driver entering a Canton boarding house was the landlady's daughter-in-law. The bus driver had reported that a woman about 22 years old and attractively dressed, which conforms with the description of the slayer, had left his bus and gone to the boarding house.

An investigation of the disappearance of a Mr. and Mrs. Davis from the same rooming house Wednesday also proved fruitless, and it was decided they had no connection with the case. The fact that John Long Star, Indian attendant at the filling station where the slayer signaled for a bus had left suddenly, today also was discarded as having any connection with the case.

Stenographer Questioned.

George Patterson, of Carrolton, driver of the bus on which the killer rode back to Canton, was positive he could identify her. She wore a dark blue Chinchilla coat, a close fitting black felt hat with a bright pin on it, tan shoes and flesh colored stockings, he said. He described her as about five feet four inches tall.

Acting on a tip that appeared to have possibilities if developed along certain lines, Sheriff Gibson late today brought a girl to his office for questioning. The girl, whose name was withheld by the authorities, was quizzed for about thirty minutes and then released. Those who were present at the conference said that she denied knowing Fearn and that she was unable to throw any light on the case.

The report upon which the sheriff acted was that some one was supposed to have seen Fearn with the girl at a picture show about three months ago. This the girl denied.

Sheriff Gibson today denied a report that he had sent a deputy to Fairmount, West Va., to question a young woman named "Ethel Davis," who left Canton Wednesday, the day before the shooting. The sheriff said that he had satisfied himself that Mrs. Davis had no connection with the case.

female, and as logically lead to crime—to lasciviousness, prostitution and murder—as gangrene poison leads to death.

* * * *

There Is No Balm in Gilead.

Let no one charge that this looker is moralizing in Puritanical spirit. On the contrary, I am simply describing actual things that I see, and that any man or woman can see as easily.

Not only do I see those fateful things as they are, but I see no cure for them in sight for some generations to come.

These evil excresences have grown out from our decadent feelings and opinions in spite of the gospel and the preachers of it; in spite of our expanded schools and crowded colleges; in spite of our legislatures and our courts; in spite of our inherited social codes and individual purities. And the mania for the immoral has affected all ages of the moronic; it is not the brain and heart disease of immature youth alone.

As for the younger generation so many of them as are pursuing the "wild life" are to be pited rather than word-blistered. Since home rule has become a lost art in family coops there is no mystery about the immoral abberbations of the human cockerels and chickens that fly out of them.

Most of them, however, would soon come to their better senses if they did not encounter in their excursions so many older persons as morally demented and impudicidly deflected as themselves.

And for so broad and vagarious classes of degenerates, impervious to instruction and immune to shame there is no catholicon either in religion or social consciousness.

The moral peril of our American people is that we are rich enough to be bad. That state was the ruin of Rome and the root of the atheistic, immoral and bloody French revolution.

Crime Flood Control Is Needed.

Just as the volume of the Mississippi swells, and breaks crevasses, and spreads death and myriad disasters by its inundations, so the unrestrained passions of a multitude will overflow social and legal barriers and flood communities with crime.

What stronger proofs do we need of that truth than the recent revelations of the criminal history of Chicago, and Philadelphia, and New York—and Atlanta?

Wherever there is either official collusion with crime, or official leniency in the treatment of criminals, there is logically bound to come a flood of crime upon the community. Again, let the records of Chicago, and Cincinnati, and Philadelphia supply the unimpeachable witnesses and proofs.

And I have observed for many years that one of the most certain ways to license criminals to continue their lawless careers is to indulge them after conviction with "suspended sentences."

Where a statute does not expressly authorize a judge to suspend the sentence he has imposed upon a convicted criminal he does an unlawful act when he orders the sentence suspended.

During President Wilson's administration the supreme court of the United States declared such suspensions illegal and the president had to issue some 5,000 pardons to men whose sentences had been suspended and who were subject, by the court's decision, to rearrest and to serve out in prison their original sentences.

* * * *

We Need Honest-to-God Courts.

From all parts of the country come complaints that the courts are dealing altogether too delicately with our criminal population.

One of the chief causes for the manifest failure of prohibition under the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act is the common practice in the courts by judges and juries to treat violators of the prohibition law as "poor devils who let themselves get caught!"

The records of the department of justice in Washington, sent up from the federal district courts of the nation, demonstrate that in most of them prohibition convictions are jokes!

A city bootlegger laughs at any fine less than a thousand dollars and a country moonshiner, after paying a small fine in a state court, pleads his former conviction and is let off with a federal fine of five or ten dollars! Does that cure, or even deter him? Not according to the records and the testimonies of the prohibition enforcement officers. Mr. Blockader simply gallops back to his mountain spring and proceeds to make more "white mule." And at the next term of court he turns up smiling with his "autrefois convict" from a country court.

Prohibition will be the nation's biggest farce until we get honest-to-God courts and judges.

AVALANCHE STRIKES STOCK MARKET

Harvester dropped $61.50 a share today, National Tea $54, Case Threshing $33, Wright Aeronautical $26, Montgomery Ward $24 and Rossia Insurance $20.

So great was the mad public scramble to get out of stocks that the ticker again fell hopelessly behind the market with the printing of the final quotations delayed until one hour and 14 minutes after the market closed. Today's sales exceeded by half a million shares the previous Saturday record of 3,207,000 shares established on November 10.

The following table shows the Associated Press averages of 20 leading industrials and 20 leading railroad stocks this week, and the year's highs and lows:

	Indus-trials.	Day's Change.	Rails.	Day's Change.
Monday	$253.52	off $1.71	$156.08	off $ .18
Tuesday	255.98	up 2.46	155.51	off .55
Wednesday	255.49	off .49	154.55	off .96
Thursday	246.04	off 9.45	150.17	off 4.38
Friday	238.68	off 7.36	149.04	off 1.13
Saturday	328.76	off 9.92	147.59	off 1.45

Year's low.	178.84	Feb. 20	138.36	Feb. 20

Curb Also Busy.

Trading on the New York Curb Market also set a new Saturday record today with a turnover of 1,464,000 shares in a sweeping reaction which carried scores of issues down $1 to $25 a share. The previous Saturday record of 1,240,100 shares was established on November 17.

Just as the advance which preceded it was the greatest on record, the reaction in the last half of this week exceeded in intensity all previous breaks in market history. Measured by the Associated Press averages, it was at least three times as bad as the dramatic collapse in prices in March, 1926, although prices generally are considerably higher than they were then.

The following table illustrates the drastic price reduction in several of the high-priced stocks:

Stock—	Week's High.	Today's Close.	Net Loss Today.
Radio Corporation	420	296	72
International Harvester	370	307	61¼
National Tea	390	320	54
Case Threshing	470	420	33
Wright Aeronautical	276½	215	26
Montgomery Ward	423	340	24
Rossia Insurance	270	215	20
Motor Products	178	157	16½
Kolster Radio	91¼	59	15

Battle at Opening.

The battle between the "bulls" and the "bears" started at the opening of the market, with honors about even for the first hour. Radio, which was under selling pressure from the opening, began to show signs of acute weakness, and the rest of the list reacted in sympathy. When word was passed back to the brokerage offices from the floor of the exchange that Radio was selling nearly $20 a share below the prices appearing on the tape, a deluge of selling orders appeared and prices broke wide open. Radio dropped as much as $10 a share between sales.

The reaction this week is expected to bring about a sharp reduction in the volume of brokers' loans, due to the closing out of thousands of speculative accounts. Stock exchange member loans as of November 30, announced this week, reached the record-breaking total of $6,391,644,264, while the federal reserve total, published weekly, set a new high mark at $5,394,590,000. Bankers expect that these figures will set a new high mark for some time.

were unfortunate enough to have their names inscribed on some of Rothstein's papers.

Arnold Rothstein was a business man, albeit his business often skirted on the narrow edge of right and wrong, and as a business man he kept ledgers.

There are many today uncomfortable along Broadway just because they fear Arnold Rothstein may have had occasion some time in his picturesque life to write their names on one of his files. It was the scribbled name of Unger, the name of a motor car license and a few other brief notations which led to the cracking of this great dope syndicate.

More Valuable Dead.

For seven years federal authorities have attempted to break up the ring which has been bringing narcotics into the United States and distributing them through a central office in New York city. The web of investigation, federal authorities said today, has been woven tighter and tighter towards the sleek and dapper Arnold Rothstein—the man who had been known commonly as the greatest of the big-time gamblers.

Federal authorities were chagrined when Rothstein was shot on the night of November 4. They felt that one shooting might have undone their seven years of labors.

But in death Arnold Rothstein has revealed more than ever he did in life. He gave definite traces.

For some time authorities have listened in on telephone conversations from the apartment of Joseph Unger at a Forty-second street hotel. Most of these listenings-in availed nothing.

But the other day they heard this following conversation:

"Have you delivered that package, June?"

"No."

The conversation was between Unger and June Boyd, out in Chicago. Chicago authorities were sent to arrest June Boyd, which they did and federal agents rushed to the Grand Central terminal where they took over about $2,000,000, so far as "street prices go," in narcotics.

Woman Has Dope Outfit.

Then they searched for Unger. He had left New York on the Twentieth Century Limited. That train was stopped in Buffalo and Unger was awakened in his Pullman car and taken off.

In New York Miss Myers was found in the Hamilton hotel with a complete dope outfit in her possession. Lowe was found somewhere else and true to his nickname he broke into tears and denied he had any knowledge of a dope conspiracy. Both were held in high bail as material witnesses.

Miss Boyd and Unger will be brought to New York and indictments sought for them Monday.

Back of this ring is the sinister shadow of murder. Federal agents believed that some of the information gained from Rothstein's files will show not only why the gambler was killed, and possibly who killed the man who would bet on anything but a football game, but also reason for many other unexplained murders in New York's underworld. There was the slaying of Frankie Yale, or Uale, whichever way one desires to spell it; the murder of Edwin Jerge, which startled Herald Square one quiet Sunday afternoon and the murder of Tony Marino, a gangster killed several years ago.

Federal activities have overshadowed anything the police or the district attorney's office have done. George McManus is in Tombs awaiting trial on a murder indictment while police searched for three other men named in an indictment charging them with the murder of Rothstein.

summoning of the witnesses called today by the committee, the nomination of Mr. West bringing the case to a head. He said he wanted to ask Mr. West if he took any steps to determine the legality of the renewal allowed by his predecessor when protests were lodged with the department.

Chairman Nye, of the committee, said no suggestion was made at today's meeting to question Mr. West along other lines but he believed there were some senators who wanted to ask him about his purported connections with the Samuel Insull public utility interests.

Senator Walsh said he wished to ask Mr. Donovan what steps were taken by the department of justice in finding the contract void and whether its decision was announced as soon as it was determined. The announcement came toward the close of the national campaign.

The senator said he wanted to inquire if he took any steps to determine the legality of the lease after protests were presented against it.

In this connection the committee has called James P. Kem, of Kansas City, counsel for the White Eagle Oil company, who protested the contract renewal, and Senator Capper, republican, Kansas, who presented his protest.

Senator Glenn, republican, Illinois, suggested the open hearing for Mr. West, who is a resident of that state. The committee meeting lasted but a few minutes, no protest being entered to the requests of Senator Walsh. There were no other requests.

NO LUNG OPERATION FOR KING GEORGE

"Further, in this stage of the illness, there must be an ebb and flow upgrade and downgrade and I am happy to say that during the last 24 hours it has been upgrade.

"An explorator puncture and the X-ray both showed no appreciable pleural effusion. Therefore, there is no object of any operation.

Maintains Strength.

"During the last few days the king's strength has been maintained. He is holding his own. Maintaining strength necessarily means his heart. He had a good sleep today."

The United News obtained the following additional and indisputable facts about the king's condition from the highest authority possible, but was not permitted to quote him.

During his illness the king's life at times has been in danger but he certainly is now in a safer position than a week ago, because his doctors are dealing with a local condition rather than an infection involving the whole body.

The king was on the upward grade today after a slightly downward turn yesterday. The past week was one of great anxiety due to the fact that the infection was raging through the whole system but now the physicians are dealing with a localized infection in one lung. At the same time the king's position is still difficult because he has been ill for three weeks and his recuperative powers therefore are less strong than they were. In an illness of this kind, progress must be tedious and slow.

Temperature Is High.

The king's temperature remained high today but he was able to rest. A non-committal bulletin was issued by his five doctors at 8:30 tonight which said:

"The king passed a quiet day with some sleep. The raised temperature persists because the inflammation of the lung must of necessity be low in its progress towards repair.

1928 Georgia Cotton Crop Is Put at 1,020,000 Bales

The Georgia cotton crop for 1928 was estimated at 1,020,000 bales in the final cotton report of the year issued Saturday by V. C. Childs, agricultural statistician in charge of the Georgia office of the United States department of agriculture.

This estimated crop compares with 1,100,000 standard bales in 1927. The 1928 acreage is placed at 9 per cent greater than the harvested acreage a year ago.

The report placed the acreage for harvest this year at 3,719,000 and the yield per acre at approximately 131 pounds, the lowest since 1923. The yield per acre a year ago was 154 pounds.

Yields in the northern section of the state varied from fair to good, the reports showed, with production for the section running about 2 per cent above last year.

The coastal plains and part of the Piedmont section, on the other hand, were severely handicapped by wet weather and unseasonable cool temperatures, according to the report. As a result the south Georgia crop was fully three weeks late, it was pointed out. Production was placed at about 88 per cent of the 1927 outturn, in these sections.

Georgia ginnings prior to December 1 totaled 971,000 running bales, according to the report.

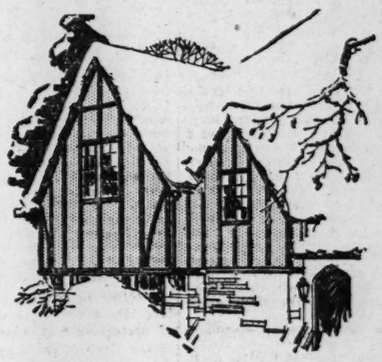
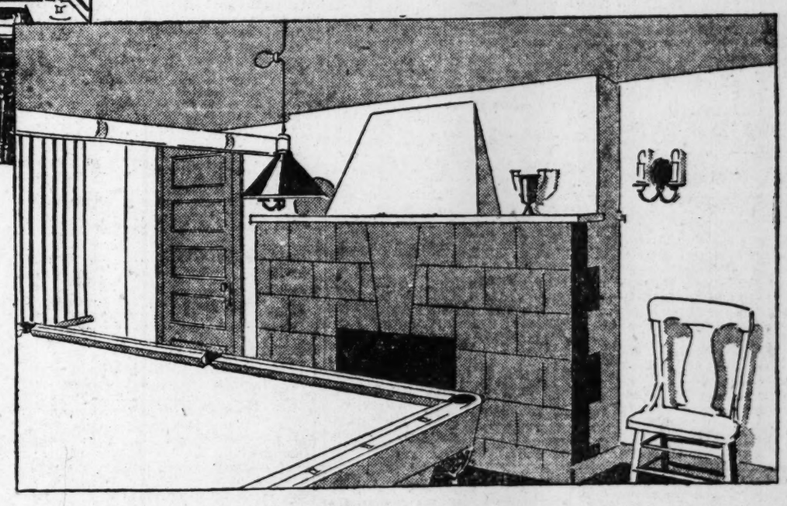
1. A HEAT-STOPPING ROOF
2. A WARM CHEERFUL ATTIC



3. A DRY. HEALTHY BASEMENT



IN preparing your house for winter give your first attention to the roof, attic and basement.

Make sure these spots are insulated against piercing cold . . . that the roof stops furnace heat from leaking out . . . that the attic and basement are warm and healthy . . . are free from dampness, chill and draughts.

The easiest and most economical way of insulating the home you are now in is by repairing and remodeling it with Celotex.

Celotex keeps furnace warmth where it belongs—inside walls and ceilings. It reduces fuel bills twenty-five per cent or more . . . protects health and increases comfort by keeping your home at a more even temperature.

With Celotex you can turn unused space into playrooms and extra living quarters that are snug and warm in winter and delightfully cool in summer.

You can change basements into sitting or recreation rooms where dampness cannot penetrate. You can convert open porches into pantry rooms, sleeping porches and sun parlors, enjoyable all year 'round.

Millions of tiny sealed air cells give Celotex such a high insulating efficiency that it is used in modern refrigerator cars and household refrigerators, as well as in nearly a quarter of a million American homes!

Celotex is made from long, tough fibres of cane. It comes in big, strong boards that add extra bracing strength to walls. And the natural tan color and delicate fibre texture of the boards make an attractive interior finish for any home.

BIRMINGHAM STATION TO GO ON AIR DEC. 25

New Major Transmitter Will Use 5,000 Watts and WAPI Call.

Birmingham, Ala., December 8.—(AP) Radio's Christmas gift to Alabama is a new major broadcasting station under an old name, W A P I, costing approximately $80,000. This assessment is divided between the city of Birmingham and Alabama Polytechnic Institute, at Auburn, Ala.

The first program is scheduled for Christmas day from three studios—at Birmingham, Montgomery and Auburn—and includes a varied assortment of entertainment and educational features.

The new station divides time on a clear channel under the reallocation and will have 5,000 watts power.

Birmingham's allotment in the construction of the station includes an elaborately equipped studio in a downtown office building. The transmitter is located on Red mountain, a few miles from the City. The capitol building commission at Montgomery has granted authority for the expenditure of $6,500 to $8,000 for outfitting a studio in that city, while Auburn plans to improve its old studio, which was the former home of WAPI.

WAPI is Birmingham's second broadcasting station, WBRC having broadcast here for a number of years.

Sensing the need of a stronger station, citizens of Alabama began a movement to replace the old station at Auburn, a gift of Victor H. Hanson, publisher of the Birmingham News, with one more modern. WAPI formerly had been used by the Alabama Polytechnic Institute and the state department of agriculture largely for distribution of information to Alabama farmers.

OPERATIC MUSIC AIDED BY RADIO TO POPULARITY

Operatic music is coming into popular favor in America at last, thanks to the radio which carries the good things in music, past doors which have heretofore shut them out because of unfamiliarity with them. Brunswick offers two arias from "Faust" by the famous contralto of the Metropolitan Opera company, Karin Branzell . . . Siebel, the young boy friend of Marguerita, is always impersonated by a woman in the opera. "The Flower Song" is a bright little waltz sung by Seibel as he gayly plucks a bouquet of flowers for Marguerita after removing Mephistofele's curse by dipping his fingers in the font of holy water. "When All Was Young" is a little slower and sadder, being a song of reminiscence of a brighter and happier day before the tempter came to destroy the peace of Marguerita's life.

Al Bernard does a great piece of comedy in "Brother Pollasses' sermon on the letter "S" and "Read 'em and Weep."

The Municipal band plays a beautiful old waltz, "Mariechen," and a polka, "Jolly Peter." . . . The Flat Creek Sacred Singers offer two beautiful and well-known church hymns sung in dignified church style . . . and the Varsity Four and the Arrowhead Inn archestra have supplied four great fox-trots for dance enthusiasts and listeners of music who like lots of pep.

WGST REQUEST NIGHT

Tell the Tech Station Your Favorite Selection.

Instead of twisting the dial on the radio set in an effort to get the station wanted, fans within range of WGST, Georgia School of Technology station, Monday will be able to go to the telephone, twist the dial on it and get just what they want in the way of music.

Armed with dance orchestra, soprano, violin and piano soloists, Radio Announcer George Price, sponsoring a "popular request" program over WGST, will endeavor to give his invisible audience any selections asked for.

The way to get your favorite piece played by orchestra or sung as a solo is to tune the radio set for a frequency of 890 kilocycles, or a wavelength of 336.9 meters. Then proceed to the telephone and dial Hemlock 2240, the Georgia Tech studio of WGST, and make the desired request.

The "popular request" program over WGST will go on the air at 9:30 o'clock Monday night, and continue for one hour. Requests for musical selections, however, will be taken over the telephone any time during the day.

Feature performers on the program will be the Harmony Makers' orchestra, Miss Marion Hope, pianist; Miss Hermani Bahn, violinist, and Miss Betty Dixon, soprano.

ECUADOR RADIO CLUBS TO CONTROL STATIONS

Guayaquil, December 8.—(AP)—Radio broadcasting in Eucador is to be controlled through a series of radio clubs which may be located in the capitals of provinces. Only members of legally established clubs will be permitted to use experimental receivers and transmitters.

Interference with governmental stations will be prohibited. The radio clubs will take a census of apparatus now in operation, granting new licenses only to those stations which are skillfully controlled and prohibiting the use of defective circuits which may interfere with other apparatus.

Bible by Radio.

Springfield, Ill., December 8:—(AP)—Station WMBI, of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, is incorporated to preach and teach the Bible to radio fans.

WGN, Chicago, has arranged its daytime programs to fit the radio needs of the housewife. Starting with household hints, including a cooking school twice a week, the morning closes with a musicale. In the afternoon there is a meeting of the women's club, followed by tea music.

Southerners in National Singing Contest Finals

Anna M. Chandler (right), Fayetteville, Ark.; Ernest P. Ferrata (center), of New Orleans, and Carmen Rosell, of New Orleans, will compete in the national finals of the Atwater Kent Audition, to be sung in New York December 16 for awards totaling $17,500.

Ten young American singers—voted the champions of this nation's amateur vocalists—will be brought together in New York city for finals of the second national radio audition Sunday, December 16.

They will be welcomed to the studios where Schumann-Heink, Gigli, Werrenrath and other masters have scored their radio triumphs. As they compete for Atwater Kent foundation awards totaling $17,500 and scholarships their voices will be carried to millions from coast to coast by the National Broadcasting company and associated stations. This contest will be during the regular Atwater Kent hour, 8:15 to 9:15, Atlanta time.

Finalists, each the winner of local, state and district singing competitions and sections they represent are:

"Dixie"—Carmen Rosell, New Orleans, La., soprano, 19.
Ernest Paul Ferrata, New Orleans, La., baritone, 21.
Far West—Dove Irene Kilgore, Oakland, Cal., coloratura soprano, 21.
Donald Novis, Pasadena, Cal., tenor, 22.
Middle West—Gladys Morrison Ball, Kansas City, Mo., coloratura soprano, 22.
Wilfred A. Engelman, Detroit, Mich., baritone, 24.
Northeast—Hazel C. Arth, Washington, D. C., contralto, 25.
Kenneth D. Hines, Buffalo, N. Y., tenor, 22.
Southwest—Anna Mae Chandler, Fayetteville, Ark., coloratura soprano, 20.
Patrick Henry Wilson, Jr., Galveston, Texas, baritone, 18.

Approximately 60,000 amateur soloists competed for the right to sing in the finals. Three contestants who won state championships, but were defeated in semi-finals last year, tried again and reached the 1928 finals: Hazel Arth, Gladys Morrison Ball and Donald Novis.

The ten finalists will be taken from their homes to New York as guests of the Atwater Kent foundation. They will assemble first at the Mayflower hotel, in Washington, D. C., for a tour of the capital, including visits to the white house and congress.

Radio audience votes counted 60 per cent in selecting finalists, but contestants in finals will be judged solely by a board of renowned musical authorities chosen by the national radio audition sponsorship committee, which consists of Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Mme. Louise Homer, Mrs. Otto Kahn, Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley and Edward W. Bok.

Order of awards will be announced immediately after the contest. The girl and youth adjudged best each will receive $5,000 cash, a gold decoration and a two-year scholarship at a leading American conservatory. Those placed second each will receive $2,000 and a one-year scholarship; third, $1,000 and a year's scholarship each; fourth, $500 each; fifth, $250 each.

RADIO-ING THE AIR-WAVES

LASHANSKA, SEIDEL, EVANS IN A. K. CONCERT

Hulda Lashanska, soprano, Toscha Seidel, violinist and Wilbur Evans, baritone prize winner of the 1927 National Radio auditions, are the featured artists in the Atwater Kent concert to be broadcast through WSB and the NBC system at 8:15 o'clock tonight.

Hulda Lashanska.

Hulda Lashanska has chosen Mendelssohn's "On Wings of Song;" "Over the Steppe," by Gretchaninoff, and "Wings of Night" by Watts, adding the lovely aria "Depuis le Jour" from Charpentier's modern French opera "Louise."

Toscha Seidel, violinist of the Leopold Auer school, which also produced Jascha Heifetz, will play the Beethoven "Romance in F Major" and "Rondino;" the Francoeur-Kreisler "Sicilienne et Rigaudin;" Dvorak's "Slavonic Dance in E Minor" in an arrangement for violin by Fritz Kreisler, and the well-known Brahms' "Hungarian Dance No. 1."

Toscha Seidel.

"Solomon's Aria" from Gounod's opera "Queen of Sheba;" Curran's "Nocturne," the "Fields o' Ballyclare" and Felman's "Boots" will be the baritone solos by Wilbur Evans.

The Atwater Kent orchestra under the direction of Josef Pasternack, former conductor of the Metropolitan, will play the brilliant introduction to the third act of Wagner's opera "Lohengrin," which forms a prelude for the cathedral scene and the bridal music: "Adagietto" from Biezt's "L'Arleienne Suite" and "Florindo" from Burgmein's "Carnival Venecien."

POLING SPEAKS ON "WHAT AGE OWES YOUTH."

Dr. Daniel A. Poling will speak on "What Age Owes Youth" in an address during the Young People's conference which will be broadcast through WSB and the NBC system at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Dr. Poling opens his discussion with a quotation from Goethe: "The destiny of any nation at any time depends upon the opinions of its young men under twenty-five." He believes that if this is even measurably true, its truth lies in the text: "Young men shall see visions."

Upon considering youth today, Dr. Poling feels it ersential to remark at the beginning that youth is a spiritual, not a physical state, and so, in conclusion, by doing great things people may remain young, and by continuing to see visions they may defeat the intellectual palsy of the years.

A musical program includes a baritone solo, "The Living God," by O'Hara, and such familiar hymns as "O Day of Rest and Gladness," "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God" and "Crown Him With Many Crowns."

THREE SPANISH DANCES ENLIVEN LA PALINA HOUR.

Three Spanish dances, one of them rarely played, will enlived the La Palina hour to be broadcast tonight, at 7:30 o'clock, by the Columbia system.

The first and most novel of these will be Dance No. 7 in E Flat Minor, by Scharwenka, and two other dances, Chabrier's "Spanish Rhapsody" and Heller's "Tarantella" will give a Spanish tone to the program.

Oliver Kline, who now regularly takes the part of La Palina, the Spanish cigar girl, will, however, not add to the Spanish atmosphere of the program this week, for she will be heard, accompanied by the orchestra, in "Every Little Movement" from "Madame Sherry," and "Dawn" by Pearl Curran.

The complete program:

WHOLE TRUTH ABOUT MR. MARTIN HEWS!

The whole truth about Martin Hews, one of the characters in the mystery serial by E. Phillips Oppenheim entitled "The Master of Sinister House," will come out in the final dramatized installment which will be presented as one of the features of Collier's Radio hour, broadcast this evening, at 7:15 o'clock through KDKA and the N. B. C. system.

Two guest speakers of national reputation will be presented during the program, and vocal and instrumental music will be heard, both in special selections and as an accompaniment and background for dramatized stories.

The bright shops with their beautifully arranged windows, whose displays herald the Christmas season, have gotten "Uncle Henry" all excited. He feels that Yuletide is just as much fun now as when he was a youngster, and he's already planning his list of presents and wondering if his money will hold out.

TWO BLACK CROWS BID FAIR TO REMAIN BLACK.

Majestic's Two Black Crows, who, as all members of their large following know, are two perfectly white-skinned gentlemen, seem to have adopted their title literally, and, as commonly termed in negro parlance, are "passing"—although that word has generally been used to mean from black to white and not from white to black. This was evidenced in their last broadcast over the Columbia system, for Mr. Moran and Mr. Mack arrived at the studio, to amuse their unseen audience, in full black-face makeup. True, their faces were not quite as black as is ordinarily seen in makeup of that kind, but, the fact remains—they were black.

This baffling mystery bade fair to remain unsolved, until, by chance the truth came out. Mr. Moran and Mr. Mack, in making up for a public appearance upon the night before, had forgotten to put on the cream that forms a foundation for the blacking. As a consequence, the result seemed satisfactory, but, when the time came to clean their faces for their ordinary roles in life—the blacking remained stubbornly on. Rubbing did but little good, and the Two Black Crows were forced to resign themselves to remaining in sepia brown until time chose to make themselves otherwise.

The Majestic's Two Black Crows will be on the air tonight at 8 o'clock

AUDIONS PROGRAM TO BE AMERICAN.

A program largely American in character and compositions, will be the offering of the De Forest Audions this evening at 9 o'clock over the Columbia system.

Such typically American numbers as Sousa's "King Cotton March," Nevins' "Hunting We Will Go," Herbert's "American Fantasie," and Myddleton's "Down South," by the orchestra, male quartet, and baritone soloist, will be heard at this time.

In addition to these Yankee contributions, Rachmaninoff's Prelude in G Minor, and a Turkish March of Beethoven's will be played.

The complete program:

NEW RADIO MOVIE BIG IMPROVEMENT

No Limit To Size With Device of Scientist Near Paris.

Paris, December 8.—(AP)—A device for the transmission of moving pictures by radio, in which the size of the image transmitted is not limited, has been developed by a Luxemburg scientist living near Paris.

While the transmission and reprojection of films by wireless has been accomplished by various methods, the inherent limitations of previous experiments have prevented them from attaining commercial importance. With the device of the Luxemburg man the perfection of the image reproduced increases with the size of the screen, it is said. The inventor says the reverse has been true in former experiments, the size of the image being limited to dimensions of a few inches and incapable of enlargement without loss of clearness.

Another advantage is that the use of a positive film is eliminated, the transmission being accomplished by using the negative film direct. This is said to be an important consideration in the rapidity with which pictorial news items, for example, could be displayed after the original picture has been taken and the negative film developed.

The transmission and reproduction of the film does not necessarily take place at the time the negative is projected into the apparatus. The impression of the film is electrically transmitted and magnetically conserved on a series of fine metallic ribbons to permit its subsequent wireless transmission for exposure on the screen either immediately or at a later time.

The conservation of the intermediate magnetic impression being more or less indefinite, the wireless transmission of the picture can be repeated without further recourse to the original negative film. The registration of sound can be accomplished simultaneously with that of the moving picture itself.

RADIO NEWEST AID TO U. S. BARGE SERVICE

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—Radio communication has made the operation of the government barges on the Mississippi river as regular and dependable as train service, says Major General T. Q. Ashburn, chairman of the Inland Waterways corporation.

General Ashburn appeared before the federal radio commission to seek the renewal of licenses and more favorable wavelengths for four short wave stations operated by the corporation at Mobile and Birmingham, Ala., Memphis and Minneapolis, terminal points of the service.

The service, with 275 tow boats, tugs and barges, covers 2,550 miles and has connection with 165 railroads. General Ashburn said the service has been of great aid to farmers through the transportation of grain from western and northwestern states for export. "It has been estimated that the saving in grain alone amounts to $5,000.000 a year for the farmers," he said.

STATION SHIFTS

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—Changes in the frequency and power of broadcasting stations are being made from time to time by the federal radio commission in an effort to remedy reception defects as they develop.

Among the recent alterations is the shifting of KTAB, Oakland, Calif., from 1280 to 550 kilocycles to eliminate cross talk interference between stations in that locality. Operators of KTAB have reported improvement in reception since the change.

The power of WHB and KMBC-KLDS, both of Kansas City, was reduced from 1,000 to 500 watts to stop a pronounced heterodyne on the channel occupied by WRC, Washington. The Kansas City stations operate alternately on WRC's frequency of 950 kilocycles.

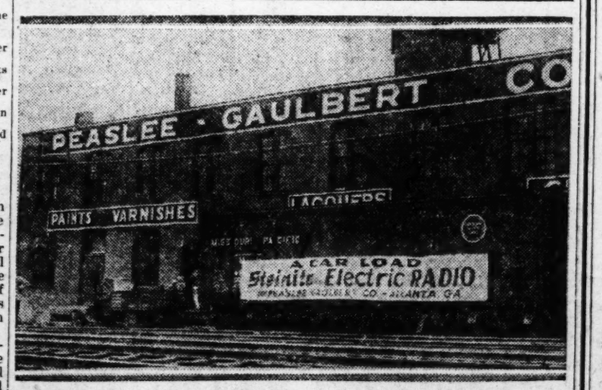
On the recommendation of Commissioner Sam Pickard, who has been making an inspection tour in the middle west, a station in Wisconsin was ordered to suspend operation until it could broadcast exactly on its assigned wavelength.

Listeners Choose Programs.

Paris, December 8.—(AP)—Listeners to Radio-Vitus, one of the smaller Paris stations, in the future will choose their own programs. They have been invited to say what they would like to hear and the daily program will be made up from these suggestions.

A review of its program hits of 1928 will be the theme of the fourth anniversary program of KOA, Denver, on December 15. The feature is to open at 11:30, eastern standard time, and continue three and one-half hours.

Big Steinite Shipment for Atlanta



This solid carload of Steinite electric radios was received a few days ago by the Peaslee-Gaulbert Company of Georgia, being consigned to this distributor by the Steinite Radio company, of Atchison, Kas. It will be used to fill heavy Christmas orders, according to officials of the Peaslee-Gaulbert company. They added that the demand for Steinite here is growing daily, with a live-wire dealer organization composed of Phillips & Crew, Lion & King, Fulton Brothers, Cochran Furniture company and others.

Liquor Arrests in 1928

:: U. S. COMMISSIONER REPORTS ON DRY WORK ::

10,000 More Than in 1927

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—The efforts of the prohibition bureau of the treasury department to enforce the prohibition law was depicted today in the annual report of Prohibition Commissioner Doran, who recited that his forces had made 75,307 arrests with 58,813 convictions in the fiscal year, 1928. It was an increase of 10,000 over the arrests for the previous year.

Operating with 4,396 permanent and 92 temporary employees the bureau seized 1,048,636 gallons of illegal spirits, 4,254,020 gallons of malt liquirs, 399,603 gallons of wine, 16,220 illicit distilleries, 18,980 stills and 217,278 fermenters. During the year the prohibition forces seized 6,934 automobiles valued at $3,057,132 and 81 boats valued at $144,240.

Commissioner Doran said 77,799 prohibition violation cases were terminated in 1928 and of the convictions 15,793 persons were given jail sentences equalling 5,631 years and fines aggregating $7,031,109 were assessed. In addition to the federal cases agents of the bureau aided in 15,077 cases in state courts in which 9,025 convictions were secured.

Denatured Alcohol.

During the year 169,000,000 gallons of alcohol were manufactured, 92,000,000 gallons of denatured alcohol and 159,000,000 gallons were withdrawn for denaturing. Pure alcohol withdrawn from bond amounted to 8,670,000 gallons. Distilled spirits withdrawn from warehouses on which tax was paid amounted to 1,613,534 gallons, leaving in bond according to record figures, approximately 20,000,000 gallons of such spirits but actually, due to evaporation, only about half that amount, the report said. At the end of the year there remained in warehouses a total of 22,498,714 gallons of still wine, while 743,226 gallons were withdrawn during the year for sacramental purposes.

Commissioner Doran also reviewed the work of the narcotic division during the fiscal year which showed that with old cases there were pending during the year 13,569 cases of violations of the narcotic laws. Of the new cases, 2,498 were by persons registered to handle narcotics and 6,119 by unregistered persons. During the year, he said, narcotic agents had seized or purchased as evidence 26,332 ounces of narcotics.

In this branch of the bureau's work 4,738 convictions were secured with sentences totaling 8,786 years and fines aggregating $182,000.

Drug Importations.

Importations of drugs during the fiscal year dropped slightly, amounting to 140,172 ounces of opium and 234,000 ounces of coca leaves but sales to domestic sources for the 12 months amounted to 433,900 ounces.

Illicit traffic in narcotic drugs, Commissioner Doran said, has not decreased and could not be curbed with the present forces.

"Illicit traffic in narcotic drugs smuggled into the United States seems not to have abated in any degree," he said. "With these drugs comparatively readily obtainable in Europe and Asia and a strong demand therefor in the United States, represented by non-medical addicts who find it impossible to obtain a supply from the quantity domestically manufactured, it is obvious that large supplies of drugs so readily obtainable are unlawfully introduced into the United States, particularly when there are considered the resourcefulness of those engaged in the traffic and the large volume of legitimate trade of our country which offers facilities for concealment of this illicit traffic. To stop the illicit influx of narcotics at ports and borders is admittedly difficult, if not impossible, with the present facilities available for the purpose, and the progress of efforts to secure international cooperation looking toward an efficient measure of control over such shipments by manufacturing countries, is seemingly quite slow."

DEPUTIES SEEKING 31 ELECTION HEADS IN OHIO COUNTY

Cleveland, December 8.—(AP)—Three squads of deputy sheriffs started out tonight to arrest 31 election officials named in 41 secret indictments returned by the special grand jury which for more than two months has been investigating alleged frauds in the August primary in Cuyahoga county.

Chief of County Detectives Gideon Rabshaw himself made the first arrest, that of James Neville, said to be a booth election worker.

Mrs. Anna Janota, 54, surrendered at the county jail when word was left at her home that a capias had been issued for her arrest. She was on the verge of hysterics while her husband contended she had not knowingly committed any infraction of the law.

The indictments were returned by the grand jury yesterday, but all names were withheld until arrests were made. Only minor election workers were named and the board of elections was not mentioned, but the jury's report indicated that another batch of indictments would be returned.

The indictments were returned by the same body which brought about the dismissal of the former board of elections just prior to the general election last month. Charges of ballot-stuffing, gross negligence and nonfeasance were made.

BYRD AID STARTS 7,000-MILE DASH TO REPLACE DOGS

Vancouver, B. C., December 7.—(AP) A 7,000-mile dash from Dunedine, New Zealand, to the Yukon to get 40 huskies to replace some 37 dogs of the Byrd Antarctic expedition which died is being made by Bill Riley, dog driver, who arrived here on the liner Aorangi.

Contaminated water is believed to have caused the deaths of the dogs shortly after their arrival at Port Chambers, New Zealand, Riley said. Commander Byrd commissioned him to go to the Yukon to replace them and return as soon as possible after the new year to New Zealand. There he will connect with one of the Byrd ships and proceed to the Antarctic with the dogs to join the rest of the party.

There were one hundred huskies before death stalked through the kennels aboard the steamer Sir James Clark Ross.

Three valuable dogs went mad and were destroyed in the tropics and three of a litter of five puppies were drowned by a seaman, who unaware of the stork's visit, flooded the mother's kennel while washing the deck.

SENATE MEETINGS IN CAPITAL FOYER APPEAR LIKELY

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—Senate meetings in the expansive foyer under the capitol dome loomed as a possibility today if Herbert Hoover calls an extra session of congress next spring at the time planned for remodeling of the senate chamber.

Chairman Curtis, of the rules committee, named a sub-committee to make arrangements for a meeting place for the senate in the great open space under the dome if it is decided to go ahead with remodeling of the chamber in the spring and if Mr. Hoover calls the extra session considered for farm relief.

Whether to use limestone or marble in reconstruction of the wing, is now worrying the committee, and a sub-committee has been named to settle the question. Senators Smoot, Utah, and Reed, Pennsylvania, republicans, and McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, compose this committee.

BOULDER CANYON LEGISLATION SEEN NEARER IN SENATE

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—Through the heavy cloud of argument and controversy over the Swing-Johnson Boulder canyon dam bill a hopeful sign appeared today that some of the principal differences blocking action on the measure might shortly be adjusted.

A series of conferences has been started by those interested in the legislation to compose the different views of California and Arizona with regard to water distribution and construction of a power plant at the dam, and a number of senators expect these conferences to work out a satisfactory deal all round.

Senator King, democrat, Utah, who has opposed the bill as it passed the house, went so far as to predict that next week would see the passage of the bill in the senate. Senator Oddie, republican, Nevada, declared an early agreement was in sight and in that event the measure would be passed without delay.

Council Opposes Union of Churches At Present Time

Rochester, N. Y., December 8.—(AP) The statement that: "Union of all churches into one body with a central organization and control is not considered practicable at present," is contained in the report of a committee presented at today's session of the sixth quadrennial meeting of the federated council of Churches of Christ in America.

The Rev. Dr. George W. Richards, of Lancaster, Pa., chairman of the committee of findings, presented the report on the feasibility of further union of Protestant churches, one of the vital questions before the council.

LEE HUDSON TO LEAD AMERICUS KIWANIANS

Americus, Ga., December 8.—(Special.)—Americus Kiwanians in electing new officers chose Lee Hudson as president to succeed James W. Lott. Other officers named were: E. L. Murray, first vice president; J. P. Luther, second vice president, and L. D. Slappey, treasurer. Lewis Merritt, W. M. Brennan, W. M. Humber, W. H. Cobb, F. L. Cohen, H. H. Shirley, S. F. Stapleton and James W. Lott constitute the new board of directors. Rev. Loy Warwick, recently assigned to the pastorate of First Methodist church here, was welcomed as a member.

FEED MART FIRM ON LIGHT SUPPLY

Washington, December 8.—(Special.)—The feed market continued firm during the week ending December 6, principally as result of light stocks and small offerings, according to the grain, hay and feed market news service of the United States bureau of agricultural economics. Prices of grains were unchanged during the week. Hay markets were also steady.

Demand for feeds continued good but was somewhat less urgent than a week ago. Prices of feeds were unchanged from last week but were higher than a month or a year ago. Cottonseed cake and meal continued steady but demand was slightly less active. Prevailing prices at most markets were unchanged. Seed offerings were becoming smaller in and near Atlanta and were quoted at $48 to $50 per ton, prime basis. Demand for the liberal offerings of cake and meal were fairly active. Cottonseed hulls at $13 per ton were in good demand. Offerings of seed from north Texas were still heavy and mills were paying $43 per ton f. o. m. Texas shipping points. Meal and cake prices were higher at Fort Worth with exporters and mixed feed manufacturers bidding actively. Soft winter wheat bran was quoted on December 4 at Atlanta at $41.50; gray shorts $43; No. 2 alfalfa meal $33.50; hominy feed $40; corn feed meal $40; and linseed meal $67.50 per ton.

Prices of grains were about unchanged from a week ago. Wheat recently developed a weak tone due to increased offerings of the new Argentine crop, lower foreign markets and slow domestic demand, but became slightly stronger at the beginning of this week. The corn market was about steady with demand able to absorb the day-to-day offerings. Oats continued independently firm, principally on account of light offerings. No. 3 yellow corn was quoted at Chicago on December 5 at 83 1-2c to 83 3-4c and at Kansas City at 78 1-2c to 80c per bushel. No. 3 white oats were selling at Chicago at 47 1-2c to 48 1-2c and at Kansas City at 48c to 49c per bushel.

The hay markets were steady with moderate offerings meeting fair demand. Timothy markets held practically steady for good quality hay although the lower grades were draggy and moved slowly. Alfalfa hay was very firm with offerings of best grades in light supply and selling at substantial premiums over the ordinary grades. Prairie markets continued firm and offerings of good quality moved rapidly. United States No. 1 extra leafy alfalfa was quoted at Atlanta on December 4 at $42.50; U. S. No. 1 alfalfa $40; U. S. No. 1 timothy $24; U. S. No. 1 Johnson $21 per ton. All good grades of hay were taken readily at Birmingham. However, receipts were very light during the week and the tracks were reported empty except for a few cars of low-grade hay. U. S. No. 1 timothy from Ohio was quoted on December 5 at $23.50; U. S. No. 1 alfalfa $39.50 to $40.00 per ton; U. S. No. 2 Johnson hay was being offered liberally at $15 per ton, but practically no No. 1 Johnson hay arrived during the week.

New York, December 8.—(AP)—Prices of bonds took the toboggan along with those of stocks today, heavy selling sending the general list down as much as 34 points. In the face of the widespread heaviness of the market, a few issues, industrials, utilities and rails, made small gains, but did not attract much trading. Traders who usually lighten commitments for over the week-ends apparently were encouraged to go the limit on selling by the break in the stock market. Total sales exceeded $5,000,000.

Brooklyn Union Gas debenture 5 1-2s, recent sensational performer in the advance, dropped 34 3-4 points on a small turnover to 330, as compared with the year's best price of 396 3-4. Andes Copper 7s sold off 6 points to 179, as compared with the year's high of 241.

Losses of 1 to 5 points were shown by Anaconda Copper 7s, Transcontinental Oil 6 1-2s, Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2s, National Radiator 6 1-2s, Federal Light & Traction 5s and Barnsdall 6s, while other active industrials made fractional declines. Gains of as much as 2 points were shown in such issues as Dery Dry Goods 7s, Consolidated Coal of Maryland 5s, American Smelting 5s, Remington Rand 5 1-2s, U. S. Rubber 5s and International Paper 6s A.

Rails moved irregularly lower. Pennsylvania 4 1-2s, Ann Arbor 4s, Florida East Coast 5s, Katy 5s A, Rock Island 4s, and Baltimore & Ohio first 5s were among the liens to show gains. Selling of St. Paul 5s was continued, while Central of New Jersey 5s, Union Pacific first 4s, Katy 4 1-2s, New York Central 4s, Baltimore & Ohio 4 1-2s and others were under pressure.

The foreign list yielded to general selling. U. S. government obligations were irregular in light trading.

COTTON GOODS' TRADE STEADY DURING WEEK

New York, December 6.—(AP)—Cotton goods markets have been steady but trade has been quieter since last week when sales ran far in excess of production. The feature of the week has been the openings of fall, 1929, blanket lines at prices 7 per cent under the lists of a year ago.

On the finer grades of all-cotton blankets as distinguished from part wool and wool goods some houses are asking substantially the prices of a year ago. The new lines are notable for the wide range of color and artistic styling. Cotton flannels have sold quite well for the cutting trades for the coming fall season on the basis of 1-2c a yard higher than last season. Very fair sales of colored goods for export, echiefly to South American and Philippine points, were reported.

Considerable holiday business in fancy packaged cotton merchandise is being done in small lots for immediate shipment. Printed goods have been quieter and general buying has slackened in keeping with the holiday period. Many of the print cloth and sheeting mills will close two days during Christmas week. Cotton duck, wide sheeting and chambray curtailment continues.

The demand for fine and fancy cottons in gray has been light, most of the trading being in broadcloths and shirtings. Tickings were advanced 1-2c a yard and some working suit materials have also been advanced irregularly. Yarn markets have been firmer but business has been very moderate..

Prices current in primary markets are as follows: Print cloth, 28-in. 64x60s, 6 1-4c; 27-in. 64x60s, 6c; 38 1-2-inch 64x60s, 7 7-8c; brown sheetings, southern standards, 13c; denims, 2.20s, indigo, 17 1-2c; tickings, 8-oz. staples, 21 1-2c and 22 1-2c; prints, 9 1-2c; staple ginghams, eastern, 11 1-2c; dress ginghams, 12 1-2c and 15c.

COTTON BREAKS $3 A BALE ON GOVERNMENT CROP REPORT

PRICES ON COTTON OFF DURING WEEK

BY UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Cotton prices reacted a little during the week December 1-7, with quotations on December 7 about 1-8 to 3-16c per pound lower than those of November 30. Both domestic and foreign demand was rather indifferent with inquiries continuing mostly for forward deliveries. Willingness of holders of cotton to sell at current prices was said to still prevail. According to the weather bureau, much of the past week was unfavorable for cotton harvesting in northwestern belt, but favorable in the northeastern.

Quotations for middling, 7-8 inch cotton, December 7—Nortolk, 19.50; August, 19.25; Savannah, 19.40; Montgomery, 18.65; New Orleans, 19.45; Memphis, 18.75; Little Rock, 18.68; Dallas, 18.75; Houston, 19.25; Galveston, 19.35. Average price middling these ten markets, December 7, 19.11, compared with 19.31 November 30 and 18.79 the corresponding day a year ago. Sales of spot cotton for the week in the ten designated markets, 161,675 bales compared with 90,572 the corresponding week last season. December future contracts for the week at New York declined 22 points to 20.26, at New Orleans 14 points to 19.53, and at Chicago 20 points to 19.65.

Certificated stocks, December 7, at New York, 9,925 bales; New Orleans, 7,983; Houston, 11,562; Galveston, 12,181. Total stocks at New York, 20,852 bales; New Orleans, 353,274; Houston, 905,515; Galveston, 670,-971.

Exports for the week were heavy and to December 7, this season, amounted to 3,942,326 bales, compared with 3,414,945 the same period last year.

Grade Differences. Grades from strict low middling up were unchanged for the week with good middling 40 points on middling; strict middling 0 points; strict low middling 80 points off; strict low middling narrowed to 158 off middling; strict good ordinary 30 to 236 and good ordinary to 319. A year ago good middling was 45 points on middling; strict middling 30; strict low middling 38 off middling; low middling 88; strict good ordinary 168; good ordinary 248.

Staple Cotton. A fair demand was reported in some sections for 1 1-4 inches cottons and a good demand for the lengths above. However, the situation for cottons in the lengths 1 1-16 and 1-3-16 inches continued in its dull state. It is interesting to note that in December, 1925, the premiums for middling 1 1-8 inches was roughly about 425 points on 7-8 inch and for 1 3-16 about 700 points on, compared with about 175 and 275 respectively at the present time.

Southern Mill Centers. A rather dull situation prevailed the past week for raw cotton, with buyers interested in forward shipments, but not at quotations satisfactory to sellers. Some reports indicated, however, business was done at firmer basis than that of a week ago. Southern spinners' takings to November 30, 2,030,709 bales, compared with 2,190,997 the same period last season.

New England Mill Centers. A broadening inquiry for raw cotton in New England was reported the past week with, however, volume actual business still small and chiefly for forward shipments. Demand seemed to be mostly for strict low middling and low middling bright in color. Some reports indicated manufacturers already committed for goods equal to quantity raw material on hand. Northern spinners takings to November 30, 483,-839 bales, compared with 575,153 the same period a year ago.

Dry Goods Centers. Considerable new cloth and yarn business was reported to have been taken by manufacturers in New England states. Some reports indicated that gray goods showed relatively slight improvement though prices somewhat lower due to decline raw material prices. Fine yarn spinners in southern states reported limited inquiry with sales small.

Foreign Markets. Liverpool reported easier demand for actual cotton in that market with less activity also for forward shipments, and that trading conditions were quiet pending the issuance of government crop report December 8. Exports of American cotton to Great Britain this season to November 30, 753,859 bales, compared with 446,481 last year to that date. Manchester reported a better demand for nearly all grades and staples and that supplies were ample to meet requirements. Forward delivery buying was reported as well maintained. Yarns were reported quiet with small business and Manchester influenced by decline in the cotton market. Havre reported continued light demand for American cottons with, however, more price fixing. Demand for forward shipments said to be slow. Exports to France to November 30 this season 359,442 bales, compared with 453,656 a year ago. Bremen reported demand very poor for American cottons with further weakening in the basis. Spinners reported buying very little yet. Reports indicated settlement of recent iron strike. Exports to Germany to November 30, 1,022,609 bales, against 1,136,399 the same period a year ago. Milan, Italy, states that the market was well supplied with American offerings of all grades with demand moderate. Yarn and goods markets reported rather unsettled due to easier American cotton prices. Exports to Italy this season to November 30, 254,-544 bales, compared with 225,804 a year ago.

General. Cotton production Egypt this season now estimated 1,490,000 bales, 478 pounds net, compared production for last season 1,252,000. Of this season's production, 484,000 bales reported as sakellaridis varieties, compared with 522,000 last year. The sakellaridis varieties are of the longer Egyptian staple cottons.

Saturday Record Broken, 3,744,000 Shares Traded

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, December 8.—(AP)—Stock prices were sent tobogganing more dizzily than ever today, as many margin accounts which had weathered the storm of the past two days were wiped out and stocks were dumped overboard "at the market." Losses in many of the volatile specialties ran from 20 points to a loss of 72 points in Radio.

The rush to unload piled up total sales of 3,744,900 shares, the largest Saturday total in history, and again threw the trading machinery into turmoil, the ticker running for 74 minutes after the close. The previous high record for Saturday was made in election week, when 3,207,000 shares changed hands.

The Associated Press average price of 20 industrials was depressed nearly 10 points, the most acute drop since the record of averages has been kept and completely wiping out the advance that was made in the "Hoover market" which began with the session following election. The average has fallen more than 26 points in the past three days, and is nearly 30 points under the peak of November 30. The rails, however, have fared better than the industrials. The average of 20 fell back only about 1 1-2 points today, and still retains about 2 points of its advance since election.

Weaker Margins Factor.

There was no call money market today, and the selling was ascribed in a large part to a weakening of margin accounts, although commission houses have successively increased their marginal requirements recently, many requiring from 33 to 50 per cent. Brokers believe that these heavy requirements have saved the market from what might have been the most disastrous selling panic the exchange has ever seen. Wall street is not surprised that the most violent bull market ever known should react with unprecedented violence. As measured by the Associated Press average of 20 industrials, about two-thirds of the years' advances are still retained. There was little save its technical position to account for the drop in Radio, as the failure of the directors yesterday to declare a stock split-up had been expected in many quarters since early in the week. Today's 72-point loss brought the stock to 290, which is 124 points under its high of 420 recorded only this week. Montgomery Ward, which has been Radio's companion performer in the bull market, fell 24 points to 340, almost exactly 100 points under its record high.

Among other volatile issues, International Harvester lost 61 points, National Tea 54, Federal Mining 50 and Case Threshing 33. Wright Aero sold down 33 points and closed 26 lower, while Rossia Insurance lost about 20 points. American Express, Chrysler, Sears-Roebuck, Texas & Pacific, Midland Steel preferred and Warner Bros. lost about 8 to 10 points.

Old Favorites Off.

Byers shot up 6 points at the opening, fell 26 points, and closed down 13 1-2. Kolster Radio dropped 19 points in response to its collapse on the San Francisco exchange yesterday, but regained 4.

Heaviness of the old line favorites was again marked. General Motors, with such issues as American Can, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Union Pacific and United States Steel, lost 1 to 2 points. The decline in General Electric was checked, however, and it made a small gain.

Chicago Pneumatic Tool was one of the few strong points, gaining 6 points on announcement of a refinancing plan. With the marked exception of Mexican Seaboard, which lost 12 points, oils withstood the selling better than most groups. Standard of New Jersey and Texas Corporation made fractional gains. Bethlehem Steel advanced more than a point, and Burroughs Adding Machine and Baldwin Locomotive went up 2 to 3 points.

In the commodity markets cotton tumbled about $3 a bale on the final government crop estimates, which was larger than expected.

Foreign exchanges were slightly easier, in response to slight sag in sterling.

MOST SOUTHERN TRUCK CROPS MOVING MORE FREELY

POTATOES FIRM; CABBAGE HIGHER

BY UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

The most interesting development of the week was the active opening of the season for Mexican vegetables and various truck crops in southern Texas. String beans, peas and tomatoes began to arrive from Mexico; cabbage, carrots and spinach were moving from Texas. Tomatoes also were being received from Cuba and the Bahamas, with light arrivals of early potatoes from Bermuda and southern Florida. About the only important price changes among the leading products were the higher levels for cabbage, onions and sweet potatoes. Northwestern apples advanced slightly at shipping points. Cold weather was experienced in some of the northern states, with temperatures as low as six degrees in Maine. Snow was reported in Colorado and Idaho.

Shipments continued to show their usual seasonal decrease. The week's output of 14,600 cars of 24 principal fruits and vegetables was just about the same volume as a year ago and was 2,300 less than the preceding week. The only products registering gains recently are carrots, cauliflower, peas and citrus fruit. In the order of their importance, products which totaled a thousand or more cars last week were potatoes, apples, oranges and grapefruit. Movement of grapefruit was fifty per cent heavier than during late November, 1927. About 860 cars came from Florida and 100 from Texas. Orange forwardings increased to 2,245 cars for the seven-day period. California was credited with 1,600 and Florida with slightly over 600. Grape shipments dropped again to 870 cars, compared with 425 a year ago.

Bunched carrots from California were jobbing at $3.50-$4.00 per crate. About 190 cars moved from that state. New York originated only 28 cars. The f.o.b. range in western New York was $1.25-$1.35 per bushel basket or $2.35 per 100-pound sack. City dealers received mostly $1.50-$1.75 per bushel for New York stock. The Texas carrot season got under way with first arrivals in New York city, jobbing at $2.50-$3.00 per bushel basket.

Cauliflower Supply Up.

Cauliflower shipments increased to 270 cars, nearly all of them from California. Long Island season was nearing an end, and crates from that section sold at $1.50-$2.75 in terminal markets. California poor crates brought $1.25-$2.10.

Movement of string beans from Florida was very light—only 43 cars. Limited receipts were reported from Mexico. Florida beans in seven-eighths bushel hampers were selling generally in consuming centers at $5-$5, with the Chicago price as high as $7. Arrivals from Louisiana brought $4.50-$5 in Cleveland, and the bushel packages of Texas beans ranged $3-$5 in several cities.

About ten carloads of green peas arrived from the west coast of Mexico. Shipments from the Imperial valley of California increased to 85 cars. Crates of California peas, holding 40 to 45 pounds, were selling in city markets at $5-$8.

An abundant crop of spinach is expected in southern Texas this winter, and first cars are now moving. About 28,000 acres are planted to spinach. Chicago quoted bushel baskets from Texas at $1.10-$1.15. Virginia shipments had decreased to 150 cars; barrels were ranging higher in New York city at $2-$2.50, with bushels at 75c-90c.

Shipments of tomatoes from California dropped to 50 cars, while Florida increased to 50. Imports from Cuba, Mexico and the Bahamas amounted to a similar number. Florida fancy-count stock, in six-basket crates, ruled $3.50-$5.50 at large distributing centers, and California lug boxes jobbed within a range of $1.25-$3.25. The Bahama tomato crop may equal, if not exceed, the 189,000 bushels exported last season.

Potato Markets Steady—Potatoes showed little change. Shipments decreased further to 3,110 cars, compared with 3,640 last season, from the principal late states. Idaho started 400 cars to market, Colorado 225, Nebraska 120, the north central region 730, New York 320, Pennsylvania 110 and Maine 750 cars. Shipping point prices in the east and north held nearly steady. A range of 63c-77c prevailed in the north central region. Southern Idaho was lower on Russet Burbanks at 70c-80c per 100 pounds, while Rurals brought 60c. The range in Colorado was 60c-80c. Trading was particularly slow and the markets dull in Minnesota and Wisconsin. Maine growers were inclined to hold for higher prices. Farmers in western New York received only 35c per bushel. The Chicago carlot market held around 80c-$1 per 100 pounds of Northern Round Whites, 90c-$1.05 on Red River Ohios, and was lower on Idaho Russets at $1.50-$1.60.

Several carloads of new potatoes arrived from Bermuda and Florida. A movement is on foot among potato growers in Atlantic coast states, from Lond Island to the Gulf, to act in harmony with respect to planting and marketing of this crop during the coming seasons. A distinct relationship is recognized among the various states, and inter-regional action is the goal which it is hoped to attain.

Cabbage advanced further in western New York and then held steady at $38-$40 per ton. The f. o. b. market in southeastern Wisconsin was weak and prices declined there to $32-$35. A rise of about $5 per ton was quoted in many consuming centers, so that New York Danish type closed at $40-$50 and Northern Danish at $40-$45 a ton. The 1 1-2-bushel hampers of pointed type cabbage from South Carolina ruled $2 in New York city. Total movement dropped to 615 cars, of which 330 came from New York state and 220 from Wisconsin. The corresponding total a year ago was 445 cars. First cars of the season were rolling from southern Texas.

Best yellow onions strengthened in western New York shipping districts to $4.25-$4.50 per 100-pound sack. The southwestern Michigan market was dull at a level of $4.40 for best stock. No change was reported in Colorado prices. City dealers were reporting a wide range of 2.65-$4.75 on New York yellows, according to quality and condition. Mid-western yellows sold in terminal markets at $4.00-$5.00 and Red Globes at $3.65-$5.00. Mid-western whites ruled $4.25-4.50, with California whites as high as $5.25. Holland onions in 110-pound sacks were firm at $4.00-4.65, and crates of imported Spanish stock jobbed at $1.75-$2.25. Domestic shipments still averaged about 70 cars daily. Approximately 100 carloads arrived from Holland and 20 from Spain during the week.

A shortage of labor was delaying the transplanting of onions from seed-beds to the fields in southern Texas. At Laredo, it was expected that transplanting would be finished by the middle of this month, but growers in the winter garden district may not complete this work until January. Some growers have had to make an increase of one-third in the wages of laborers, in order to secure adequate help. Judging from the quantity of seed sold, it looks as if the southern Texas onion acreage will be about 10 per cent less than that of last season.

The Virginia sweet potato season was nearly finished; only 55 cars rolled from that section, compared with 175 from Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey combined. Total for the week decreased to 400 cars, and prices of some kinds were tending upward. Virginia barrels ranged from low point of $2 in New York city to high mark of $4.50 in Kansas City. This high price was for improved Jerseys. New Jersey stock in bushel hampers ruled $1.50-3.25 in terminal markets, while Maryland and Delaware yellows showed a wide range of 75c-$2.65 and Tennessee Nancy Halls brought $1.65-$2.00.

Report Brokers' Loans Set Record Causes Stampede

BY STANLEY W. PRENOSIL,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, December 8.—(AP)—The dramatic collapse in stock prices, coincident with the raising of call money rates to the highest level in eight years, overshadowed all other developments in this week's financial markets. In the short space of two days, two-thirds of the gains recorded in the wild speculation since election day were wiped out, and hundreds of millions of dollars in paper profits lost.

It was the most violent reaction in the long and colorful history of the New York Stock Exchange. Due to the unusually heavy margins demanded by leading brokerage houses and speculative accounts, there apparently were no serious financial casualties such as have accompanied some of the big breaks of former years.

Record Loans Factor.

The rise in call money closely followed reports of record-breaking brokers' loans totals by the New York Stock Exchange and the New York Federal Reserve bank, the former figure crossing $6,000,000,000 for the first time. This tremendous absorption of funds for speculative purposes, coupled with increasing holiday demands, preparations for December 15 income tax payments and the recent loss of gold, brought about a temporary credit stringency which finally upset the stock market structure.

Except for the adverse comment on speculation by the secretary of the treasury in his annual report, and the credit stringency, there was nothing in the week's news to create bearish sentiment.

The weekly steel trade reviews were optimistic in character, stating that November pig iron output was the largest of any November in several years and that current mill operations were holding around 83 to 85 per cent of capacity. The oil industry was inclined to take a cheerful view of the annual meeting of the American Petroleum institute, at which the efforts to bring about a curtailment of production received widespread attention and approval. Holiday trade of retail stores was reported to be proceeding at record-breaking proportions.

All Stocks Affected.

All stocks were affected by the reaction in prices but the high priced specialties, which have been whirled up to dizzy heights by pool operators, were the hardest hit. Radio, Montgomery Ward, Sears-Roebuck, Wright Aeronautical, Adams Express and several others sold 25 to 75 points below their high prices of the year.

Coppers showed acute weakness despite the recent series of favorable dividend announcements and the relative firmness of the price of copper metal. Oils also fell back sharply despite trade predictions of increased profits in 1929. Motors were heavily sold in the belief that keen competition and lower prices on some models would cut into profits next year.

Rails yielded with the industrials, although most of the first-class roads are making splendid comparisons in the closing months of the year with the same period a year ago. There also has been talk of higher dividends on the stocks of the Pennsylvania, Northern Pacific and Baltimore & Ohio railroads in the near future.

Tech Forced To Its Best In 20-6 Win

Badly Crippled, Georgia's Brave Warriors Battle Crushing Machine.

BY BEN COTHRAN.

The football gods sat high up on their pigskin Olympus Saturday afternoon and were pleased.

Far below them two teams, ancient rivals, were fighting their annual feud in the clear, crisp air of a December afternoon before some 32,000 people.

The gods were pleased, and the people were pleased. Tech was playing Georgia. Tech was the overwhelming favorite; Georgia was the under-dog. People were claiming a runaway victory for Tech.

But there is a saying about these Tech-Georgia games that is becoming an axiom. They say that if one has the best team in the world and the other has the worst, that a close game would result.

Saturday's game was one to prove whether or not that was true. Georgia was reeling and staggering from the effects of an epidemic of influenza; one of its best linemen was out, weakening a none too strong line. Tech was powerful, strong and confident.

It seemed that nothing could keep Tech from running away with the game. Tech won, as Tech should have, but in winning Tech had to fight its best.

For Georgia, sick or well; weak or strong was playing the best game it has played this year. The Red and Black jersied lads fought up with a

M'LAIN, IOWA STAR, BARRED IN CONFERENCE

BY CHARLES W. DUNKLEY.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—Mayes McLain, the giant Cherokee charger, fullback, with the University of Iowa eleven this season, will not plow up the Hawkeye gridiron next year.

McLain was barred from further athletic competition in the western conference by the conference eligibility committee today. The committee ruled that McLain's two seasons of play at Haskell institute, prior to his enrollment at Iowa, together with last fall's activity with the Hawkeyes, constituted three years of football competition. The Big Ten restricts its athletes to three years in any sport.

The disbarment of the spectacular Indian player was based on a decision reached in the conference in 1904, which placed the Haskell Institute of Lawrence, Kans., on a basis of athletic equality with Big Ten institutions.

The committee gave Allen Holman, Ohio State's quarterback, a clean bill, declaring him eligible for two more years of competition with the Buckeyes. Holman was a student for one year at Iowa State college, at Ames, Iowa, and then transferred to Ohio State.

The question involving Holman was whether he was up to his scholastic requirements at Iowa State at the time he transferred.

Golden Tornado Great Team, Says Famous New York University Football Coach

BY CHICK MEEHAN,
Football Coach of New York University.

The Golden Tornado, of Georgia Tech, starting slowly and cautiously, gradually increased its momentum to overcome the fighting Bulldogs of Georgia Saturday afternoon, 20 to 6.

With this splendid victory the Georgia Tech eleven won the southern conference championship and conclusively proved its claim to the national championship in such a convincing manner that no doubt remains in the mind of any football fan who was fortunate enough to witness this smooth, powerful machine in action today at Grant field before a colorful crowd of 32,000.

The Georgia Tech team displayed one of the finest forward walls I have seen in many years. Its charge was hard, fast and cohesive. It was carried through into the Georgia backfield on every play. Tackling was so accurate and deadly that Durant was the only wing back to make a tackle during the entire game and he made but one.

This line hurried Georgia passers so well that time after time the passer did not even get the ball away—and this line consistently opened wide gaps in the Georgia line, allowing the fast heavy backs of the Tornado to gather full speed when they reached the open field.

Thomason, right halfback for the Yellow Jackets, was the outstanding star of the game with his twisting end runs and flashy returns of punts. He was a constant thorn in Georgia's side throughout the game. Elusive as an eel, it sometimes took four Georgians to get him off his feet. When Thomason was not galloping in the open field, Durant, a clever field general, was pounding the powerful Lumpkin, fullback, through the center of the line. This boy is a

Bulldogs Bow To Tech, 20-6, In Last Game

Short Pass Gives Georgia Its Only Score Early in Great Battle.

was held for downs in Bulldog territory, the fighting spirit of Georgia was the high light of the game.

Georgia's only touchdown came as the result of that fumble but no credit can be taken from them because they played the ball. Tech scored its first touchdown when McCrary fumbled a lateral pass from Hooks and the credit is Tech's. After the Tornado took the ball its march to a counter was as invincible as the march of nature's tornado through a town of paper houses. In this drive it was the great Lumpkin who added what was needed when it was needed but Thomason, the "Little Giant," was a thorn in the side of the Bulldog all the way.

Early in the third period it was the "Little Giant" who raced 41 yards to the enemy 15-yard line. The touchdown was still 15 yards off but to Mizell, Thomason and Lumpkin that distance is nothing when it is shortened by determination.

With three drives Mizell, Lumpkin and Thomason placed the ball on the enemy two-yard line and the big Texas Long Horn dove over the line for Tech's second touchdown Stumpy's unerring toe made the extra point and the count was 14-6.

Still the Bulldog failed to give up. But the Bulldog, like all others, has a limit to strength and Tech's third touchdown came within a few minutes after a terrific drive from midfield. The names of Thomason and Lumpkin stood out in this part of the detail like warts on a debutante's nose.

To begin with Lumpkin and Thomason ran the ball three times and stopped on the 19-yard line. Mizell then advanced six yards and Thomason hit the line to leave the oval on the 3-yard stripe. The "Little Giant" again was called upon and he hit the center of the line. His drive seemed checked at the line of scrimmage but with four tacklers holding to various

Bill Doak, Ball Player, Hurt in Wreck

Bradenton, Fla., December 8—(AP) Bill Doak, famous spitball pitcher of the National league, suffered a dislocated shoulder and other injuries and Mrs. Doak received severe cuts about the head and body when the automobile in which they were driving was struck and overturned by another car here late today.

Doak was formerly a hurler for the Brooklyn Nationals and has been used recently by that club as a relief hurler. He was one of the few told-time spitball hurlers remaining in the big leagues.

BERT NIEHOFF GOES TO GIANTS AS M'GRAW AID

Bert Niehoff—the Skipper—is back in the big show.

It has been nearly 10 years since Niehoff played in the major leagues, a broken leg having sent him to the minors where he fell to managing baseball clubs in an effective way. He managed Atlanta's Crackers for five years and only last week resigned, he and R. J. Spiller being unable to agree on salary.

But the Skipper has now gone up. Last night he made the announcement that he had joined the staff of the New York Giants, of the National league, in the capacity of assistant to John McGraw, the Mad Mullah of Manhattan, and manager of the Giants.

Bert will have charge of the infielders just as Ray Schalk, who recently became associated with the Giants, will have charge of the batterymen. The Skipper's charges will report to him on February 15 at Hot Springs, Ark., for training.

Niehoff, so he said Saturday night, feels that he is making a wise move in joining the McGraw forces. He could have, very easily, secured a berth as manager of a minor league club. But he believes that a season or so under McGraw will teach him much about the tricks of managing and will also lead to a better position such as managership of a major league club.

'Gators Fail In Important Goal Kicking

Peninsular Team Has Two Chances To Tie Score; McEver Star of Battle.

BY ALAN J. GOULD.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Knoxville, Tenn., December 8.—(AP) The Volunteers of Tennessee, playing with all the dashing and daring skill of youth, scuttled the Southern Conference championship hopes of Florida today in a thrilling climax to one of the greatest of Dixie gridiron seasons.

These sturdy sons of Tennessee, with a scrappy fast charging line and three sensational sophomores in the backfield, ripped into the defenses of the country's highest powered scoring machine, tore it apart in the first half with a bewildering attack and had the stuff to turn back Florida's desperate counter thrust that fell only a single point shy of squaring the count.

Volunteers Worried.

Tennessee's final margin was 13 to 12, so close that chills were running up and down the spines of Volunteer partisans as Florida darkened the air with passes in the final part of the game, yet sufficient to wind up the home team's season in triumphant fashion.

A wildly excited crowd of 17,000, including Governor Horton, of Tennessee, filled every available inch of Shields Watkins field to see the Volunteers not only spoil Florida's hopes of sharing the southern title with Georgia Tech, but strengthen their own claims to a share of the national gridiron spotlight for 1928.

McEver Is Star.

These youthful stars in Orange and White, with a brilliant backfield trio in Gene McEver, Buddy Hackman and Bobby Dodd, all sophomores, carried on where their predecessors left off to give Tennessee the distinction of finishing its second successive undefeated season. Only a Thanksgiving day scoreless tie with Kentucky keeps the Vols from claiming an equal share of southern title glory

Eight Tech Men Placed on Constitution's All-Star Squad

22 Players Are Picked By Hawkins

Mizell and Thomason Selected for Halfback Posts; Pund Starting Center of Outfit.

BY DICK HAWKINS.

If you have a well-founded desire to go raving, tearing crazy and bite your grandmother on the ear, there is one simple way to accomplish your purpose. You may reach this delectable state of dementia without failing in the stock market, acquiring ill health or drinking some of your best friend's "real Scotch." All you need to do is try and pick an "all-anything team" of football players.

Before going further with this discourse on southern football's astronomical prerogativities let it be known that Mrs. Hawkin's eldest son has discovered, after considerable cogitation, that these "all-anything" teams are a lot of prune juice in so far as their general accuracy is concerned.

With football at its present high state of development the selection of an all-Southern, or an all-American or an all-Sandlot team is just a lot of guessing no matter who does the selecting.

With this in mind your correspondent has made a resolve this year which he will choose to follow in years to come. He will pick a football squad which will be known as The Constitution's all-Southern squad.

Several Reasons.

There are several reasons for this move. The first is fully explained above. If just one "first team" is selected it is possible to fill a very few positions with the satisfaction of knowing that the men named in these berths are unquestionably the best in the community but in the other positions one must follow a system of "trading" schools or otherwise arrive at conclusions that are bound to be based on personal prejudices.

In this age of advanced football when all-star teams are actually being selected for the purpose of playing games against other all-star outfits any selection of an "all-anything" would be an empty gesture unless the players selected were theoretically fit to play together on a team.

By this method of reasoning it is entirely evident that the selection of one team of 11 men would be palpably a mistake, whereas the selection of 22 of the best men in the conference would give any coach handling the team a chance to pick his best combinations. One individual might be a better all-around football player than the other man for his position but he might not fit into one team while he did in the other.

The 1928 Selection.

Your correspondent reached the above conclusions after long consultations with coaches, players and writers who have had considerable experience in their various fields. The actual selections in our all-Southern squad were made with the aid of Bill Fincher, all-American tackle and line coach at Georgia Tech, who has been writing for The Constitution this year.

Bill is of the frank opinion that the selection of one "all-Southern" works an injustice to many players and is merely an empty gesture from the standpoint of working football. So with this bit of explanation let us launch into the story of our selections for The Constitution's all-Southern squad.

The personnel of the squad is as follows:

Centers: Pund, of Tech, and Pressley, of Clemson.
Guards: Drennon, of Tech; Farris, of North Carolina; Jacobson, of Georgia, and Hagler, of Alabama.
Tackles: Speer, of Tech; Hawkins, of Vanderbilt; Drury, of Kentucky, and Thrash, of Tech.
Ends: Van Sickel, of Florida; Waddy, of Tech; Abernathy, of Vanderbilt, and E. Smith, of Alabama.
Quarters: Armistead, of Vanderbilt, and Crabtree, of Florida.
Halves: Mizell, of Tech; Thomason, of Tech; Banker, of Tulane, and Dudley, of Georgia.
Fullbacks: Holm, of Alabama, and Randolph, of Tech.

Naturally after picking a squad of 22 men it is necessary to carry out the idea that a starting team be selected. Bill Fincher selected his starting team from this squad and gave a good explanation for his selection. He made it plain that the starting team is the best balanced combination in the 22 men, though some individuals who start may not be greater individual stars than those on the reserve list. This squad is theoretically the millenium in football—wherein replacements do not weaken the combination noticeably.

Peter Pund at Center.

At center on the starting outfit we would have Peter Pund. The big Tech boy is the greatest defensive center in the United States today. That is one of the positions where Uncle William Fincher and your correspondent had no trouble. When time comes for replacement this position would be well filled by Pressley, who hasn't made a bad snap on offense in three years, though his defensive work is not as good as that of Pund.

At the guard positions Drennon and Farris would start. Both of these men are bruisers though not large. Both weigh just a bit more than 180 pounds and either could play the roving position. Both are chain lightning if called upon to go down under punts and both have good use of their hands. When one or both of them comes out Jacobson and Westbrooke can fill the position without any appreciable loss of efficiency. Both of these men are stars of aggressiveness and both are fast, though not as speedy as Drennon and Farris. Jacobson, particularly, is a hound on interference.

At the tackles we would start Thrash and Hawkins. These two men are of the shock troop variety. They would be thrown in to wear down the opposing linemen. They are both exceptionally expert on defense with an uncanny ability to analyze opposing plays. Thrash weighs about 190 pounds and Hawkins about 200. When they were taken out Speer and Drury would take their places. These last named tackles are as fast as quarterbacks and particularly good on offense. If a coach chose to start them they would play the shock troop part themselves. Those four tackles would be hard to beat with any combination of four in the country.

Two Star Ends.

At ends Wady and VanSickel would start. The former is the greatest defensive end in the country today with the possible exception of his teammate, Tom Jones, and VanSickel is one of the greatest offensive flankmen. VanSickel would be there to receive passes and both men are pictures of football speed on defense, particularly covering punts. With this pair, VanSickel furnishes the height and super speed while Waddy is a fighter of the first water and particularly strong on defense. On interference he is accurate and deadly. With Abernathy and Smith in the lineup the height and speed would still be there, and both can take passes.

At quarterback the squad has two of the finest the south has ever produced in Armistead and Crabtree. A statter from this pair is difficult to pick, but our dual entente decided to start Armistead with the shock troops. The tow-headed gentleman from Vanderbilt has conclusively proven his generalship on the field and as a ball-carrier he is probably equal to Crabtree behind the same line. As a passer and punter there is little choice so any substitution there would make little change in the strength.

Mizell, Thomason at Halves.

At halves we would start Mizell and Thomason, both of Georgia Tech. There are several reasons for this. Thomason is a typical "shock back." He is probably the most deadly tackler on secondary defense in the conference and as a safety man he is without a peer. As an interfering back he is just as valuable as he is on defense and every time he takes the ball from scrimmage there is a touchdown in the offing. With Dudley in his place and Banker in Mizell's shoes the combination would be almost as strong on defense and nearly as strong on offense. Banker behind the line picked for him in this selection would be a superb running back. He punts well and with Dudley as an interfering back the combination would be nearly as good for advancing the ball.

At fullback Randolph would start for shock work. The little fellow is a demon tackler and though he gives the appearance in a game of being "all in" from the kickoff he never gives out. He takes a beating for a full game and likes it. He can carry the ball through the line for necessary yardage almost any time, and he is consistent. Holm is faster and bigger. With the opposition weakened he could take the field. He can pass and punt if called upon to do so, and is not only a bruising runner, but has sufficient speed for sweeping runs if called upon to make them. Backing up the line he has few peers in this country.

PART OF THE CONSTITUTION'S ALL-SOUTHERN SQUAD

To make The Constitution's mythical all-southern squad, selected by Bill Fincher and Dick Hawkins, a bit less mythical a few shots of the boys are grouped here for your perusal. You are looking at a lot of football material. No. 1 is Peter Pund, of Georgia Tech, selected as captain of the squad. He is one of the two centers. No. 2 is a curly-haired gentleman known as Warner Mizell, who has been cutting large figures at Tech this year. He is one of the four halfbacks on the squad. Armistead, of Vanderbilt, is one of the two greatest quarterbacks the south has seen in many years. His number in this picture is 3. Raleigh Drennon is No. 4. Raleigh, in case you don't know, is a guard. Frank Waddy comes next. He is an end, and a mighty good one. The determined gentleman with the ball under his arm is the little giant, Thomason, another halfback. No. 7 is Roy Jacobson, co-captain of the Bulldogs, and another guard. No. 8 is the handsome Tony Holm, of Alabama, fullback de luxe, who rates the squad without much question. Frank Speer, Tech tackle, is the rotund gentleman numbered 9, and he is another unanimous choice. Next to him is Thrash, another Tech tackle, who has helped to make Tech's line the greatest in the nation. Below, at the left, is Drury, of Kentucky, another tackle who won a place on the squad. Next is Vansickel, fleet Florida end, who plays opposite Waddy or Abernathy or Smith on the mythical coach's mythical squad. Cannonball Clyde Crabtree, of Florida, is No. 15, and he is another quarterback who shares glory with Armistead. Bob Randolph is the sprinter in the lower right-hand corner, and Bob mark you, is a fullback. Not so sensational, not so big, but just plain good all the time.

NorthCarolina Defeats Duke In Annual Tilt

Tarheels Stage Desperate Rally To Overcome Early Lead and Win, 14 to 7.

BY A. F. LITTLEJOHN.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Chapel Hill, N. C., December 8.—(AP)—Outclassed and outplayed for the first two periods, the University of North Carolina Tar Heels came back in the last half of their annual football contest with Duke university in Kenan Memorial stadium here this afternoon to demonstrate their superiority over the Blue Devils in convincing fashion and walked off the field with the big end of a 14-to-7 score.

The record of the first half was written by Jankoski, the Blue Devil fullback, who refused to be halted by any of the opposition offered by the charges of Coach Chuck Collins, but in the third and fourth periods it was a different story, with Magner playing the leading role in the offense of the Carolinians. Jankoski plugged his way through the Tar Heel line time after time with almost monotonous regularity. And mainly because of his driving power, the Millionaires led by a margin of 7 to 0 at the half.

All Best Of It.

North Carolina had all the best of it in the last two periods. Magner, who went into the lineup for Jimmy Ward, plowed through the Duke line and skirted the ends for appreciable gains practically every time he was called upon, and he had valiant assistance from his fellows of the backfield. Both teams depended principally on line plays and end runs for their gains. In the last period Duke tried forward pass after forward pass in an effort to even the score, but with uniform unsuccess.

After a scoreless first period, Duke placed the ball on Carolina's 35-yard line in the second period with a seven-yard pass, Buie to Warren, one of the three aerial attacks completed by the lads from Durham. Jankoski hit the line twice for small gains, and Buie tried another pass which fell to the ground. Officials held that there had been interference by Carolina, and the gain was allowed, placing the ball on the Tar Heel's 17-yard line. Murray then clipped off eight yards straight through the Carolina team, and Jankoski, with three plunges, went over for the touchdown. Buie drop-kicked the extra point. The half ended with the ball in midfield.

35-Yard Dash.

Erickson went into the Carolina backfield at the beginning of the third period, and after alternating with Magner in carrying the ball from midfield to the 35-yard line, he brought the stands to their feet with a 35-yard dash for a touchdown, breaking through the Duke line and dodging at least two of the Blue Devils' secondary defense. The Tar Heels forged ahead with a touchdown in the final period, when Maus, a substitute halfback, shot a forward pass over the goal to Fenner, who replaced Presson at end. Whisnant kicked Carolina's extra point after the first touchdown, while Jackson did the booting for the second.

Just before the second Carolina touchdown, Hunter, of the Blue Devils picked up the ball after a fumble by Magner on the Duke four-yard line, and ran back to within the Carolina five-yard line, a sprint of more than 90 yards, but the officials ruled the whistle had blown at the time of the fumble, and the play was called back.

12 First Downs.

Each team made 12 first downs in the game. In the first half Duke made seven while Carolina made one, while in the last two periods the Tar Heels chalked up 11 to 5 for the Blue Devils. Carolina completed three out of nine forward passes attempted, and Duke completed three out of 15. The gains from scrimmage were 234 for the Tar Heels to 218 for the Blue Devils.

Carolina thus completed the season without a defeat by a North Carolina team, but was prevented from having a clear record by a 6-6 tie with North Carolina State. Duke beat State, 14 to 12.

"Lines by Fincher"

BY BILL FINCHER,
All-American Tackle and Tech Line Coach.

Well, folks, it was a regular Tech-Georgia affair. A game between these two schools always starts on an even basis, no matter what sort of a record either may have behind it.

* * * *

Georgia played a magnificent game, not as individuals, as is so often the case, but as a united eleven. Eleven individuals could not be found who would put up the game fight that those Georgia boys did against us.

If there were outstanding men on Georgia's team it seemed to me that they were Jacobson and Maflett in the line and Hooks and Hill in the backfield. If their team could have functioned as well against other conference teams I doubt if any other would have beaten the Bulldog.

Some people know very little about football, less about team play and still less about the rivalry between Tech and Georgia. If they did, then such remarks as "Tech didn't try; the Jackets didn't want to beat Georgia badly," would never be heard. Let me tell you that Tech FOUGHT; it had to. We also played good football against a GOOD FOOTBALL TEAM, and don't let anyone tell you otherwise.

Our boys played well as a unit. The balance in power being on our side more of our men had the chance to make outstanding plays. In the line Thrash, Maree, Waddy and Watkins had the chance to shine. Watkins' recovery of a fumble presented the opportunity for our first touchdown. In the backfield Lumpkin and Thomason were continually and consistently standing out. On hard, straight football, Thrash, Drennon and Pund had a slight edge over the others, but there were 22 men on the field at all times who acquitted themselves well.

* * * *

There were surprisingly few substitutions for a hard-fought game like yesterday's. I sent Maree in for Watkins and Brooke was the only other line substitution. Of the backs Thomason and Durant went all the way.

* * * *

It's all over now and I can certainly state that I am glad this game is over and chalked up to our credit.

A Good Team.

Iowa has a good team. The victory over Minnesota settled arguments in the middle west. In one game this year Iowa gained 868 yards.

CASTLE HEIGHTS OF TENNESSEE WINS IN EAST

New York, December 8.—(United News.)—The south triumphed over the east here today when Castle Heights Military academy, of Lebanon, Tenn., defeated St. John's Prep, of Brooklyn, 25 to 0, in an intersectional school boy football game on snow-covered Ebbetts field.

The southerners with a line that averaged 210 pounds, outplayed the Brooklyn eleven in every department of the game. Both teams fumbled frequently and were greatly handicapped by the icy field.

Castle Heights scored first in the second period when a poor punt by Yosco, St. John's halfback, was downed on the 30-yard line. Two first downs gained on straight line play put the ball on the six-yard line where a pass, McLean, halfback, to Hardin, quarter, earned the first touchdown.

St. John's fumbled the kickoff which followed the first score and the southern eleven recovered on the 40-yard line. Three first downs in rapid succession put the ball on St. John's five-yard line where Hardin slashed off tackle to score. A pass, McLean to Hardin, added the extra point.

The third touchdown came early in the second half when Woods, a halfback, went over the line after two first downs had placed the ball on the seven-yard line.

A spectacular pass from midfield accounted for the final score. Wood passed from the 45-yard line to Green, who ran 25 yards to the goal.

St. John's failed to make a serious threat during the game. Castle Heights held a decided edge on passing, running, kicking, and in the effectiveness of their defense.

The kicking was generally poor on the part of both teams, all backs finding it difficult to control the icy ball.

Score by quarters:

Castle Heights	0	13	6	6	25

Scholar-Athlete Will Be Awarded

Kansas City, December 8.—(AP)—Scholarship as an integral part of the qualifications of a well-rounded athlete, was recognized today by faculty members of the Big Six athletic conference when they took action to reward the best scholar-athlete of each school. The matter was one of several disposed of at the regular December meeting of the organization, now in its first year.

A committee was named to formulate plans to begin this honoring of scholar-athletes in the spring. The athlete in each school who has shown the highest ability in scholastic attainments and athletics throughout his course, would be honored, faculty members ruled. A medal or a plaque would be his award.

The Bowie course is said to be the best cushioned and fastest track in the country now.

IRISH CAGERS OPEN SEASON ON MONDAY

Notre Dame, Ind., December 8.—Coach George Keegan's University of Notre Dame basketball quintet will get its first test of the season Monday when it meets the Armour Tech five of Chicago at Notre Dame.

For the past several seasons, the Technicians have served as trial horses for Keogan's machines, and it is seldom that they do not give the Irish a battle. Keogan expects a strong argument from them this year, and is working his men at a fast pace this week in order to have them functioning as smoothly as possible for the opening game.

Since John Colrick, veteran center, has been prevented by his football activities from reporting for cage practice as yet, Bob Voglewede, Bob Newbold or Marshall Kizer will hold down the pivot position in the opening game, with Captain Crowe and Captain Jachym at the forward positions, and Ed Smith and Clarence Donovan at the guard berths.

Tom Moynihan and Jim Bray, other veteran guards, also have been kept away from the basketball court because of football, and they will not be ready for the Armour Tech game. Bray alternated with Donovan at the floor guard job last season, and is a veteran of two years' experience. Moynihan is a capable back guard, but since he fractured an arm in the Southern California football game, he will not be available for several weeks.

Cochet Is Ranked First in France

Paris, December 8.—(AP)—Henri Cochet, star of the French Davis Cup team and winner of the American and French tennis championships, replaces Rene Lacoste at the head of the French first ten players, issued today by the French tennis federation. Lacoste, who has been alternating with Cochet at the top for the few years, is ranked second. The other players in order are, Jean Borotra, Jacques Brugnon, Christian Boussus, Rene Debuzelet, Pierre Landry, R. Georges, E. Duplaix and A. Gentien.

The list of the first five women players was issued at the same time. They are Mesdames Maathieu, Deloges, Lafaurie, Golding and Bordes.

The selection of the brilliant ball boy, of Lyons, for the tennis throne met with wide approval among the tennis experts who have been watching the increasing power and finesse of his game through several years. This season Cochet defeated Lacoste, first in last year's ranking, to win the French title; crushed Big Bill Tilden in the final match of the Davis cup challenge round, and conquered Francis T. Hunter in the final of the American championships. Recently he was placed at the head of the "world's first ten" selected by A. Wallis Myers, noted British tennis authority.

Regular Tech-Georgia Game, Says Staton

Game Was Satisfying From Every Angle, Says Expert—Georgia Played Well Defensively.

BY JOHN STATON.

Viewed from all angles, a more satisfying game of football has never been played than that encounter which marked another epoch in athletic relations between Georgia Tech and the University of Georgia.

Before the game the Georgia supporters were unanimous in conceding the game to Tech, due partially to Tech's record, and principally to a recent epidemic of influenza which ravaged their team. They felt Georgia was doomed to a terrible drubbing at the hands of the powerful eleven that had defeated Notre Dame, Alabama and Vanderbilt.

You may be sure they are satisfied with the wonderful display of fight, football, and sheer courage exhibited by the Athenian warriors.

On the other hand, Tech was able to maintain the slate clean, and to carry the heavy burden of an undefeated season on to a glorious finale. There is something intangible, yet terribly depressing about the undefeated season. It is a mental hazard which presses harder and harder on the mind of the player, often to the extent of destroying his vitality in a crucial game.

The Psychology of It.

You win one game, and that is not so bad. Then another and another. The odds against your continuing this form become increasingly greater. And the hazard piles up. At the end of the season there is not a man on the squad who does not catch himself constantly wondering, "What if we lose tomorrow?"

So, when Tech entered the game yesterday afternoon the strain of an unbroken season was bearing heavily, very heavily, on the entire outfit, team, coaches and supporters.

Naturally, Tech is satisfied to win the game, to carry through the season without a defeat, and to win thereby the undisputed championship of the S. I. C., and a valid claim to national honors.

Coaches Doctors.

Tonight the Georgia coaches stand out preeminently in the medical profession. They have uncovered a system of taking dead men, and not only reviving them, but sending them into the fray bigger and better than ever. Two years ago they put this mysterious power to work on George Morton, carried from the field unconscious. He revived sufficiently to come back into the game in the last half, and with small aid, defeated Tech, which had piled up a 13-point lead.

Yesterday a team which had been ravaged by the "flu" stood toe to toe with Tech's powerful forces. True Georgia was defeated, but what a stubborn fight that group of sick men put up!

Superior Power.

As in the other games, Tech's victory was due to superior power, offensively and defensively. Tech did not resort to cunning or trickery. Save for three attempts, one of which was successful, Tech's pass threat lay dormant all afternoon. With the exception of Thomason's 42-yard dash, all of Tech's gains were small four, five, and six yards, with an occasional 10-yard dash. GEORGIA fought stubbornly and fiercely, but a stronger team pushed it relentlessly backward.

The third quarter is an admirable illustration of that tremendous force which has characterized the Tech play all season. Tech kicked off to McCrary, who returned the ball 18 yards. Georgia gained two on the first play from scrimmage. The next play failed to gain. Hill kicked to Thomason, who returned three yards. The ball was at this time on Tech's 43-yard line. Thomason, behind that mighty interfering of Father Lumpkin, went off left tackle for 42 yards before being forced out of bounds, 12 yards from the goal. A buck netted a yard, another 10 and first down. Two more bucks and the ball was over for a touchdown.

More Marching.

Tech kicked off again to Georgia, who returned the kickoff about 18 yards. Georgia tried two plays at the line and then punted to Thomason who brought the ball to the center of the field. From this point, Tech marched straight for a touchdown. Thirteen plays were needed to cover this distance. A five-yard penalty made the total travel 55 yards. So the average gain was just a little better than four yards. That gives you some idea of how Georgia was fighting. And it also shows you that Tech was powerful enough to connect a series of short gains for four successive first downs.

The first two touchdowns made, one by Georgia, the other by Tech, came somewhat in the nature of gifts from the opposing team. Tech had the ball on its own 27-yard line, after a beautiful kick by Hill had rolled out of bounds. Mizell was back to receive the ball. The pass came low. Mizell attempted to scoop it up. Georgia men tackled him, he fumbled, and Palmer recovered. Palmer advanced the ball to the 12-yard line where he was thrown out of bounds by Durant. Georgia tried three running plays to no success. On fourth down, however, they completed a beautiful pass in the end zone for a touchdown.

McCrary Fumbles.

In the second quarter, Georgia attempted a lateral pass, which was fumbled by McCrary and Watkins recovered. It was Tech's ball on the 18-yard line. Three thrusts into the line gave Tech a first down and placed the ball on the eight-yard line. Georgia held stubbornly, but Tech punched it over on fourth down.

Georgia employed an excellent defense to stop those vicious line thrusts that have spelled defeat for so many teams this season. Seven men in the line of scrimmage gave Tech plenty of trouble. Two side backs were placed behind either tackle about five yards back, and two more behind these at an interval of about 10 yards. Georgia really had then, three lines of defense. The two side backs were especially alert, and played beautiful defensive ball. They came up fast to tackle, and many times brought down without gain a runner who seemed sure to get away for five or six yards. These two men bore the brunt of Tech's offensive drive, and bore it well.

It is almost unkind to deal in personalities in a game like the Georgia game, when every player tries so hard and does so well. But it would be more unkind to pass up without especial mention the outstanding work of Thomason and Lumpkin. Thomason never fought harder in his life and that is saying a lot. He never once fumbled, and Georgia had to put him on the ground every time he ran.

Lumpkin-Thomason Shine.

Lumpkin exhibited the prettiest interfering that has been seen on the field this year. Whether it was returning punts, or leading a smash into the line, or leading for an end run, Lumpkin was always in there cutting down. Without a doubt his work in this department was the individual feature of the day. Without his power in the interference, Tech could not have scored yesterday.

When you view the record of this Georgia Tech team, it makes you sad; sad to think that this team will play together as a unit just once more. But these boys have made history, a glowing, colorful, history that will ever reflect credit on them and their coaches.

I am thankful for the opportunity of having watched them come through a severe season without a single defeat, without a single tie, and with less than 50 points scored against them. I am thankful for the opportunity of seeing in action the best team that Georgia Tech has ever had.

Rowland To Pilot Nashville in 1929

Nashville, Tenn., December 8.—(AP) Clarence ("Pants") Rowland, who led the Chicago White Sox to a world's championship in 1917, has been signed to manage the Nashville club of the Southern association, Jack Whaley, president of the Vols, made the announcement. Rowland's salary "is the highest ever paid a manager in the Southern association," Whaley said.

Jimmie Hamilton, former manager, has disposed of his stock in the club to Rogers Caldwell, who now owns a majority stock in the team.

Stars From 19 Conference Teams To Play Charity Game Here

Tech Players To Be Missing From Classic

Northern and Southern Elevens Are Selected From Best in South.

Lexington, Ky., December 8.—(AP)—Nineteen southern conference institutions will furnish players on the two football teams which will play an all-conference charity game in Atlanta on New Year's day. The selections made by coaches from conference schools were announced today through the Associated Press by Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, secretary of the conference.

One eleven will be made up of players from schools in what the coaches have designated as the southern division, and another from those in the northern section of the body.

Georgia Tech, Georgia, Alabama, Tulane and Louisiana State will be represented on this team, while North Carolina, Clemson, Vanderbilt, Tennessee, South Carolina, Virginia Polytechnic, Maryland, Washington and Lee, Virginia Military institute, Kentucky, and University of Virginia will supply the northern warriors.

The selections follow:

Southern Division Team—Pund, Drennon, Speer, Waddy, Mizell and Thomason, Georgia Tech; Boland, Jackson, Lautzenheiser and McCrary, Georgia; Banker, Tulane; Hagler, Sington, Smith, Hicks and Holm, Alabama; Wilson and Tinsley, Louisiana State; Van Sickle and Crabtree, Florida; Pappenheimer, Mississippi A. and M.; Gerald Walker, University of Mississippi.

Northern Division Team—Schwartz, Ferris, Vaughn and Sapp, University of North Carolina; Pressley, Clemson; Brown, Luskey, Abernathy and Armistead, Vanderbilt; Tripp, McEver and Hackman, Tennessee; Wolfe and Zoebel, University of South Carolina; Bailey and Peake, Virginia Polytechnic; Snider, Dodson and Crowthers, Maryland; White, Washington and Lee; Barnes, Virginia Military institute; Drury and Dees, Kentucky; Sloan, Virginia.

TECH STARS MUST BE REPLACED.

Georgia Tech players named on the all-star team to play in Atlanta New Year's day will have to be replaced by other conference stars, it was stated by Georgia athletic officials yesterday afternoon.

Following agreement to participate in the contest here, Georgia Tech accepted the invitation to play on the west coast against California. This will prevent any players from remaining in Atlanta for the contest.

with Georgia Tech, which closed its campaign at Atlanta today by beating Georgia before moving on to represent Dixie in the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena New Year's day.

As it stands, Tennessee, under the coaching of the old West Point star, Major Bob Neyland, has played 20 consecutive games over a three-year period without defeat, winning 18 and tying two others.

25 Victories.

The complete three-year record under Neyland's skillful guidance shows 25 victories out of 28 games, with only a defeat by Vanderbilt two years ago and the brace of tie games to mar one of the most consistent records of any college team in the country.

Neyland rose from a sick bed, where he has been confined by "flu" for several days to see his young charges outdo themselves today as they got the jump on the brilliant Florida array, took the lead in the second period and kept it to the finish in spite of the most determined counter charges of "Cannonball Clyde" Crabtree and his crew of fighting 'Gators.

Florida, unbeaten previously this year and with a speedy, well-drilled outfit that had rolled up the astonishing total of 324 points in eight games, entered the game topheavy favorite, colors flying and confident of victory.

Banner Flying.

Their banner was still flying and they were still fighting, desperately even if ineffectually, in a palpitating final five minutes as Tennessee's alert defense withstood the aerial shocks of the visitors.

It took all the youthful resourcefulness, courage and skill of Tennessee's band to withstand the last half aerial attack of Florida. Twice it paved the way for touchdowns, as Van Sickel, star end, and Tommy Owens, substitute back, took long heaves to the threshold of the Volunteer goal, where it was a simple matter for Goodbread and Owens to make the scores.

Each touchdown tallied by Florida put the 'Gators within a point of Tennessee but each time the failure of the try for extra point kept the visitors from catching their flying rivals. Florida tried a pass first that narrowly missed ringing up the added point, and a kick the second time, but both failed. Thus, in the final analysis, Tennessee's winning margin was due to a clever pass, tossed by Dodd to Herc Alley, end, for the extra point made after the first Volunteer touchdown.

Tennessee's running attack with Hackman and McEver—"Hack and Mack" the twin terrors, as Vol rooters call them—ripping through Florida's line, got the home team off to a flying start. Each of these stars scored a touchdown but it was the brilliant, all-around de[illegible] work of Dodd, aided by Ha[illegible] that kept the 'Gators from flying [illegible]rough the air to victory.

It was this alert defensive work that enabled Hackman to break through early in the fourth period, pluck a short lateral pass by Crabtree out of the air and race 26 yards for Tennessee's second touchdown, aided by some smart interference by Tripp, veteran guard. It was the same skillful watchfulness on the part of Dodd that twice broke up Florida threats deep in Tennessee territory. Playing at quarterback in place of the injured Captain Roy Witt, Dodd also displayed superb generalship in his selection of plays and twice put Florida on the defensive with quick kicks that fooled the 'Gator backs completely and cost them many valuable yards.

There was not a great deal to choose, on the whole, between these two rivals, each with flashing attacks, aggressive lines and a deceptive assortment of plays. Tennessee's running game was superior, especially in the first half, and the Vols put up a more alert defense, but Florida was a constant threat through the air as the 'Gators likewise made many gallant defensive stands, in which Jimmy Steele, husky guard, and Van Sickel, at end, stood out conspicuously. Each team registered 16 first downs.

Aerial Attacks.

Tennessee's aerial game, while not quite as spectacular as that of its rival's, was nevertheless effective and cleverly used to reenforce the power plays, off tackle, by Hackman and McEver. A 25-yard pass, Dodd to Hackman, paved the way for McEver to plunge over for the first touchdown in the second period and Dodd's pass to Alley for the extra point that later proved so useful. This drive, carrying 56 yards down the field, put the Vols in the lead after their running game twice had been checked inside Florida's 20-yard line.

Florida opened the [illegible]rter with a rush after Van [illegible]had downed the kickoff on his own 40-yard line and swept sixty yards to a touchdown scored by Goodbread after Van Sickel had grabbed a 26-yard pass from Crabtree and reached the Tennessee one-yard line. Crabtree tried a pass to his star end for the extra point, but it was blocked.

Determined Drive.

Late in the third period Florida stopped a determined drive by Hackman and McEver on its five-yard line, but the Vols opened the final quarter spectacularly as Hackman speared Crabtree's attempted lateral and dashed for a touchdown.

Seven points behind and bucking a team that was seizing every opening, Florida launched a fine counter thrust, sweeping 74 yards on a series of short passes and off tackle dashes by Cawthorn, fullback, only to have the drive fail a yard from the goal line. Tennessee took the ball on downs but Dodd's punt traveled only 30 yards and Tommy Owens, rushed into the game, scored a touchdown on two plays, taking a 29-yard pass from Brumbaugh and then hurtling through the line for the remaining yard. This time, a kick was tried for the point that would tie the score, but Brumbaugh's boot was blocked and Tennessee with the end of the game in sight, frustrated every remaining effort of Florida to work its passing game successfully. In fast, so well was it broken up that the 'Gators were forced back and in danger of being scored upon themselves as the final whistle blew.

HAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

by DICK HAWKINS

"Dope."

SOME time in your life if you're a sport fan you have seen a boxer, decidedly outclassed by an opponent, go to the mat with blood running from the corner of his mouth. You have seen him come to one knee at the count of eight and stagger to his feet at the count of nine with both fists swinging desperately. You have seen him go to the mat again from a well-placed blow and you have felt pity for him but that pity was almost overshadowed by your admiration for his grit.

Thus it was at Grant field Saturday when the Bulldog met the Tornado. During the first two rounds the Bulldog sprang to the center of the ring with the bell and swapped blow for blow with the Tornado. The Bulldog blows were weaker and not as well placed but they were sent with all the strength at the command of the fighter. After two rounds the Tornado ripped through the Bulldog guard and stung his plucky face and body with punches that sent him to his knees again. More than once the complete knockout seemed at hand but each time the broken fighter came back and in the closing round fought his most determined fight. That, gentlemen, takes grit.

If you want to know just how much of a losing fight Georgia was playing Saturday look at the figures. If you want to know how hopeless the situation was except to a team with a real fighting heart look at the figures. In every department of the game except the item of pluck Tech was over the Bulldog like a dollar over a dime.

To begin with, Tech made 12 first downs to three for Georgia and two of the Bulldog's first downs came on passes. From running plays Georgia carded a net gain of TWO yards. On all plays from scrimmage Georgia gained 27 yards net. Tech gained 219 yards net from running plays and its one completed pass for 13 yards made the total from scrimmage 232 yards. That gives some idea of the type of battle Georgia was waging. And every man on that field in the Red jersies knew it.

The Bulldogs tried seven passes and completed two for a total gain of 25 yards. Tech tried three and completed one for a gain of 13 yards. In punting Mizell and Dunlap again showed the superiority of the Tornado. Tech punted seven times for an average of 43 yards while Hill, of Georgia, punted 12 times for an average of 36 yards. Waddy kicked off for Tech six times and averaged 53 yards on the boots. Georgia never kicked off.

Another figure that indicates the type of fighting game both teams were playing is contained in the individual records. Thomason was leading ground gainer with an average of 5.4 yards on 17 tries. Lumpkin was next with an average of a little over three yards on 20 tries. This is the first time this season any team has held all Tornado backs to such a low average. There was really but one long run in the game, that made by Thomason in the third period when he took 41 yards through tackle.

Good News.

THE announcement of coaches' selection for the all-conference charity game to be played in Atlanta on New Year's day furnishes a bit of juicy gossip for the football fans to mumble over during these next three weeks when sports are dull and winter nights are long.

It is with particular glee that the fans see the definite announcement that Grant field will be the scene of the big game on New Year's day. That will mean that football followers will be able to see the all-conference game at the Flats, then return home and hear most of the Rose Bowl game over the radio due to the difference in time.

The selection of players seems exceptionally good from a standpoint of balance. The south section will be weakened a bit by the loss of the Tech players who must go to the coast to meet California but other strength can be recruited to fill their places.

The experiment will be watched with interest. The Masonic orders that are staging the game plan to make it an annual affair if it proves successful this time and there is no reason for its failure. To begin with, the fans will have an opportunity to see most of the outstanding stars of the conference in action and they will be given an opportunity to help a worthy charity. All proceeds go to the Masonic hospitals for crippled children in conference cities.

The Shriners have made an important move in inaugurating this game and Atlanta will share in its benefits. Atlanta will support it.

Wet and Dry.

California had no grass this year and watered the field to lay the dust. There was no sun and the field was slippery for the fast backs of Southern California.

Maranville, Harper Sold By Cardinals

House Cleaning Again Starts at St. Louis; "Rabbit" Goes Despite Ability.

St. Louis, December 8.—(United News.)—"House cleaning" in the camp of the St. Louis Cardinals, 1928 National league pennant winners, started today with the release of Walter ("Rabbit") Maranville, veteran shortstop, and George Harper, outfielder, obtained last season from the Giants. The two players, who were important factors in the Cardinals' drive for the championship, were sent to the Boston Braves.

Announcement of the release was made in a telegram from Vice President Branch Rickey to Secretary Clarence Lloyd. No further details were given and it is not known whether the Cardinals received players or cash in exchange.

Trade Expected.

Maranville's passing was not unexpected although the "Rabbit" was an important cog in the Cardinals' 1928 machine and was one of the few St Louis players who played up to standard in the world series in which the Cardinals were routed by the New York Yankees. Maranville has been playing major league ball for 19 years and in 1928 had one of the best seasons of his career. He is a favorite in Boston, having been a member of the infield on the Braves' world champions of 1914. At that time Maranville teamed at second base with Johnny Evers, who has been appointed coach of the 1929 Boston team. After his career with the Braves, Maranville became one of the "good time Charlies" of baseball and for a number of seasons he had been considered through with big time baseball.

Great Season.

When signed by the Cardinals last season to fill in for Tommy Thevenow, injured star, Maranville foreswore the dissipations which had handicapped his play and turned in one of the best seasons of his career.

Harper is also a veteran player, but his major league career has been comparatively brief. He was obtained by the Cardinals last season and his hitting won many games for the club. In one important series between the Cardinals and Giants, at the time the two clubs were fighting for the pennant Harper hit three home runs in a single game.

The release of Harper helps clear the outfield for Billy Southworth to become the National league's only player-manager.

Further changes in the personnel of the Cardinal club are expected. President Sam Breadon said he is willing to trade every man on the club with the exception of First Baseman Jim Bottomley and Outfielder Wallie Roettger.

PITTSBURGH OBTAINS MEINE, HURLER.

Pittsburgh, December 8.—(AP)—The Pittsburgh National league baseball club has obtained Henry W. Meine, right-hand pitcher, from the Kansas City club of the American association, in exchange for Lester Bartholomew, left-handed twirler, and cash, S. E. Waters, secretary of the Pirates, announced today.

sophomore, weighing 195 pounds, with a pair of legs that resemble two pistons with a drive that reminds one of Ted Coy, of Yale.

When the Golden Tornado needed one yard or three for a first down or a touchdown, Durant always called upon Lumpkin, who would smash through for the necessary yardage.

Accurate Kicking.

The kicking of both teams was long and accurate. Georgia on several occasions kicked itself out of tight situations. Boland, Georgia center, got his pass back to Hill, the punter, like lightning, and every pass was perfect—allowing the kicker to get his punt away despite the fact that the Tech line was always storming through.

The Georgia team and its coaches, Harry Mehre and Jimmie Crowley, deserve a great deal of praise and credit for stopping this powerful machine as well as they did. Considering the fighting Bulldogs were affected by the "flu" and had but two days of practice with no scrimmage since Thanksgiving, one wonders if the iron in their blood turned to steel for the gallant sixty minutes they fought on Grant field this afternoon.

The Georgia team completely stopped Mizell, the ace of the Tornado. But this boy was not himself, and Coach Alexander wisely substituted Dunlap, a fast back and clever passer. I believe this substitution changed the complexion of the game as Dunlap threw a perfect pass to Waddy in Tech's drive for its first touchdown.

Dudley and Hooks Shine.

Dudley and Hooks, Georgia halfbacks, played remarkable games defensively as they were consistently breaking Tech backs down in open field with perfect tackles.

Frisbie, right tackle for the Bulldogs, played a remarkable game—one of the gamest I have seen a boy play. He not only took care of his own position, but assisted the center of the line on numerous occasions.

Probably the best player on the field was Pund, Tech captain and center. Not only was he an inspiring leader but a power on both the offense and defense. I would say he is without doubt the best center of the year, and it would be hard to picture a center in more plays in one game than he was in this afternoon.

The story of the statistics is that Georgia Tech made 12 first downs to three for the Bulldogs, that Tech's net gain was 232 yards compared to 27 for Georgia, that Tech completed one out of three attempted passes for 13 yards, while Georgia completed two out of seven attempts for 25 yards, that Mizell and Dunlap averaged 44 yards with their punts and Hill, of Georgia, averaged 36.

Loughran Signed.

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—Tommy Loughran, world's light heavyweight champion, has been signed by Promoter Mique Malloy to meet "Big Boy" Peterson, Biloxi, Miss., heavyweight, in a 10-round bout at the Chicago coliseum, December 17.

Cadets Trim Clemson, 12-7, In Last Game

Blocked Punt and Bad Pass Paves Way for Citadel Scores Over Favorites.

Charleston, S. C., December 8.—(AP) The Citadel worked a gridiron miracle here this afternoon and defeated the highly-favored Clemson college Tigers 12 to 7, in their annual game.

The Cadets scored one touchdown when they blocked a punt in the second period and added another in the third quarter when a bad pass from Captain Pressley, Tiger center, sailed over Justus' head, was down by Johnson, Citadel guard, over the goal line for a touchdown. Clemson scored late in the fourth period when "Goat" McMillan passed to O. D. Padgett 25 yards.

Clemson's running attack was much stronger than the Cadets, the Tigers making 13 first downs to four for the Citadel, and they drove within the Cadets' 10-yard line five times, only to be held as the Bulldogs summoned their defensive weapons. Throughout the game the Citadel had the resources to stop the Clemson attack when it threatened the goal line.

To back this up Evans Wilson gave Citadel a big advantage with long, consistent punting that shoved the Tigers back from beginning to end. The Cadet line, with Oglesby, guard; Skelton, center, and Wideman, tackle, starring was always able to rise to the occasion and stop the Tigers when they got within scoring distance.

Gibson Speaks, But Too Soon, Regarding Melancholy Hansen

Editor's Note: This exclusive interview with Billy Gibson, Gene Tunney's former manager, and now pilot of the much heralded Knute Hansen, was written a few minutes B. C.—before Christner. Hansen, before meeting K. O. Christner, at Cleveland the other night, was being ballyhooed as the next heavyweight champ.

BY NORMAN E. BROWN,
Sports Writer for Central Press and The Constitution.

Billy Gibson, the man who had two champions run out on him, was sitting in a ringside seat, waiting to watch his newest chamipionship hope—Knute Hansen—in action. "The much discussed eastern heavy was to meet K. O. Christner, Akron, O., heavy, and rated as a "palooka" by the blase easterners at least.

"How long will it take to decide whether or not Hansen has championship ability?" I asked the man who managed Benny Leonard and Tunney, as champs, and a lot of other famous fighters.

"I want a year and a half," replied Gibson.

"Hansen is ripe right now. That is, he is matured. He is as good as he ever will be physically. It all depends on how much I can teach him—how much he can acquire in ring finesse, in the fine points of hitting and boxing. And on his own attitude toward himself and his prospects.

"Knute is a Dane. Danes mature younger than Irish athletes. Hansen, at 23, is ready now—at the peak. Tunney, Irish, did not find himself until he reached 26. Take Pat McDonald, the old Olympic athlete. He was at his best at 38. The Germans mature early, probably due to the fact that they begin rigid athletic training in their turnvereins in the early days at school. The British develop probably later than any other race.

"But Knute is at top form now. "This fight tonight is part of his education. I'm sending him in to see what he can do with what I have told him so far. That's the best way for him to learn. He can't learn them in the gym."

And then the fight.

And this modest account of Hansen's showing against the Akron "setup" 27 minutes later.

Hansen, six feet four inches tall. Gangling and awkward. Seeking in vain for a proper way to hold his fists while waiting to go into action. But superbly confident of Hansen.

Christner, second cousin to a hairy ape. Three inches shorter. Big barreled body. In the fight game because he found it more remunerative than jugeling crude rubber in an Akron tire plant and because he likes to fight.

The bell.

Hansen backed away from Christner's first rush, tripped over his own heel and sat down in the corner of the ring, a silly grin on his face—a grin that turned to the crimson blush of a flapper who has just slipped from one of those frail little chairs in a tea room and landed as a flapper shouldn't.

Up again and wondering what to do.

Putting his hands up in front of him more like a pitcher getting ready to toss a spitter than a heavyweight champion-elect getting ready to toss a haymaker.

Two more rushes by Christner — and an overwhelming desire by Hansen to have the fight stopped long enough for him to regain his composure — and that funny looking position with his hands.

Somebody had told Christner that Hansen carried the stiffest punch of any of the contenders.

It was apparent that Christner believed it—for four or five rounds. Then he walked into one, laughed and swung into action.

Along came the eighth round. Once more Hansen found himself out of positiou and dismayed. And then it happened. One solid right flush to his chin. Down for the count of nine. Up and then down. The second time he dropped his head hit the floor so hard it bounced like the daughter's rubber ball in a well organized jacks game.

1928 Season Furnishes Plenty of Star Football Players for Teams.

BY ALAN J. GOULD.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, December 8.—(AP)—The shooting stars of the gridiron firmament, collected in the all-American galaxy, once more show a distinct tendency to follow a south by westward course.

It was not so long ago that this annual habit was just a matter of inspecting the eastern talent, taking a glance or two at the Big Ten ranks, selecting 11 stars by this somewhat near-sighted method and labeling them "The all-America."

It was a simple task, at least, compared with the job of surveying a nation filled with such gridiron talent as it is today, but the swing of football's pendulum has brought well-earned recognition to players over a wider range of action than ever before. It has been conclusively proved that no one section any longer has a monopoly on star teams or star performers. Whatever shouting there may have been from the eastern hilltops toward the close of November was abruptly stilled after events that transpired at the Yankee stadium under the direction of Oregon State and Stanford.

Nowhere has the nationalizing process in college football been so strikingly emphasized as in the all-American consensus compiled by the Associated Press in the four years since the death of Walter Camp, father of the all-star idea.

This consensus for 1928 represents the opinions of more than 250 experienced observers, the compilation of country-wide opinion. It has been gathered first-hand by the Associated Press staff of sports experts, men who have "covered" all the big games in every section and been so situated as to best collect the verdicts of sports editors, coaches, scouts and officials.

East and Far West High; Each Has Four on Team

Its sifting, analysis and final compilation shows the far west, including the Rocky Mountain area, on a par with the east for the first time in all-American history. The supremacy in individual honors always enjoyed by the east heretofore, though by dwindling margins, is now wiped out altogether.

On the first team, four places go to the east, four to the far west, with the Rocky Mountain area included for the first time, two to the south and only one to the middle west, experiencing an "off-year" in all-American ranking. On the all-American squad of 33 players as a whole, including second and third elevens, the east again is tied by the far west with nine places each, while the middle west has seven, the south six and the southwest two.

Twenty-eight institutions are represented. Only four have more than one man on the squad of 33. Only one, Georgia Tech, as powerful an array as Dixie has produced, can claim the distinction of putting three players on the mythical outfit. Stanford, Army, and Florida have two each in the list.

The battle for places on this year's all-American has been just as keen as the struggle for team honors. The task of selection has been just as difficult as that of picking a championship team in a season that has had its full share of stunning reversals, its rise and fall of team as well as individual fortunes.

Star tackles like Captain Sprague, of the Army, and Captain Hibbs, of Southern California, great backs like Al Marsters, of Dartmouth, and Redman Hume, of Southern Methodist, had the bad luck to suffer injuries or mishaps that impaired their effectiveness and consequently lowered their all-American rankings.

Clark, Colorado Star, Scored in Every Game

Nowhere was the race any swifter than that for the backfield positions. It is noteworthy, therefore, that Earl Harry (Dutch) Clark, ball-carrying terror and halfback extraordinary of Colorado college, gets into the backfield combination with Red Cagle, of the Army; Chuck Carroll, of Washington, and Ken Strong, of New York university, to give the Rocky Mountain its first chance shot at all-American fame and glory.

Clark, declared to be the greatest player the Rocky Mountain area has ever produced, gains the quarterback position only after sharp contest from a formidable group of rival candidates, including Howard Harpster, pride of the eastern general staff; Clyde Crabtree, versatile star of the Florida Alligators; Freddy Hovde, of Minnesota; Howard Maple, of Oregon State, and Don Williams, of Southern California.

All possess unusual qualities, but none appears to combine all the essentials of football greatness so much as Clark. Clark, alternating this year at quarterback and fullback, perhaps lacks the polished generalship and passing artistry of Harpster, but the "Flying Dutchman" is considerably more useful at bucking a line, skirting the ends or backing up a line. Unusually rugged, Clark in two years of keen competition has not failed to score at least one touchdown in every game. His average gain this year was slightly more than 10 yards for every time he handled the ball.

Charles (Chuck) Carroll, of Washington, and Christian Keener (Red) Cagle, of the Army, come as close to being unanimous as any all-American this season. Both have performed with consistent brilliance, as brightly in defeat as in victory. Yet they are widely different types. Carroll is more on Clark's style, big and powerful, a stonewall on defense, kicker, passer and a shifty runner. Cagle can also kick and he passes with unusual skill, but the Army captain-elect for 1929 is noted chiefly for his elusiveness in a broken field, an art at which he is proclaimed the greatest since Red Grange was running wild. Cagle's speed and football intuition are his biggest assets.

South Has Many Backs Of Front-Rank Quality

There are other great halfbacks this year, few so thoroughly equipped as Paul Scull, of Pennsylvania, an extraordinary dropkicker, and Warner Mizell, of Georgia Tech's triple threat. Scull is also a wonder on defense, but neither he nor Mizell possesses the running ability of Cagle or the fiery aggressiveness of Carroll.

The middle west, which produced three of the four all-American backs two years ago, had its share of stars, but none quite up to the standard set by Grange, Friedman and Joesting in recent seasons. Glasgow, of Iowa; Bennett, of Indiana; Welch, of Purdue; Lusby, of Wisconsin; Eby, of Kansas; Kneen, Cornell; Paradeaux, Baylor; Stadelman, Oregon; Richman, Illinois; Hawley, Davis & Elkins; Tichnor, Harvard; Heinecke, Stanford.

QUARTERBACKS—Don Williams, Southern California; Hovde, Minnesota; Armistead, Vanderbilt; Hunting, Gonzaga; Steinbrenner, Wisconsin; Fleishhacker, Stanford; Witt, Tennessee; Ellis, Tufts; Putnam, Harvard; Weston, Boston college; Gulick, Hobart; Hume, Southern Methodist; Baysinger, Syracuse; Shober, Pennsylvania; Russell, Nebraska.

HALFBACKS—Peake, Virginia Poly; Marsters, Dartmouth; Loud, Yale; Bennett and Wittmer, Princeton; Bartrug, West Virginia; Hart, Colgate; Gillespie, Villanova; Thomason, Georgia Tech; McEver and Hackman, Tennessee; Reeves, Louisiana State; Justus, Clemson; Barnes, Virginia Military; Goodbread, Florida; Hicks, Alabama; Walker, Mississippi; Moore, Loyola; Lautzenheiser, Chattanooga; Eby, Ohio State; Bennett, Indiana; Welch, Purdue; Lusby, Wisconsin; Connell and Brazil, Detroit; Gebert, Marquette; Mehrle, Missouri; Sloan, Nebraska; Peters, Illinois; Letzelter, Carnegie; Lom, California; Couch, Utah; Hanna, Centenary; Love, Southern Methodist; Niemic and Chevigny, Notre Dame.

FULLBACKS—Holmer, Northwestern; McLain, Iowa; Fred Collins, Notre Dame; Miles, Princeton; Karcis, Carnegie; Langmaid, Williams; Cornsweet, Brown; Howell, Nebraska; Beavers, Arkansas; Lumpkin, Georgia Tech; Holm, Alabama; Terremere, Santa Clara; Schmidt, California; Parkinson, Pittsburgh; White, Washington & Lee; McCrary, Georgia.

and Niemiec, of Notre Dame, all were in the limelight, but not sufficiently to crowd such super-stars as Cagle, Carroll, Mizell and Scull.

The south also was rich in backfield material, with Mizell and Crabtree perhaps the best all-around performers, but not many steps ahead of Peake, of Virginia Poly; Banker, of Tulane; Bucky Moore, of Loyola; Armistead, of Vanderbilt; McEver, of Tennessee, and Thomason, of Georgia Tech.

Although he played at halfback on New York university's team, Kenneth (Mike) Strong is of the bulk, power and all-around ability ideally suited to fill the fullback position allotted him. The country's leading touchdown maker, does everything and does it with convincing skill. He was no more slashingly effective in his big day against Carnegie than was Captain Biff Hoffman, of Stanford, against the Army, but over the season's stretch Strong was as consistently good as any player in the country. Howell, of Nebraska; McLain, of Iowa; Nagurski, of Minnesota, and Miles, of Princeton, had their big days while Snyder, Maryland ace, had several as he numbered Yale among his victims.

Pommerening at Tackle Best Lineman in Mid-West

Great ends were difficult to find this year. The first choices for flankmen, Ike Frankain, of St. Mary's, and Dale Van Sickel, of Florida's fine team, rank high, but do not dominate the field. The biggest man on the team outside of Frank Speer, Georgia Tech tackle, Frankain is nevertheless fast and rated by Pacific coast critics as the best all-around end since the days of Brick Muller at California. Van Sickel is a star at the gassing game in addition to being a good blocker and tackler. Phillips, of California; Fesler, of Ohio State; Brown of Missouri; Messinger, of West Point, and Donchess, of Pittsburgh, were in the front rank all year.

The selections in an outstanding group of fine tackles are Otto Pommerening, credited with almost single-handed lifting Michigan out of its rut, and Frank Speer, 205-pound bulwark in Georgia Tech's great line. Pommerening played throughout the entire season without once yielding to a substitute, an "iron man" stunt that in itself gives him unique honor. In Michigan's march to the touchdown that meant a final victory over Iowa, eight of the nine plays netting around 60 yards were driven through Pommerening's position.

It took such great work as that to keep off the first team tackles like Mike Getto, one of the outstanding players in Pittsburgh's mighty forward wall, and Gordy Brown, rangy star of the University of Texas eleven. Butch Nowack, Illinois captain; Al Lassman, of N. Y. U.; Mel Dressel, of Washington State; Wakeman, of Cornell; Mooney, of Georgetown, and Bancroft, of California, were other fine tackles. Injuries handicapped two of the best, Sprague, of the Army, and Hibbs, of Southern California, while Raskowski, of Ohio State, failed to reach his 1927 form. Sprague was a two-time All-American, the only survivor from last year's team, but failed to repeat.

Post, Stanford Tackle, Takes Turn at Ball Toting

Much as did Pommerening, of Michigan, Captain Burke, of the Navy, successfully led his team out of early season disaster and displayed the prowess that gained him a post as All-American guard. The midshipman's running mate is Seraphim, otherwise known as "Dynamite" Post, of Stanford's powerful line. There is little to choose between Post and his teammates, Robeskey or Driscoll, to judge from what they did to the Army at the Yankee Stadium, but Post is the unanimous choice of Pacific coast critics who have seen him perform brilliantly all season.

Post and Burke are both rangy and powerful while the former can carry the ball if necessary on one of Pop Warner's trick plays. Not far behind them in all-around ability are Gibson, of Minnesota; McMullen and his Nebraska running mate, Holm; Dumont, of Colgate; Choc Sanders, full-blooded Indian, of Southern Methodist; Drennon, of Georgia Tech, and Dimolio, of Pittsburgh.

Charles (Chuck) Howe is Princeton's second All-American center in four years. The aggressive Tiger leader outplayed every rival he met and they included the giant Barratt, of Ohio State, as well as the rangy Kneen, of Cornell, and two or three Yale opponents. Howe's fighting spirit gives him an edge, even if slight, over such capable passers and towers of strength as Captain Peter Pund, of Georgia Tech; Nate Barrager, of Southern California; Heinecke, of Stanford; Pressley, of Clemson, and Kneen, of Cornell.

Trumbull Puts Mizell, Pund on Second Team

Cagle, Strong, Scull and Hoffman Picked For All-Star Backfield; Banker Gets Second Choice.

Editor's note; Walter Trumbull, nationally-known sports authority writer for The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance, presents here his all-American football selections for the 1928 season. He deliberately chose for his first eleven only men he has seen in action during the fall, accepting no one's word for the capability of these players until he had seen them on the field. Many of the men on the second and third elevens have been seen in play by Mr. Trumbull.

Walter Trumbull's All-American Squad

BY WALTER TRUMBULL.

In picking all-star teams it is absolutely impossible to do justice to the majority of great football players in the United States. It would be possible to select eleven elevens, and nobody could say positively which would win if any two of them actually met on the field. There are between 400 and 500 colleges listed as football institutions and there is scarcely one of these that has not one man who would stand out in any company.

Players on losing teams and players on the teams of smaller institutions do not get the credit due them. For example, every one knows that Ellis, of Tufts, probably is as fine a quarterback as there is in the land, but you cannot rate him above those who have performed brilliantly against harder opposition. It is the same with such backs as Brazil, of Detroit, and Neal, of Western Maryland, or such guards as Beloin, of Fordham, Kevorkian, of Brown, and Thompson of LaFayette.

Depends on Others.

When engaged in a search for men of all-star caliber, one naturally depends largely on the words of coaches, officials and opposing players. They rarely agree. The coach who sees a man in one game may not see eye to eye with the man who sees him in every game. Sometimes a coach is prejudiced.

I like, when I can, to get the opinion of the players. Their line on a man is likely to be correct. I like best to supplement all information by a sight of the man in action. If he looks not good to me, what care I how good he be? It is upon my head that the indignation of the old grads descends.

I have seen in action every player of the first eleven I have selected. Other elevens may or may not be better. I know this one is good. Howe is so fine a center that Bill Roper told me that without this boy the efficiency of the Princeton team decreased to an astounding extent. Post and Green are powerful guards. Meehan says that Lassman is the best tackle he ever coached—or saw. Men who played against Schleusner assert that he is as tough as they come. Fesler and Lawlor will do for ends on any eleven.

I have not called any man of these elevens "quarterback" or "fullback." Under the modern system of football, those terms don't mean anything. You merely have four backs. Cagle or Scull could call signals, if the eleven didn't use the huddle. So could most of the other players. All that would be needed would be a center who could pass the ball to any of these four backs and the team would have a fine passer in Howe.

All Are Versatile.

There isn't a man in that backfield who cannot run the ends, go off tackle, cut back, or hit the center. There isn't a man there who can not run interference, block and tackle. There is not a man there who can not throw, catch and kick the ball. And the other elevens are just about as good. Some will say they are better. Give a coach any one of them and he would weep with gratitude.

You might go on picking all-star teams for the next week. Among the great backs, for example, are Wittmer and Norman, of Princeton, Shober and Murphy, of Pennsylvania, Maple, of Oregon State; Bennett, of Indiana; Welch, of Purdue; Sims and Fleishhacker, of Stanford; Sloan and Howell, of Nebraska; Duplin, of Georgetown; Haskins, of Oklahoma; Hume, of Southern Methodist; Karcis, of Carnegie; French and Guarnaccia, of Harvard; Weston, of Boston college; Lumpkin and Durant, of Georgia Tech; Hovde, of Minnesota; McDonald, of Washington State; Lom, of California; Cuisinier and Lusby, of Wisconsin; Collins and Niemiec, of Notre Dame; McEver, of Tennessee; Marsters, of Dartmouth; Halicki, of Bucknell; Hanson, of Temple; Claney, of Holy Cross; Crabtree, of Florida; Waldorf, of Missouri; Cornsweet, of Brown; Ellis, of Tufts; Neal, of Western Maryland, and many more.

Best Tackles.

Among the season's best tackles were Hibbs, of Southern California; Barrett, of Harvard; Anderson, of Cornell; Sellman, of Stanford; Douds, of Washington & Jefferson; Miller, of Notre Dame; Smith, of Pennsylvania, and a lot more; while the star guards included Drennon, of Georgia Tech; Wietz, of Illinois, Anderson, of Northwestern; Humber and Hanmack, of the Army; Dumont, of Colgate; Thompson, of Lafayette; Nesom, of Louisiana State; Westra, of Iowa, and Magai, of Pennsylvania.

The country was full of fine centers. There were Heinecke, of Stanford; Westgate, of Pennsylvania; Randolph, of Indiana; Finney, of Tennessee; Hall, of the Army; Barragar, of Southern California, and Moynihan, of Notre Dame.

Strangely enough fine ends were not so plentiful, but Douchess, of Pittsburgh; Truskowski, of Michigan; Fall, of Grinnell; Nemecek, of N. Y. U.; Carl Mark, of Army; Baker, of Northwestern; Rosenzweig, of Carnegie; Murphy, of Boston college; O'Connell, of Harvard; Schoales, of Cornell; Sullivan, of Colgate; Stimson, of Princeton; Barna, of Hobart; Marcus, of Temple; Cramer, of Gettysburg; Tanner, of Minnesota; and Curtis, of Davis-Elkins, were all good wing men.

Cuban Turfman Dies in Havana

Havana, December 8.—(AP)—Dr. Adolfo Nuno, prominent attorney and widely known turfman, died today at his home here after a short illness.

Nuno had been closely identified with racing since its inception in Havana and is said to have had one of the finest libraries pertaining to horses and tracks in the world. He was one of the founders of Oriental park.

ROBY ANGLING FOR GODFREY BATTLE HERE

An inducement for Bob Lawson and Al Walker to flash all of their pugilistic skill in their fight at the city auditorium Tuesday night was revealed Saturday by Promoter S. C. Roby. It seems that Roby inspired with the desire to give Atlanta fans a really big heavyweight scrap is angling for George Godfrey to fight here at an early date.

In case Godfrey is signed, and there is every reason in the world to believe that Roby will be successful in his quest, the winner of the Tuesday night scrap will get the assignment to go against the heavyweight, who is known as one of the outstanding heavyweights in the country.

Will Do His Best.

"I believe that either Lawson, or Walker would give Godfrey a terrific battle," Roby explained. "And I intend getting Godfrey here for the winner of the Tuesday night show. The fans have shown me that they will support good boxing matches at reasonable prices and I am going to do everything in my power to reward them for their interest."

In the meantime Roby remains confident that he has arranged a corking good show for the fans who venture down to the city auditorium Tuesday night and a survey of the card verifies his opinion. The Lawson-Walker go should be one of the best heavyweight encounters ever staged in the auditorium and there promises to be action from the first until the final round.

In view of the knockout records of the two main event rivals close ring observers are free in the prediction that the scrap will end in a knockout. Lawson has registered a total of 50 kayoes in 82 starts and is bent on making Walker victim number 51.

Walker on the other hand is a pretty fair sort of puncher. In his first fight here last month he kayoed Roy Clark, 229-pound opponent, after 45 second of fighting. His next feat was to knock Lee Anderson into the care of a referee, with a single punch. Right after that he ambled on into Philadelphia, Pa., and knocked out big Bill Harwell.

Has Other Bouts.

Promoter Roby is not depending on the main event alone to stir the enthusiasm of the fans. He has arranged a fine support array of bouts and has billed what he is pleased to style a double-barreled semi-windup.

Happy Hunter will be featured in one section of that attraction, meeting Speedy Freeman, from Conyers, Ga. Hunter is one of the fastest and most skilled boxers in the south today and copying the style of the late Tiger Flowers always manages to give the fans a run for their money.

Hunter for the past several months has been fighting under the personal direction of Manager Billy Lotz, who believes that his fighter will capture the admiration of the fans Tuesday night. If Hunter wins he intends challenging the winner of the main event.

Roy Clark will attempt a comeback Tuesday night, making his efforts against Eddie Malcolm, who is being imported from New York for this show. Malcolm weighs 200 pounds and is said to know his way about in the ring.

The preliminary numbers will be topped by a match between Roy Dunn and Kid Macon. Two other preliminary bouts will be offered.

'CIRCUIT RIDERS' READY TO START BIG RACE INLAND

Tampa, Fla., December 8.—(AP)—The "circuit riders" of America, those men whose chief pride in their trim little outboard motor boats are tuning up their "kickers," eager to get away again on the long trail that leads along the gulf and ocean shore and to the inland lakes.

Beginning late in the fall on Florida "highways," they follow the lure of the contest of skill and speed northward along the Atlantic to Newport, R. I., through the Great Lakes to Detroit, down through Lake Michigan to Chicago and back to the gulf by the way of the Mississippi.

Fifty-one regattas for the Florida course have been announced by Richard E. Pope, Chicago, executive vice admiral of the American Outboard Motor association, and plans have been made for races at 16 other cities within the state. Mr. Pope said he believed it the most ambitious yet undertaken.

Havana Turf Season Opens December 15

Arrangements Being Made To Handle 1,000 Horses During Race Season.

Havana, December 8.—(AP)—Havana's horse racing history will attain new heights this season if indications of preparations now under way mean anything.

In order to attract more visitors extensive alterations are being made at the Jockey club, and it is being enlarged considerably. Many shipments of mounts have already arrived, and arrangements are being made to handle 1,000 head of racers.

More than 300 horses from Kentucky stables and races will soon be on their way here. There already are about 400 head of horses now in the paddocks, and everyone is waiting for the magic signal—"they're off!"—December 15, when the winter season opens.

A survey of the mounts points to an extremely fast year here among the ponies. King David, star of the National stables, owned by President Gerardo Machado, and holder of the most consistent record for wins last year, is booked to turn in some new marks in the distances this season. Other beauties well spoken of are Nicholson, of the R. E. Bibi stables of Texas, and Queen Towton, of the McRae stables.

Queen Towton, a 4-year-old mare, which ran here last year with some success, is picked to show some real class and speed. In the opinions of those who frequent the paddocks she is a wonder in sprints, having already done six furlongs in 11 flat. Nicholson, fresh from 12 straight wins at Latonia, according to those who have seen him in workouts, should show the way to a lot of the steeds.

King David continues to stand out as the peer of them all at long distances. He is now a 4-year-old and is capable of carrying as much as 110 pounds. His speed at a mile and a half is phenomenal, running it in 1:04 flat. His trainer, J. J. (Tip) O'Connor, predicts the King will not be matched here this season. He is an old enough horseman, though, to caution, "You never can tell."

The horses sent here from the states become acclimated rapidly, in most cases in about eight days. In the morning training they are gradually being worked up to speeds, whereas the first few days saw them walking about the track.

Among the stables represented here are those of Frank Kearns, Charles Caffarelli, Charles Ferraro, H. Torriente, J. Simon Healy, W. H. Karrick, C. Yzquierdo, John Zoeller, W. A. Rosen, Charles Bergman, Thomas Tault, Mrs. M. Segal C. R. Fleischmann, Joe Rowan, Hirsch Jacobs and many others not yet known from the Maryland tracks.

Although jockeys of northern fame are hardly ever attracted to Havana after having gone through a strenuous summer season, but several are here this year, including Jimmie Jones, of whom much will be heard this season, according to the men at the track, and Charley Kurtsinger, who is under the tutelage of William Keating, veteran turfman.

Robinson Stays, Official States

New York, December 8.—(AP)—All reports to the contrary, it appeared virtually certain tonight that Wilbert Robinson, portly manager of the Brooklyn National league baseball club, will pilot the Robins through the perils of the 1929 season.

Published reports that Robinson would be relieved of his duties before the start of the next campaign brought from Stephen W. McKeever, a heavy stockholder in the club, a statement that Robinson and no one else would be manager of the Brooklyn club through 1929.

This announcement was considered particularly significant in view of the fact that McKeever heads a faction which has been bitterly opposed to Robinson's policies and to a rival faction made up of relatives of the late Charles H. Ebbets.

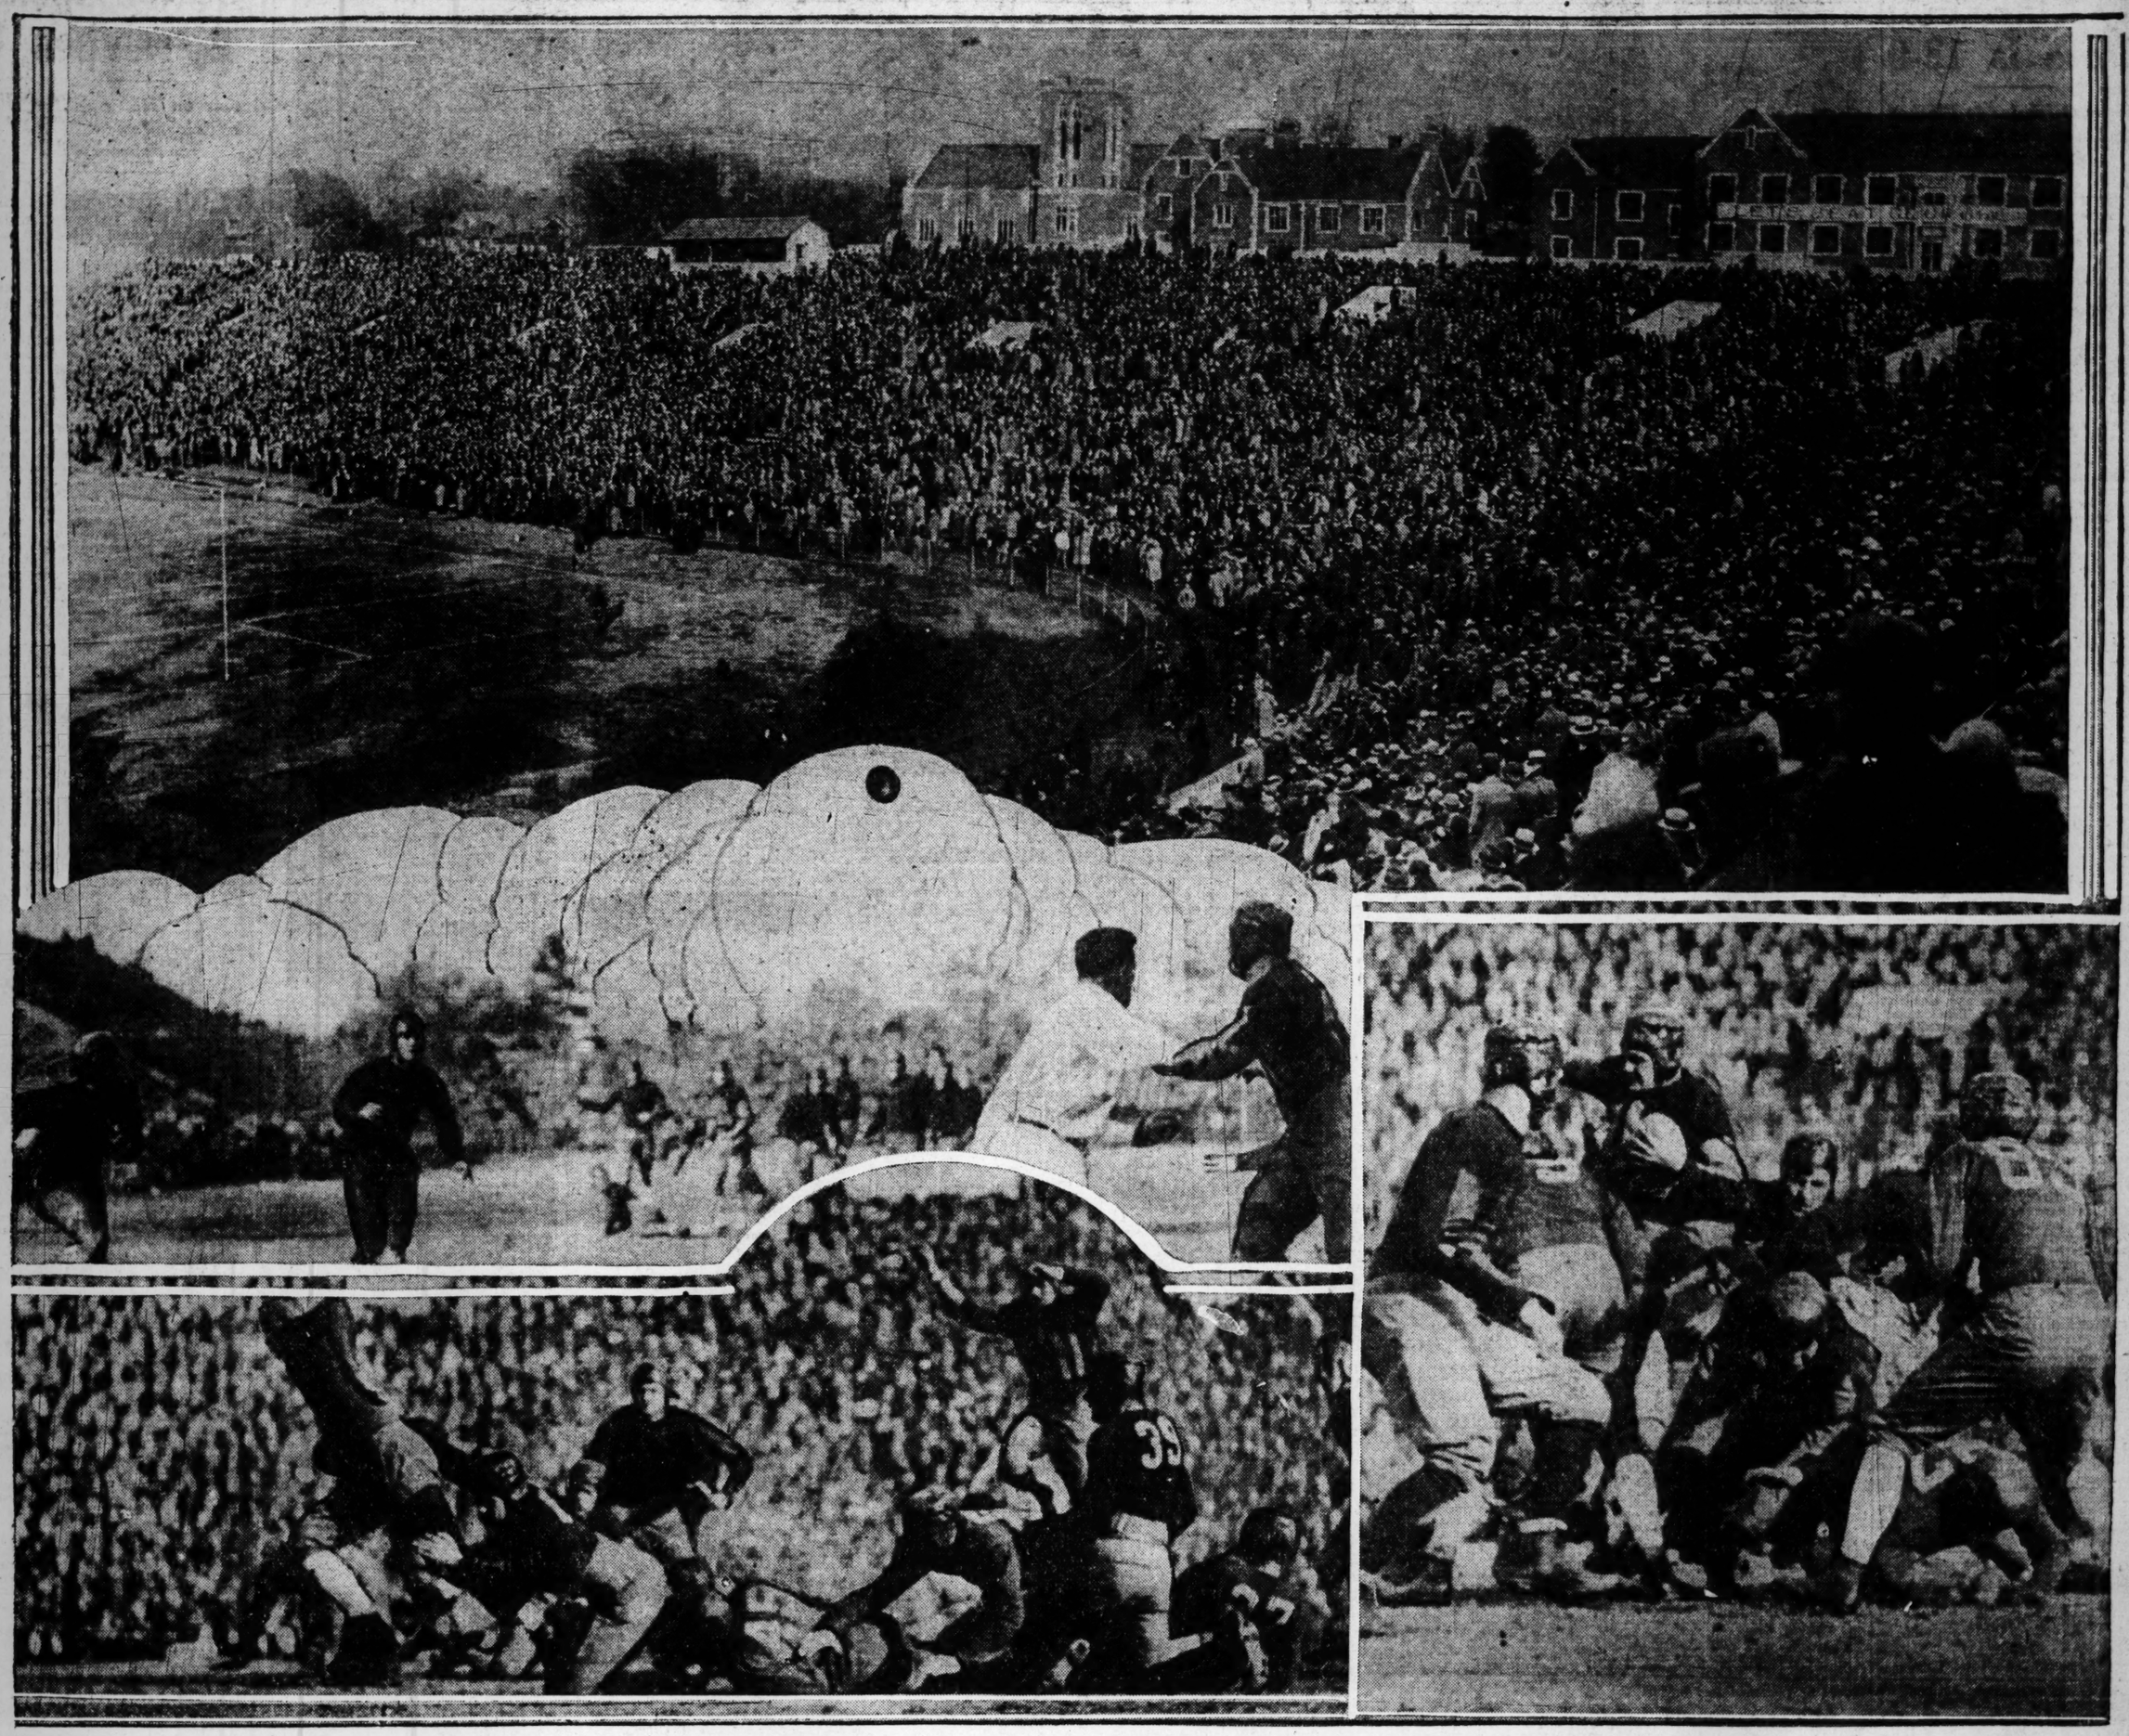
Colorful Grid Schedule Arranged for Bulldogs Next Season

:-: THE BIG CROWD AND BITS OF ACTION AT GRANT FIELD :-:



Photos by Kenneth Rogers and George Cornett

Here you have a view of the huge crowd that packed Grant Field Saturday to watch Tech play Georgia. The views at the top show the crowds in the south stands and on the east side of the field. At the left, middle row, is shown the ball in the air just as Bobby Hooks passed to Glenn Maffett to score Georgia's touchdown in the first quarter. At the right, Hooks, Georgia's best offensive bet, is shown struggling to get through Tech's line.

On the bottom the camera has caught graphically the way in which Father Lumpkin, Tech's power house, completely tears a line to pieces when he hits it. Father has just rammed through center and you may observe the Georgia men strewn about.

Tech and Yale Feature Card In Southland

Handsome New Stadium To Be Dedicated by Northern Bulldog.

BY BOB SHERROD.

Athens, Ga., December 8.—Two intersectional games feature the 1929 football schedule of the University of Georgia football team. The schedule was released today by Charles E. Martin, assistant to the faculty chairman of athletics at the university.

The Bulldogs dedicate their new stadium, which is now nearing completion, on October 12, when the Yale eleven comes to Athens. The second intersectional contest comes on November 9, the Bulldogs journeying to the Yankee stadium in New York city to play New York university for the first time.

It is expected that the dedication of the new stadium with Yale coming south, will draw one of the largest crowds to ever witness a southern football contest. In bringing the northern Bulldog south, Dr. S. V. Sanford, faculty chairman of athletics and president of the Southern conference, has realized a dream which for many years seemed no more than an air castle. Yale never plays outside the Yale bowl except once each season, and then with Princeton or Harvard on alternating years. The agreement of the Yale authorities to break this tradition is understood to have been based on the close connection between Yale and Georgia. Several buildings at the university are made after the plan of structures at Yale and the first presidents of the state university were Yale men. Throughout history Georgia has been closer to Yale than any other institution.

Two new games were added to the Georgia schedule, one being the N. Y. U. contest and the other a game with North Carolina at Chapel Hill. These two teams displace Mercer and L. S. U. on the Georgia program.

Another feature of the New Georgia schedule is Auburn's coming to Athens. This is understood to be a part of the dedicatory exercises of the new stadium. Auburn and Georgia played the first football game between two Southern conference teams nearly forty years ago (although there was no Southern conference at that time.) Referring to history we find that Georgia's first intercollegiate gridiron game was with Mercer in 1892. Virginia was the first southern team to play a football game, meeting an eastern college, but Georgia's game with Mercer was the first between two southern teams and the Georgia-Auburn affair was the first between what are now Southern conference teams. Georgia and Auburn have always been rivals of the first order and until recent years Georgia-Auburn tilts have been regarded as classics of the south.

Georgia's Bulldogs return to Jacksonville in 1929, where they played in 1927. This year's game was held in Savannah.

For the first time in many years Tech comes to Athens to meet the Bulldogs in '29. Since the new stadium has been completed the crowds can be accommodated in the Bulldog arena, the new structure having a seating capacity of 30,000, with six or eight thousand more seats possible.

The Georgia schedule:

October 5—Furman in Athens.

October 12.—Yale in Athens. (Dedicatory exercises.)

October 19—North Carolina in Chapel Hill.

October 26—Florida in Jacksonville.

November 2—Tulane in Columbus.

November 9—N. Y. U. in New York.

November 16—Auburn in Athens

November 28—Alabama in Birmingham.

December 7—Tech in Athens.

EASTERN TEAM IS SELECTED BY ANDY KERR

San Francisco, December 8.—(AP)—Selection of the eastern team which will meet a western eleven in the annual east-west charity game here December 29, has been practically completed by Andy Kerr, Washington and Jefferson coach, who will act in the capacity for the eastern forces. Kerr notified officials here today that he had picked 20 of the 22 players for his contingents. They are:

Ends: Haycraft, Minnesota; Barabee, New York university.

Tackles: Getto, Pittsburgh; Pommerening, Michigan; Nowack, Illinois; Raskowski, Ohio State; Wagner, Wisconsin.

Guards: Gibson, Minnesota; Thomson, Lafayette; McMullen, Nebraska; Fix, Pittsburgh.

Center: Aschman, Washington and Jefferson.

Quarterbacks: Harpster, Carnegie Tech; Levison, Northwestern.

Halfbacks: Strong, New York university; Weston, Boston college; Bennett, Indiana.

Fullbacks: Guest, Lafayette; Holmer, Northwestern; Howell, Nebraska.

EIGHT BIG TEN MEN AGREE TO PLAY DECEMBER 29.

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—Eight Big Ten football stars, six of whom won all-conference honors during the past season, have agreed to play for the east in its fourth annual gridiron battle with an all-star western team at San Francisco, December 29.

The Big Ten players are Captain Rube Wagner, Wisconsin, tackle; Captain George Gibson, Minnesota, guard; Captain Walter Holmer, Northwestern, fullback; Kenneth Haycraft, Minnesota, end; Leo Raskowski, Ohio State, tackle; Yatz Levison, Northwestern, quarterback; Offensive Captain "Chick" Bennett, Indiana, halfback, and Captain "Butch" Nowack, Illinois, tackle.

Intersectional Games Feature Mid-West

Harvard To Play at Michigan; Vanderbilt and U. of Mississippi Teams Go North

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—Ten intersectional games are listed for western conference elevens for the 1929 season.

Harvard, Army, Pittsburgh, Colgate, Princeton, Navy, Mississippi, Vanderbilt and the University of Washington are the eastern, western and southern teams that will collide with Big Ten elevens.

The University of Washington Huskies, never seen before in the western conference, will play the University of Chicago at Chicago in the final game of the season, November 23.

The south will send Vanderbilt northward to oppose Minnesota at Minneapolis, October 12, with the University of Mississippi coming to Lafayette, Ind., for a game with Purdue, November 9.

After several years of discussion Harvard will come to the midwest for a game with Michigan at Ann Arbor, November 9. Colgate will engage two Big Ten teams, meeting Wisconsin at Madison, October 5, and Indiana at Bloomington, October 19.

The outstanding intersectional games are:

October 5—Colgate vs. Wisconsin, at Madison.

October 12—Vanderbilt vs. Minnesota, at Minneapolis.

October 19—Colgate vs. Indiana, at Bloomington.

November 2—Chicago vs. Princeton, at Princeton.

November 2—Ohio State vs. Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh.

November 9—Harvard vs. Michigan, at Ann Arbor.

November 9—Army vs. Illinois, at Urbana.

November 9—Mississippi vs. Purdue, at Lafayette.

November 16—Navy vs. Ohio State, at Columbus.

November 23—University of Washington vs. Chicago, at Chicago.

Field Trials Open In North Carolina

Pinehurst, N. C., December 8.—(AP) The Pointer Club of America, dormant 11 years, will be revived next week when field trials will start Monday, over the Continental Field Trial club's grounds here, and continue through the week.

The last meet of the club was held in December, 1917, little interest being shown on account of war interference, and the next year the trials were discontinued. This summer, however, a group of sportsmen interested themselves in a revival meeting and the club will resume competition with the opening run Monday.

The officers of the club are Harry D. Kirkover, of Buffalo, N. Y., president; Samuel G. Allen, of New York, and Raymond Hoagland, Jr., of Rumson, N. J., vice presidents; Millard D. Darrell, of Wilmington, N. J., secretary. All officers are expecting to attend the meet.

There are already almost 100 entries in the three events, which are the open all-age stake derby and members all-age stakes.

LOYOLA BOWS TO QUANTICO MARINES, 14-13

New Orleans, December 8.—(AP)—Because of 100 per cent efficiency in going after the point after touchdown the Quantico Marines marched away with a 14 to 13 victory over Loyola, of New Orleans here today before a crowd of 8,000 shivering spectators.

It was the second time a Loyola eleven has been defeated on New Orleans soil in four years, and the fans forgot to shiver as Decell, substitute halfback, attempted to kick the point after touchdown which would have meant a tie. But the kick went wild and the home team lost.

Gotko, substitute marine halfback, was more successful, kicking two points when he had only that many chances.

Loyola Scores.

At the start it looked as if the home team would run away with a victory. Loyola received first and rushed the ball down the field, aided materially by a 52-yard run by Budge, until the oval was on the opponents' one-yard line. Maitland, fullback, then crashed through center, and Lopez kicked goal.

"They shall not pass," the marines then told themselves and in the next period Loyola was held scoreless. Forgetting they were marines, the fighting eleven deserted the ground attack and took the air with huge success. The ball was taken to the Loyola eight-yard line and Woods went through left tackle for a touchdown and Poppelman kicked goal.

In the third quarter the marines began a savage land attack and Loyola retreated to its one-yard line when Poppelman plunged through center. Gotko kicked goal.

Another Touchdown.

Loyola then fought the marines to a standstill for a while and scored another touchdown when Moore circled left end for 16 yards. Decell failed to kick goal.

That ended the scoring and the rest of the game may as well not have been played.

Arkansas To Stay In Southwestern

Dallas, Texas, December 8.—(AP)—Arkansas university was assured continued membership in the southwest conference, at least for one more year when coaches, business managers and faculty advisers of the conference voted, in session here today, to retain the conference roster under the present status. Belief had been current that Arkansas would be asked to resign.

The faculty board, which held final judgment on all problems which arose during the session, went on record as favoring no additions.

Seven schools compose the conference at present. Representatives from Centenary college of Shreveport and Texas Technological college of Lubbock were granted interviews at the meeting but did not present applications for admittance, Dr. D. A. Penick, Austin, president of the faculty board, said.

Lots of Leaders.

Reading has been in baseball ten seasons and has had eight managers in that time.

Tech Special Off to Coast December 22

Sight Seeing Trips Planned by Those in Charge of Arrangements.

Through the efforts of L. W. (Chip) Robert, Jr., chairman of the executive board, Georgia Tech Athletic association, and George T. Marchmont, president, National George Tech Alumni association, and R. Jack Thiesen, national alumni secretary, arrangements have been made with railroad executives for two special trains to carry the alumni, students, friends, and other loyal followers of Georgia Tech to the Pacific coast. These specials will be known as the "Yellow Jacket" and the "Golden Tornado" respectively.

Robert handled all the athletic details in reference to the trip and cooperated with the officers of the National Alumni association in working out plans for the students, the alumni, their families and friends.

According to present plans, the "Yellow Jacket" special will leave Atlanta on December 22 at 4:15 p. m., over the Southern railroad, via Birmingham, Memphis and Kansas City; thence over the Missouri Pacific railroad to Pueblo, Colo., through the Royal gorge during the daytime, crossing the Continental Divide; thence to Salt Lake City; through the Feather River canon and then into San Francisco, where a twenty-four hour stopover will be made. From there the party goes to Los Angeles, and Pasadena, arriving at 9:30 Friday morning, December 28.

The "Golden Tornado" special will leave at 7:10 a. m. December 26, over the Southern railroad, via Birmingham, Memphis, Kansas City.

Tide Crushes L. S. U. Hopes of Unbeaten Conference Year

Tigers Beaten By Alabama; Score Is 13-0

Tricky Offensive Is Flashed by Losers But Breaks Stop Scoring Drives.

BY KENNETH A. MILLER,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Birmingham, Ala., December 8.—(AP) Alabama's massive Crimson Tide was forced to release its full fury in the season's football finale here this afternoon to throttle Louisiana State's Purple and Gold Tiger, 13 to 0. Twelve thousand shivering fans saw the game.

Hugging to straight, hard running football for three periods the Tide eked over a touchdown early in the first half, then unfolded its midget spinning marvel, John Randolph Campbell, late in the final period to score the final touchdown.

Crimson Scored.

Louisiana threw a scare into the Crimson in the first period when Brown skirted his left end for 35 yards, Captain Earl Smith, of Alabama, dragging him down on the Tide's 37-yard line. Brown was injured and forced to leave the game, and with him seemed to go the Tiger's offensive for the remainder of the period. Louisiana punted and on a reverse Tony Holm ripped off 30 yards to place the ball on State's 30-yard line. Campbell knifed through center for 15 yards and a five-yard penalty and two short plunges by Hicks and Campbell sent the latter across for Alabama's first counter. Hicks fumbled in the attempt for the extra point.

Louisiana sprung a tricky offensive for the next two periods with two breaks blighting her two best scoring chances. Alabama weathered the storm and with the advent of the final period turned the yardage task over to the stumpy Campbell.

Faking Reverses.

With the ball on Alabama's 45-yard line Campbell started faking reverse plays, picking up his puzzling spin behind the veterans, Hagler and Pearce. His first whirl at the line netted 12 yards, the second 15, and five more, coupled with ten Hicks picked up on a reverse, placed the ball on the Tiger's six-yard line. Louisiana stiffened with Captain Tinsley, playing a great defensive game.

Alabama sent three thrusts into the line before Campbell could make it first down on the one-yard stripe from where Holm crashed over on a double reverse. Skidmore found the posts for the extra point from placement.

The Tigers unleashed two tricky little halfbacks in Alston and Hendrix. The two causing the Tide worry aplenty until they were removed from the game from near exhaustion. With their exit Hank Stovall started shooting passes to the lanky Swanson at end, but Howard, Alabama lineman, stopped this threat on Alabama's 30-yard line when he intercepted one of the tosses and raced into midfield. The Tigers other sustained drive was halted in the third period when Reeves fumbled for an 18-yard loss after the ball had been advanced to the Crimson 16-yard line.

Tinsley Is Star.

The brilliant play of Tinsley, at tackle, in bringing his college football career to a close was met in equally as brilliant a manner on the opposite side of the line by Clark Pearce and Hagler, who turned in their moleskins after three great years at Alabama.

Jackets Defeats Bulldogs, 20-6

parts of his uniform he battered his way across the goal for the counter. He failed to kick goal for the extra point.

From that time forward the battle waged back and forth in the center of the field. Tech showed signs of advancing many times but penalties checked the march each time and there was no more scoring. The running story of that great game should be cut out and pasted in the memory book of every Georgia supporter. It is a tale of game battle that will go down in football history. If you want to know more about the details of the matter here you are.

Georgia won the toss and elected to receive, defending the north goal. Waddy kicked off 55 yards to McCrary, who returned 15 yards. Hill fumbled on the first play and Thrash recovered on Georgia's 29-yard line. Thomason gained five yards at left tackle and Lumpkin added three more at the same place. On the next play Mizell's pass to Waddy was incomplete and the ball went over on downs on their own 22-yard line.

Stumpy Nailed.

Hooks failed to gain at right tackle and Hill punted 37 yards to Thomason, who was downed in his tracks on Tech's 40-yard line. Thomason got three yards outside left tackle and then Mizell took four more at right tackle. On third down Mizell added 10 more yards and first down on the enemy 44-yard line. Lumpkin got two, then Mizell dived over the center of the line for one more yard. He took two more at right tackle, then he punted over the goal line and the ball was brought out 20 yards.

Dudley ripped the left side of the line for two yards, then McCrary took two yards, but Tech was offside and was penalized. Dudley failed to gain at the center of the line. McCrary made it first down on his own 35-yard line. Hooks and McCrary made three yards, then Hill punted 30 yards to Thomason, who was downed on his own 37-yard line.

The little giant, Thomason, hit center for three yards, and Mizell got two more at the same place. Lumpkin crashed through the center of the line and carried two tacklers 16 yards, but the play was called back and Tech penalized five yards for offside. Lumpkin took three yards at center, then Mizell punted 50 yards to Hill on his own 15-yard line.

Bulldogs Score.

Dudley failed to gain at left end. Hill punted 57 yards over Thomason's head and out of bounds on Tech's 28-yard line. Attempting to punt, Mizell fumbled a bad pass and Palmer recovered to give Georgia the ball on Tech's 12-yard line. It was the break of the game and Tech's defense was to be put to the test. Hooks was thrown for a one-yard loss. Hooks then gained two yards at right end. McCrary made a yard at center and it was fourth down and nine yards to go. Hooks slipped back and shot a pass to Maffett over the goal for a touchdown. Hill missed the point and the count was 6-0, Georgia.

Waddy kicked off 50 yards to McCrary, who returned 14 yards to his 24-yard line. The quarter ended here.

The second quarter opened and Dudley was stopped for no gain then Hooks took a yard at the same place and Hill punted 32 yards to Tech's 42-yard line.

Mizell and Thomason were held for no gain and Mizell punted 35 yards to Georgia's 24-yard line. Hooks bucked out of bounds for no gain then McCrary lost three yards on a double pass. Hill punted 35 yards to Thomason, who was stopped on his own 45-yard line.

Tech Ties Score.

Lumpkin made a yard and Mizell, on a quick kick, punted 40 yards to Hill, who returned to his own 20-yard stripe. McCrary fumbled and Watkins recovered for Tech on the 18-yard line. Thomason twisted through the center of the line for seven yards. Mizell added two more at the same place and lacked a few inches of first down. Lumpkin made it first down on the enemy six-yard mark. Mizell failed to gain at guard. Thomason dived over left tackle for three yards. It was third down on the three-yard line. Lumpkin came within two feet of the touchdown and it was fourth down. Lumpkin smashed the center for a touchdown and the count was Tech 6; Georgia 6. Thomason kicked the extra point from placement and the score was 7-6, Tech.

Waddy kicked off 57 yards to Hill, who returned 17 yards to his own 20-yard line. Earl Dunlap, sophomore star went in for Mizell for Tech. Mizell has been ill with the flu for two weeks.

Complete Pass.

McCrary got four yards then Dudley took three more through the same hole. Hill punted 32 yards to Thomason who returned to his 49-yard line before he was forced out of bounds. Stumpy grabbed three yards at guard. Lumpkin added six more then the big Texan stepped over center for six more and first down on Georgia's 34-yard line. Thomason and Lumpkin got two more, Dunlap made no gain, then Dunlap dropped back and shot a bullet pass to Waddy for 14 yards and first down on the 17-yard line. Dunlap slipped off right tackle for seven yards. Dunlap took four more for first down on Georgia's six-yard line. Then the half ended with Tech leading by one point.

Waddy kicked off for Tech 50 yards to Rothstein, in for McCrary at fullback, who returned 15 yards to the 25-yard line. Hooks fumbled, but recovered for a two-yard loss. Hooks failed to gain and Hill punted 36 yards to Thomason, who returned three yards to his own 44-yard stripe.

Thomason broke off left tackle and straight armed two tacklers to go 41 yards before he was forced out of bounds on the enemy 15-yard line. Mizell and Lumpkin added enough in two bucks to make it first down on the two-yard line. Thomason got one more yard, then Lumpkin crashed over the center of the line for a touchdown. Thomason kicked the extra point to make the score: Tech 14, Georgia 6.

Hooks Returns 18 Yards.

Waddy kicked off 54 yards to Hooks, who returned 18 yards to his 24-yard marker. Rothstein and Hooks failed to gain at the left side of the line, then Hill punted 35 yards to Thomason, who returned 12 and was forced out of bounds in midfield.

Tech was penalized five yards on the first play. Then Thomason, running from punt formation, made four yards back. On a split buck Thomason went off right tackle for nine yards. Lumpkin made it first down on the enemy 39-yard mark. Thomason failed to gain, then Lumpkin took 10 yards and first down on Georgia's 29-yard line. Lumpkin took five yards and Mizell got four more Lumpkin again made it first down on the 19-yard line. Thomason lost a yard on a wide end run, but the play was called back when both teams were offside. Thomason took five yards at center and Lumpkin four more at the same place. Mizell made it first down on the Georgia six-yard line. Father Lumpkin took two at left tackle and Thomason smashed the center of the line, hit a solid wall, but thrashed his way through four yards for a touchdown. Thomason failed to kick goal and the score was: Tech 20, Georgia 6.

Tech Penalized.

Waddy kicked off 52 yards to McCrary, who returned 22 yards to Georgia's 32-yard line. Hooks made five yards on two bucks and McCrary took two more at center. Hill punted 40 yards to Thomason, who returned 20 yards, but Tech was called for clipping from behind and the ball was placed on the Tech eight-yard line. Thomason lost a yard at left tackle as the quarter ended.

Mizell punted 50 yards to Hill, who returned to his 46-yard line. Hooks' forward pass was incomplete. Another one of Hooks' passes to Dudley was incomplete and Georgia was penalized five yards. A third pass from Hooks to McCrary was incomplete and another five-yard penalty came here. Hill punted 40 yards to Thomason who returned 20 yards to midfield.

Lumpkin was held then Thomason also failed to gain at left guard. Dunlap dropped back to punt and passed 40 yards but the pass fell incomplete. The play was called back and Tech was penalized for offside. Another long pass was incomplete, then Dunlap punted 45 yards to Hill, who returned to the 19-yard line.

Lumpkin Taken Out.

McCrary took a yard at right guard. Randolph went in for Lumpkin. Dudley fumbled but recovered and Hill punted 25 yards to Dunlap who was downed in his tracks. Dunlap got one yard, then he tried again and was held for no gain. Randolph took eight yards and then gained six more for first down on the enemy 33-yard line. Tech was penalized five yards for offside. Thomason got three yards at left tackle and Tech took time out.

Dunlap, on a split buck, ripped through right guard for six yards. Thomason added four more and it was fourth down and two to go. Randolph failed to make first down and the ball went over on the 19-yard line.

Dudley gained two yards at left end and Hooks added another at right guard. A pass, Hooks to Dudley, was incomplete. Hill punted 25 yards to Thomason, who fumbled and Palmer recovered on Tech's 46-yard line. Hooks' pass to Maffett was incomplete. Hooks then failed to gain at left end and Hill passed to Palmer for a 14-yard gain and first down. The ball was on Tech's 30-yard line. Attempting to pass Hill was thrown for a 13-yard loss by Waddy. Another pass from Hooks to Palmer was intercepted by Randolph on his own 38-yard line and he returned to his own 44-yard line. Randolph got a yard, then Dunlap took five more but Tech was offside and was penalized five yards. Dunlap got two yards at center and Randolph two at right tackle. Dunlap punted 40 yards to Hill, who returned 25 yards to his own 34-yard stripe.

Attempting to pass, Hooks was thrown for a 14-yard loss as the game ended. Score—Tech 20; Georgia 6.

Majors Pick Miami.

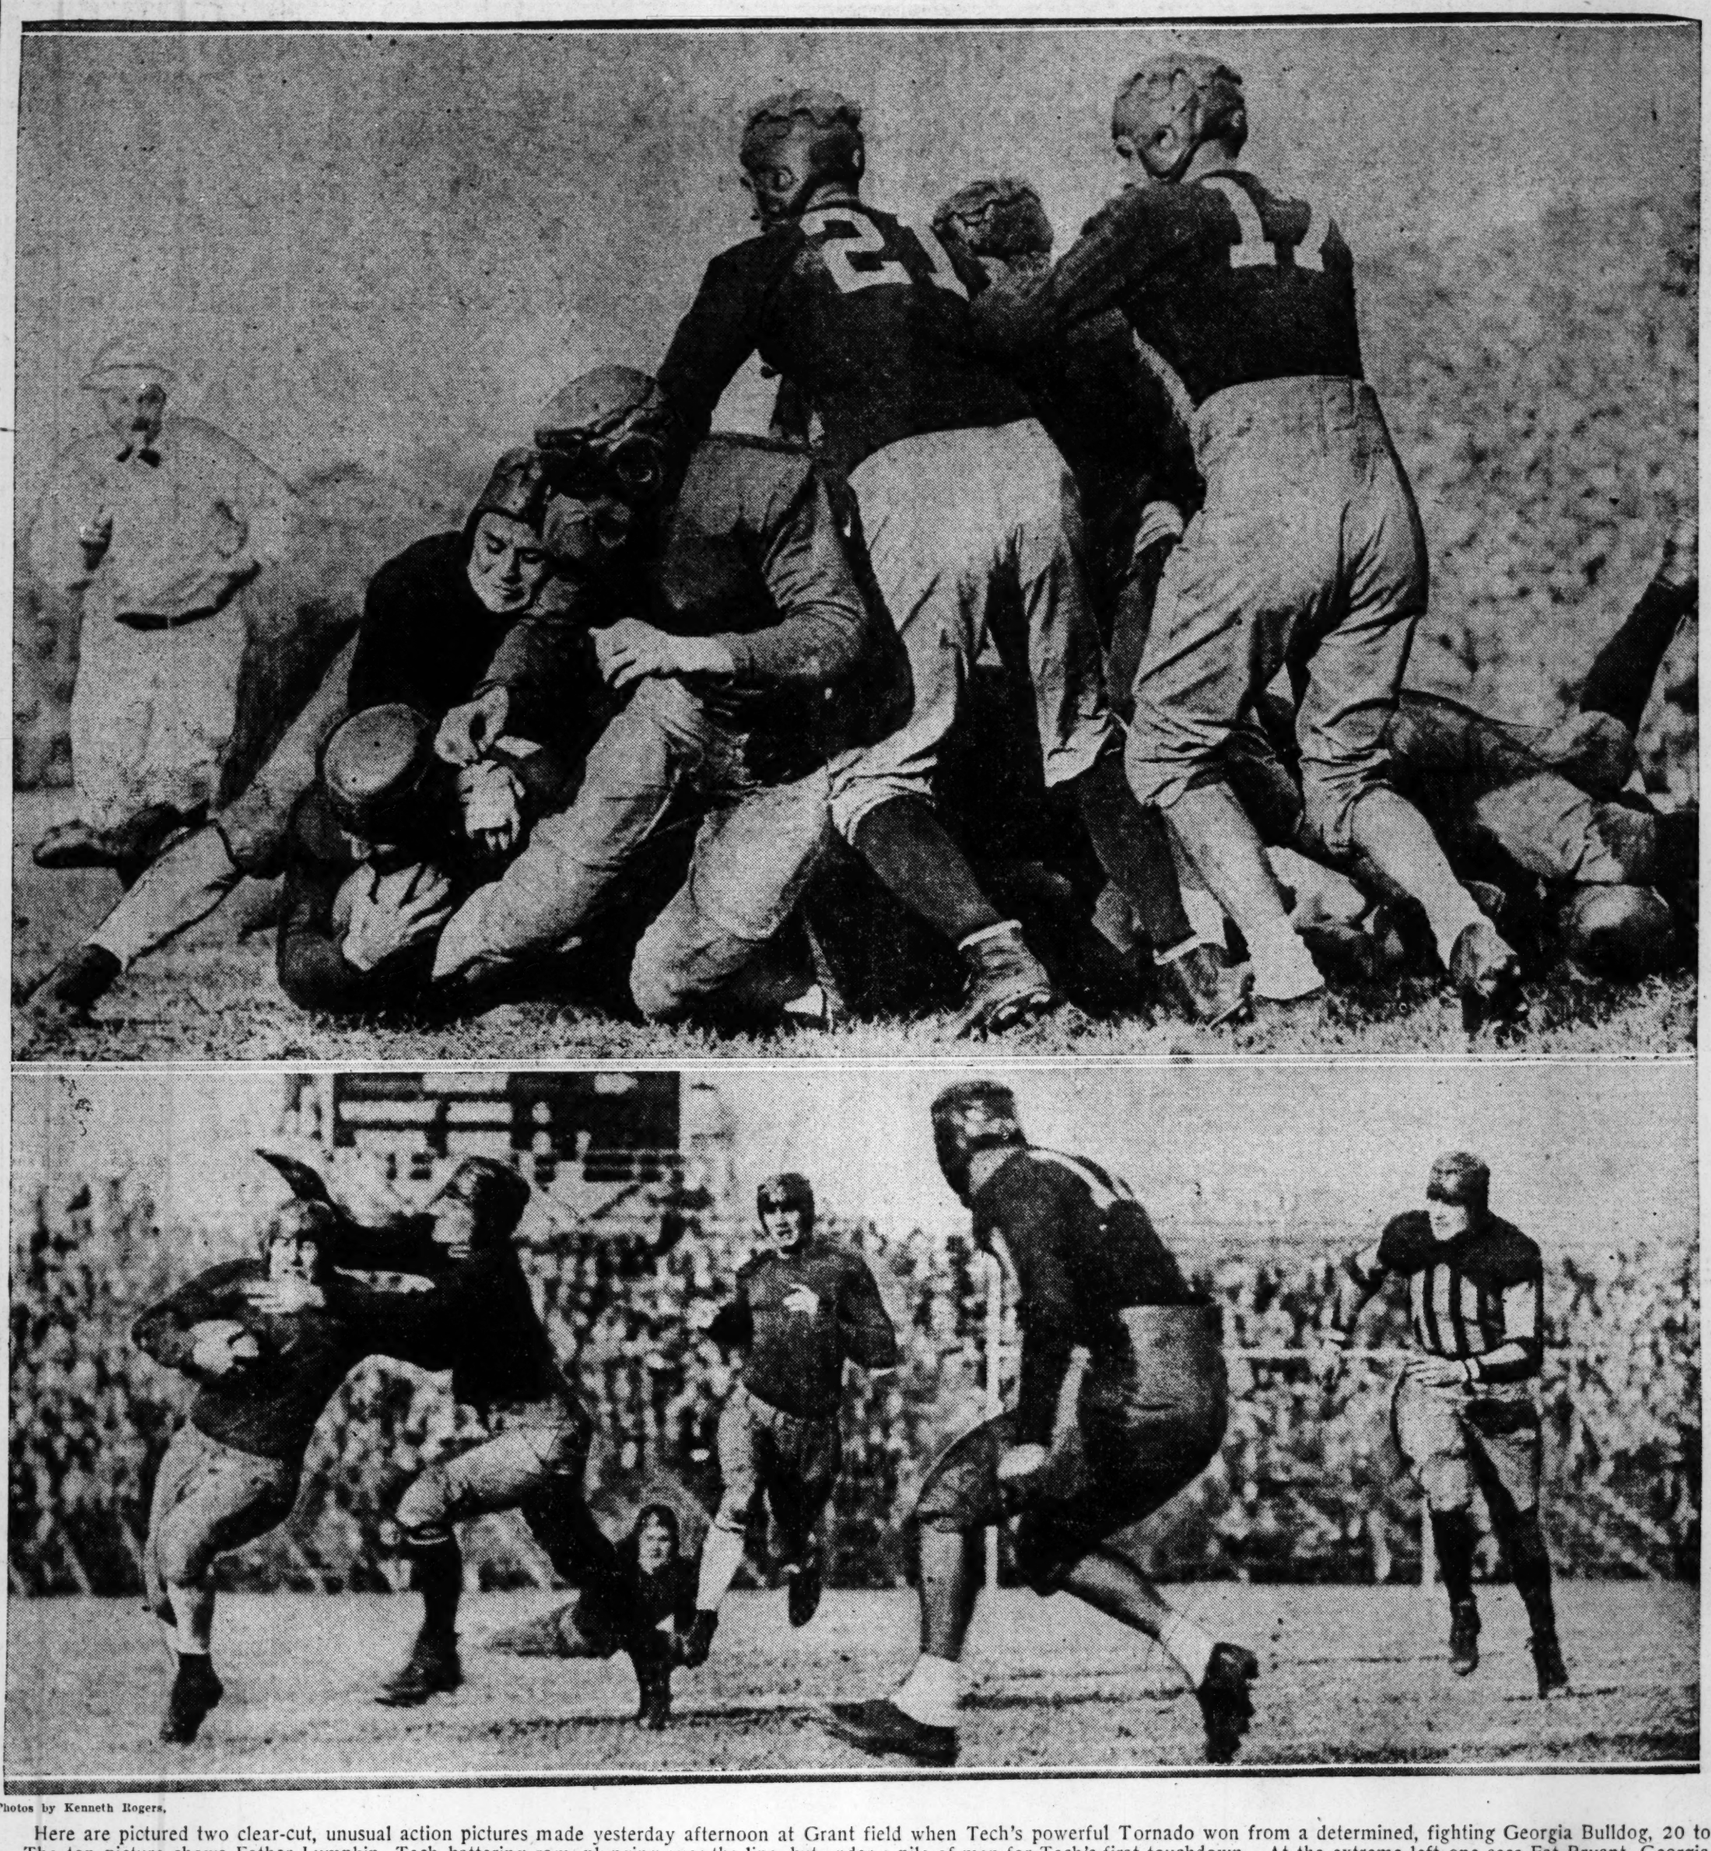
Miami, Fla., December 8.—(AP)—Miami is looking forward to next spring when it will have its first big league baseball in three years.

Five teams will gather at the Florida resort city during March and April for a series of pre-season games. They are the Philadelphia Athletics, Cincinnati Reds, St. Louis Cardinals, Boston Braves and Brooklyn.

Older But Faster.

Jack Ogden, a veteran pitcher when the Browns bought him, declares he had more speed this year than he has had since 1921.

SOME OF THE EXCITING ACTION YESTERDAY



Photos by Kenneth Rogers.

The picture below shows Stumpy Thomason putting on the three-ring circus that always results when he returns a punt. Olin Huff, who played a good game at guard for Georgia, has slipped by Peter Pund, in the background, and is tackling the sawed-off giant. At the right is Hill drifting in to help.

Six-Day Bicycle Race Finish Is Close

Madison Square Garden, New York, December 8.—(AP)—Franco Georgetti, fiery little Italian, and his American partner, Freddy Spencer, of Plainfield, N. J., tonight won the forty-fifth international six-day bike race after one of the most thrilling final sprint hours in the history of the sleepless grind. Their margin was a single lap over Alfred Letourner and Paul Brocardo, red-shirted speedsters of France.

Senators To Train In Tampa, Florida

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—Details of the agreement by which Washington's American league baseball club will train again at Tampa, Fla., this spring were available here today after a conference between Clark Griffith, president of the club, and J. L. Cone, co-owner of the Tampa Southeastern league club.

After differences had been reconciled, it was announced that an exhibition game between the Senators and Tampa club would be played there March 10 with each getting 50 per cent of the proceeds. All the proceeds of similar games on April 1, 2, and 3 will go to the Tampa club.

Rich Gets Third "M."

Ann Arbor, Mich., December 8.—(AP) Captain George Rich was the only Michigan player to win a third football letter this year. On the other hand, 17 players won a letter for the first time. Twenty-four were awarded.

Big Six Chosen To Play in Texas

Kansas City, December 8.—(AP)—Big Six conference athletic directors and faculty representatives meeting here today approved a New Year's day football game in Dallas, Texas, between an all-Big Six senior team and an all-Southwest conference senior team for the benefit of crippled children. An invitation for the game was extended by the Scottish Rite order of Dallas.

The eligibility of Big Six players who participate will not be affected for other sports.

Coach Ernest E. Bearg, of the University of Nebraska, was selected to coach the Big Six team.

Four New Managers For Sally Circuit

When another baseball season rolls around in the South Atlantic league there will be four new managers and four ol dones. The Sally is keeping up with the fall and winter styles in the larger circuits.

A new man for Charlotte where Heinie Groh started last year; a successor to Joe Kelly at Columbia; someone to fill Gabby Street's shoes at Knoxville, for he is going to help Walter Johnson, his old battery mate, at Washington, and a man to take Wilbur Good's job at Macon if he finds the bigger job he is looking for.

Odie Strain at Augusta, Ray Kennedy at Asheville, Mike Kelly at Spartanburg and Frank Walker at Greenville will be back on the same old jobs.

For the third time this fall Ed Rommell beat the Baltimore Black Sox with slow ball pitching. Lefty Grove and Jack Ogden couldn't win for the colored boys.

Tilden Case Is Postponed By Net Body

Action on His Application for Reinstatement Slated for February.

New York, December 8.—(AP)—Definite action on the application for reinstatement of Big Bill Tilden was postponed today until February by the executive committee of the United States Lawn Tennis association at its December sessions.

Tilden's application for reinstatement was considered briefly today, but the committee voted to refer it to the amateur rule committee with instructions that that body investigate it further, correspond and confer with Tilden and report at the next meeting of the executive committee, set for February 8 in Boston, the day before the annual meeting of the Lawn Tennis association.

Rule Adopted.

In connection with the Tilden case the Davis cup committee recommended to the executive committee, which approve it, adoption of the following rule:

"No player, while a member of the Davis cup, Wightman cup or international team representing the United States, shall write or give interviews or contribute in any way tennis material to newspapers, magazines or other publications, including radio talks whether or not for a consideration."

The Davis cup committee announced it would recommend adoption of this rule at the association's annual meeting February 9.

It was his newspaper articles on the Wimbledon tournament while he was a member of the American Davis cup team that led to Tilden's disbarment from amateur competition last summer. He was barred from the Davis cup interzone finals against Italy, but was restored to the American squad in time to appear against the French in the challenge round when the United States failed in its attempt to lift the cup.

Barred by 35 Nations.

On his return to the United States, Tilden was suspended from amateur competition by the executive committee of the United States Lawn Tennis association and the ban was placed into effect as well by the International Tennis federation and the 35 nations holding membership in that body. His application for reinstatement was tabled at the executive committee's September meeting and brought up for brief discussion today. The general belief is that favorable action will be taken at the February meeting.

On the recommendation of the Davis cup committee, it was decided that the United States would challenge in 1929 for the Davis cup in the American zone as heretofore. It also was announced that this country would challenge for the Wightman cup, competition for which is to be held in the United States next year.

New Plan to Put Over Allentown

Ernie Landgraf, former president of the Syracuse club of the International league, and for the last several years in independent ball in Allentown, has a new plan to finance Allentown in the Eastern league. He plans to make the club a community affair with everybody that is able in both Allentown and Bethlehem, a neighbor, taking a share or two.

And to make baseball popular in the Pennsylvania cities, where nearly all the fans work so many hours a day and don't have the whole afternoons off, twilight baseball will be played.

The rest of the Eastern league is in New England states and in northern New York. The new member will require somewhat more railroad mileage than was the case when that franchise was right in the midst of the other members.

Johnson Is Hurt In Stairway Fall

Spencer, Ind., December 8.—(AP)—Ban Johnson, 64, former president of the American league, fell down the stairway of his home here today and fractured several ribs on the left side. His condition was understood to be not serious.

Johnson quit baseball about a year ago, after having been president of the American league for many years. He returned to Spencer only yesterday from Chicago, where he had stopped on his way home from a trip to Mexico. His health has been poor several years.

Rosenzweig Stars For "Scotch Eleven"

Pittsburgh, Pa., December 8.—(AP)—There's a skirl of bagpipes and a wearing of the plaid when Carnegie Tech's great football laddies take the field, for Tech possesses Scotch traditions. The reason for the traditions may be found in the ancestry of the institution's founder, Andrew Carnegie.

B- the same token, Duquesne university's pigskin warriors are, by tradition, "the Irish." Duquesne is a Catholic institution. Until recent years, its enrollment was almost 100 per cent students of Irish extraction.

But surely no follower of Robert Bruce or William Wallace ever bore the name of Rosenzweig. Likewise, the Gaelic connections of one named Silverstein must be somewhat clouded. Yet a Rosenzweig sports the tartans of Tech, and a Silverstein wears Duquesne moleskins.

Long Fly Hitter Will Slump in New Stadium

The short right field wall in Cleveland has another year to help long fly hitters fatten their slugging averages. After that it will take a faster man for the gardening and one who can hit regardless of fences. It will mean more to Cleveland that the visiting teams, of course. The new municipal stadium, where the Indians will hold forth, will be immense.

Punts Aplenty.

In a game between Maryland and V. M. I. there were 32 punts, or one about every other minute of play. The score was 0 to 0.

Riverside, Gordon Play Monday for Right To Meet Smithies

G.I.A.A. Title Fight To End During Week

Finals of Race Will Probably Be Played in Atlanta Next Saturday.

In order to decide the opponent for Tech High in the annual G. I. A. A. title clash, football teams of Gordon institute and Riverside Military academy will meet Monday afternoon at Gainesville, home of Riverside, with the winner to play Tech High later in the week. The final game will probably be played in Atlanta.

This was occasioned by the fact that Riverside and Gordon had battled each other to a 0-0 tie but otherwise were undefeated. They appealed to H. J. Stegeman, arbiter of the G. I. A. A., who selects the two teams that play each year for the title, and he decreed that Gordon and Riverside play, with the winner to meet Tech High.

A big feature to football at the Gainesville institution is that six gridiron teams and nine graduate coaches, all of whom made their letters in football at reputable colleges. The Cadets have either won the G. I. A. A. crown or played in the postseason affair in the past four seasons.

Coach Kid Cecil, of Gordon, has marshaled a great team at Barnesville. His gridders played one less game than Riverside, but won the lot. University Bluebirds were dumped 25 to 0, G. M. A. tumbled, 19 to 0, and Norman Park was defeated, 13 to 7.

Captain Brown is the lightest player on his squad, not weighing over 144, but he has inspired the other players to such a good mark. In the center of the line the players average 175, being about par with the Cadets' middle line.

Gordon's tacklers will be out to watch Mason, swift and elusive back, of Riverside. It has been this back's great work that has enabled his team to pile up a mighty good record.

GORDON WORKS HARD FOR GAME.

Barnesville, December 8.—With the announcement by Coach Stegemen that Gordon and Riverside will play off the tie Monday to see which team plays for the G. I. A. A. title against Tech High, Coach Cecil worked his men hard last week.

All the boys were out for practice and it is expected that they will be in first-class condition to meet the Riverside Cadets Monday.

In the previous game with Riverside, the Gordon boys proved their mettle when they made more first downs and came nearer scoring than the Riverside boys. Gordon has only seven points scored against them by G. I. A. A. teams and Riverside has 27 against their record.

The Gordon team is characterized by its perfect defense as well as its offense, and it has several outstanding stars who will be on the field Monday.

The Gordon schedule, including G. I. A. A. conference games and nonconference games, are:

Gordon, 18; Mercer freshmen, 13.
Gordon, 0; Richmond academy, 27.
xGordon, 13; Norman Park, 7.
xGordon, 25; U. S. B., Atlanta, 0.
Gordon, 0; Douglas A. & M., 0.

Sports Pay Penn Over $1,000,000

Philadelphia, December 8.—(United News.)—Athletics at the University of Pennsylvania returned more than a million dollars in gross receipts during the academic year 1927-28, it was announced here today. Of this amount more than $400,000 was profit, the statement showed.

Receipts from 16 sports totalled $1,089,352.65, according to rhe report, and expenditures totalled $681,827.87.

Football was far ahead of all other sports in gross receipts, expenditures and profits. The receipts were $936,838.56 and expenditures $476,335. This left a profit of $460,503.56.

British Golfing Star Is Moving to America

Sonning, England, December 8.—(AP) Geoffrey MacCallum, the British amateur golfer, has secured an appointment with a manufacturing firm in Cleveland, Ohio, and will leave for the United States about the middle of December.

Geoffrey, the elder of two brothers famous in British golfing circles, is the holder of the Berkshire, Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire championship, a title he has won on four of the five occasions it has been decided. He was runner-up in the Welsh open championship in 1925.

Southwestern Beats Hendrix College, 32-0

Memphis, Tenn., December 8.—(AP) Southwestern's football team ran to victory over Hendrix college, of Conway, here today on the pounding feet of Captain Dode Farnsworth, whose runs and plunges produced three of the five touchdowns scored to down the Arkansans, 32 to 0. Farnsworth kicked two placements.

WHO'S WHO AMONG CALIFORNIA'S BLUE-BLOODED BEARS

When Georgia Tech goes west New Year's day, the above layout will give you an idea of just what kind of features the southern players will have to look at during the game. The gentleman holding the football is Bibbs Price, head coach at California. No. 1 is Irvine Phillips, captain and end; 2, Leland Eisan, quarterback; Benjamin Lom, halfback; Stanley Barr, halfback; Russell Avery, end; Steven Bancroft, tackle; Harry Gill, guard; Frank Fitz, tackle; Roy Riegels, center and captain-elect; Bert Schwartz, guard, and Charles Schmidt, fullback.

Western Heights Baptist quintet will open the second series of games in the Dixie league against the Boethians of Capitol View Presbyterian at 6:40 p. m., Thursday on the Y. M. C. A. court and three other games will follow in rapid succession.

On account of their impressive victories in the opening series the quintets from Peachtree Christian and Northwest Atlanta are given the feature place on the schedule. All teams with the exception of the Clifton Presbyterian clubs, whose poor showing opening night was attributed to injuries to three of their best players who will be seen in these games displayed a fast brand of ball.

PIEDMONT LEAGUE.

The Oakhurst Presbyterian quintet will make its debut to the fans of the Piedmont league Saturday night in the first of a three-game series slated for the Y. M. C. A. court starting at 7 o'clock and three good games are on the menu for the fans of this league.

The complete schedule follows:
7:00 p. m.—Oakhurst Presbyterians vs. Boethian Juniors.
7:20 p. m.—Center Hill Baptist vs. Tri-Mu Class.
8:00 p. m.—Bolton Methodist vs. North Atlanta Baptist.

TRAMMELL SCOTT LEAGUE.

The feature game of the Scott league on Wednesday night seems to be the second one, when the Power company meets the Southern Bell. Bell lost last week, but by a narrow margin, and the Power company squad seems to be a good match. Both teams have players who have been busy in basketball in Atlanta for several years. Boswell, Keeney and Thompson, are still on the Power team, and Cain, Lewanda, and several others of last year's squad are on the Bell.

Swift and company blossomed out with a good team on the opening night. Mattison and McCary are two of the best of the newcomers and will make some of the opposing guards hustle to keep them covered. C. Bishop, of Pullman, is another new man who looked good. Pullman and Swift meet Wednesday.

SEWANEE LEAGUE.

The Central Presbyterian court will echo to the thud of the basketball Sunday night as the second series of games will be played there in the Sewanee league. Opening the season Monday night four good games were played calling for every member of the league to go into action.

Two losers in the first series meet in the second game when C. P. plays the Associate Reform Presbyterian quintet, and this game should be hard fought as each will strive to break in the games won column. In the third game of the night Calvary Aces will be forced to play in top form to down the Alpha Class of Wesley. Both were winners in the first series.

CITY LEAGUE BOYS.

The two leaders in the City league will meet on Thursday night at the Atlanta Athletic club. When the A. A. C. Reds, who gained their place in the sun by defeating the Gulf Refining company last week, meet the Governors' Horseguards in the final game at 9:30. Horseguards won from Southern Railway last week in a brilliant game to get their position at the top.

Among the good players uncovered by the first week of play among the boys are Woodall, of the A. A. C Reds, and Endicott of the Horseguards. These two are veterans on Atlanta courts, but they never sunk the ball before like they did in the first series of games. Woodall has played the game on local courts for 10 years, but his specialty has been floor work heretofore. Endicott has starred in this capacity before, but last year he was in a slump as far as basket making was concerned.

CITY LEAGUE GIRLS.

Pattillo Memorial stepped out in front of the City league for girls by defeating the Comptometers. Holt played a star game for them and her work should keep the red shirted team near the top. Ruth Adams, of Southern Railway, also showed a lot of basketball ability on the opening night. Southern is a new team in the girls' league, but they will improve fast and make a bid for the pennant before the season is far gone.

This week Southern and Pattillo open up the program at 7 o'clock and Comptometer and Western Electric play the third game.

CHEROKEE LEAGUE.

The usual series of three games will be played Thursday by the Cherokee league of the girls' division of the Y-Church A. A. at the Central Presbyterian court. This league continues to draw large crowds at each of the series, despite the many number of games played on this night.

The J. O. Y. Class of Central Baptist is determined to halt the winning streak of the Peachtree Christian quintet in what should be the feature game of this series. The College Park-Western Height game should also be hotly contested, as these clubs are about evenly matched. On account of the withdrawal of two of the clubs the season records start from the games of the past week.

INSURANCE LEAGUE.

Members of the Insurance basketball league will inaugurate the season Tuesday night at the Atlanta Athletic club court with three games scheduled to be played. The first game will get under way at 7:15 o'clock.

All six teams have been busy during the last month or so grooming themselves for another great season. The Fireman's Fund five, after one of the most hectic struggles, last season copped the pennant.

With three new teams making their initial appearance in the league this season, and each member stronger than ever before, the games this year are expected to be more hotly contested than ever before in the history of the Insurance league.

An idea of the vast amount of material in the league can be obtained from the fact that the Royal Insurance company was forced to put out two teams in order that each member of its huge squad could be given fair showing.

The two teams will be known, respectively, as the Royal Insurance company and the Newark Fire Insurance company, and each will be operated separately.

The other newcomers to the league are Georgia Casualty company, and Crum & Forster. Both clubs have an abundant supply of capable players and each will be able to maintain the fast pace set by the old members—Fireman's Fund, S. E. U. A. and Royal.

All of the games will be played at the Atlanta Athletic club with the schedule calling for three games on Tuesday night of each week. No admission will be charged.

Tom Slate and Shorty Doyal, who alternated as referee and umpire last season, will officiate this year. The league is presided over by C. E. Broach, of Royal, with Fred Smith, of Fireman's Fund as secretary and treasurer.

Following is the schedule for Tuesday night:

8. E. U. A. vs. Georgia Casualty, 7:15.
Crum & Forster vs. Newark Fire Insurance company, 8:15.
Fireman's Fund vs. Royal Insurance company, 9:15.

Trogans Win, 37-7.

St. Petersburg, Fla., December 8.—(AP)—Football ended its short session here this afternoon when the Junior College Trojans, of this city, defeated the local high school Green Devil eleven, 37 to 7.

The winners crowded most of their scoring into the final period after being held to a 13-to-7 score until the end of the third quarter.

Oglethorpe Planning Larger Sport Stadium

Latest Improvement on Hermance Field Will Cost $75,000; Work Expected To Start Immediately.

Plans are now under way at Oglethorpe for the completion of a section of Hermance Field stadium by next fall in time for the football season. With this in view, athletic authorities of the school are planning a full schedule of games to be played on the university campus next fall.

The section of the stadium to be erected will form, when the entire structure is completed, the main eastern stands, fronting on Peachtree road. The cost of this section will approximate $75,000 and it is proposed to erect other sections from time to time until the entire bowl is finished. The outer wall of the stadium is to be of the same general construction as other buildings on the campus. The seats will be of reinforced concrete. The playing field has been top-soiled, graded, grassed and is in good condition.

To Book More Games.

Athletic authorities of the university are now at work on a schedule that calls for an enlargement of the number of games played in Atlanta. During the coming season it is proposed to schedule five games to be played on Hermance field, none of which will conflict with games played by Georgia Tech on Grant field. The team will, therefore, not make more than four and perhaps not more than three trips on the road. It is believed by the Oglethorpe mentors that the playing of these games on the local campus will largely add to the number of victories won by the team not only but also to the spirit of the college and the morale of the players. A very interesting schedule of games for 1929 will shortly be announced.

The method whereby the sum of money necessary for this construction will be raised is especially interesting. It is well known that Mr. and Mrs. Harry P. Hermance have given the field to the university and they will doubtless continue in the future their interest in its further construction. Up to the present time the playing field, sufficient to accommodate both football, baseball and track, has been prepared and a foundation wall, some 600 feet in length, averaging 10 feet in height has been built. No funds will be solicited in Atlanta to continue this construction but it is proposed to sell between 500 and 1,000 life passes at $100 each to lovers of the game, the money to be used to further the construction proposed. Each of these passes carries, during the life of the owner, free admission to all football games played on Hermance field not only but also to all track events, all baseball games or any other sport event that may be staged. The pass is transferrable in writing by the owner to any member of his or her family or friend as long as the owner lives. Upon the death of the owner validity of the pass ceases. The seats for the life pass owners will be grouped along the 50-yard line, that is, they will be the best seats in the stadium and each seat will carry a brass plate bearing the name of the owner in perpetuity. It will thus be a permanent memorial to his interest in athletics at Oglethorpe university. When eventually the whole stadium is constructed, should the direction of the playing field be changed, the seats will change with it so that they can still be on the 50-yard line and the brass memorial plates will be changed accordingly. It is hoped and believed that the names of those purchasing these life passes will constitute a fine body of friendly patrons and include the names of the finest sportsmen in Atlanta.

Working On Plans.

Plans and specifications for the construction of Hermance stadium are now being prepared by Morgan and Dillon, architects. It is hoped that actual construction will begin within 60 days.

The prospects for a fine football team at Oglethorpe for the season of 1929 are the brightest in the history of the college. Coach Robertson will not lose a single one of his backfield men and in addition thereto will gain several stars from the freshman team. The 1929 record should contain the largest number of victories since the famous championship team of 1924.

He Never Missed.

Back in the other century Keeler went through a whole season and a good part of the next without fanning against some of the best pitchers of all time.

Golden Bears Present A Powerful Defense

Rated Strongest Team on Coast in That Line of Play; Price Boasts of Many Brilliant Stars.

Los Angeles, December 8.—When Georgia Tech comes to the Pasadena Rose Bowl for the New Year's day game next month the Golden Tornado will meet the strongest defensive team on the Pacific coast. This is the University of California eleven, coached by Clarence "Nibs" Price.

California's last game was a 13-to-13 tie with Stanford. Up until this time no college or university team had been able to score a touchdown on the Golden Bears. The Olympic Club of San Francisco, an organization of former intercollegiate players, had defeated California, 12 to 0, but in this game Price used only his reserves, preferring to save his regulars for an important conference game with Oregon university.

The only coast conference eleven to score on California, other than Stanford, was Washington State, which managed to get a field goal and lost, 13 to 3. Washington State in turn was able to score twice on Southern California, coast championship eleven, but also lost here, 27 to 13.

1928 Results.

California's scores this season are as follows: Santa Clara, 22 to 0; St. Mary's, 7 to 0; Washington State, 13 to 3; Southern California, scoreless tie; Olympic club, 0 to 12; Oregon "U," 13 to 0; Washington "U," 6 to 0; Nevada, 60 to 0, and Stanford, 13 to 13.

It will be seen that only 28 points have been scored on the Golden Bears in nine games, an average of but three points per clash.

Price has two great football players on his team. They are Captain Irvine Phillips, who plays end, and Benny Lom, who performs at halfback. Lom is a Jewish boy.

Phillips has proved himself a fine pass catcher, a good defensive player and a natural born leader. He weighs 190 pounds and has been picked on many all-coast teams this year, some critics naming him to all-American selections.

Lom is one of the two best punters on the Pacific coast, Captain Jesse Hibbs, of Southern California, being the other. Lom is also an excellent passer and a good broken field runner.

Lee Eisan at quarter, Wesley Barr at halfback and Charley Schmidt at fullback complete the California backfield. Price has a wealth of reserve backfield material, however, and often uses eight to twelve ball carriers in a game.

A Big Lineman.

On the line Russ Avery, a 200-pounder, who had several seasons' experience with the Olympic club before enrolling at California, plays the other end position.

The tackles are Fitz and Bancroft, two of the best in the west. Gill and Schwartz hold down the guard positions, with Roy Riegels, elected to captain next year's team, at center.

CLARK DEFEATS ALABAMA STATE NORMAL, 26 TO 0

"The Thousand Backs" of Clark university ran wild Saturday afternoon to send the football aggregation of Alabama State Normal down to a crushing defeat, 26 to 0, on the new athletic field at Clark to end the season in a tie with Tuskegee, Atlanta and Fisk for the championship.

The game was a one-sided affair after the first quarter when the combinations of Baker to Johnson and Baker to Wadley, swept the invading Alabama team off its feet. The longest pass of the season was completed when Elmer Baker, standing on the Clark university 45-yard line, tossed a long one to Squat Johnson, who made a sensational catch as he stepped across the goal line for the first touchdown.

Elmer Baker, who was shifted to surprise of the game when he drop-kicked 54 yards for a field goal. This was the longest drop-kick registered this year.

The first quarter of the game was mostly a duel between Baker, of Clark, and Moore, of Albama State. Clark drew first blood in the second quarter when the 55-yard pass was completed. Baker added the extra point with a dropkick.

In the next few minutes of play Clark added another touchdown after receiving the ball on Alabama's 45-yard line. A short pass for 15 yards, from Baker to Wadley, placed the ocal on the visitor's 30-yard line. The Alabama secondary defense broke up the next attempt to pass. The forward held until the fourth down, when Baker tossed a pass for 30 yards to Wadley, who wast waiting on the goal line for the second touchdown. Cogar, left glard for State, blocked Baker's attempt at extra point. The first half ended with the visitors on the short end of a 13-0 score.

For the first few minutes of the third quarter, it looked as if the Alabama team would make a comeback, when Lewis and Cooley, backfield men for State, got some good gains on delayed bucks. They marched to the Clark 20-yard line, where they met a stone wall and were held for downs, without being in position to try for a field goal.

The fourth quarter began with the ball on State's 25-yard line where Johnson, on a fake play, ran through the Alabama line for the third touchdown.

Wadey received a punt from Moore in midfield and in a sensational broken field run carried it 50 yards for a touchdown behind perfect interference, to make the score 26-0.

Chattanooga Wins S.I.A.A. Title for 1928

Moccasins Defeat Southern, 19-0, by Scoring in First Three Quarters.

Lakeland, Fla., December 8.—(AP)—Southern college's Moccasins yielded their claim to the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association title here today and went down in bitter defeat when the powerful Chattanooga eleven displayed its superiority by scoring 19 points to Southern's scoreless day.

Lautzenheizer and Barrett, Chattanooga backs, led their teammates in the offensive work of the affair by hitting the line and skirting the ends for consistent and generous gains. Kopcha, Chattanooga tackle, was the outstanding defensive player of the game with his slashing antics playing havoc with Southern's attempt at yard gaining.

Reese, Southern quarterback, bore the brunt of his team's offensive efforts.

After a steady march, Overmeyer received a short pass from Chattanooga's first counter in the first period. Ward hit center for a short gain in the second period to score Chattanooga's second touchdown, after Lautzenheizer and Overmeyer had alternated at carrying the ball.

In the third period, Reese attempted to pass to Murrell. It was intercepted by Gross. Lautzenheiser then tore through right guard for five yards and on the next play Barrett charged through the same place to carry the oval across for Chattanooga's third and final touchdown. Thompson's try for extra point was good.

Chattanooga presented a well-organized interference that worked with clock-like precision. Chattanooga scored 15 first downs to Southern's eight.

Tech Is Forced To Best To Win

will. Vengeance was in their hearts and they held the Jackets to a two-touchdown margin of victory. Not only that, the Bulldog—playing a defensive game and waiting for a break—scored first when Palmer recovered a fumble for Georgia and ran it to Tech's 11-yard line from whence a forward pass served to bring about a score.

That was the only time that Georgia threatened to score. That powerful, grinding machine that is Tech's line stood always in the way; holding Georgia backs for no gain or throwing them for losses. And by the same token, Georgia's line, rising to a defensive height that it has not known this year, clawed, grasped and hung on Tech backs as they came tearing through. They couldn't keep Tech from scoring. We wouldn't say that there's a team in the country that can keep Tech in check with its strong line, with its battering, tearing Lumpkin, weaving Mizell and powerful Thomason from scoring. But Georgia held on as best it could and made a good job of it.

The Bulldog has no cause to be downcast. He was doped to lose by from four to six touchdowns. He was lame and halt. He hadn't been able to scrimmage at all during the week. You could tell that because of the raggedness at times of the running plays. Late in the game, when Georgia opened up an aerial attack, the blocking wasn't effective enough to hold out the fiercely charging Jones and Waddey and the plunging Maree.

But the Bulldog held well on defense. The line was spotted with substitutes who came through nobly. That Georgia line played nothing less than an inspired game. It's just the sort of game that an underdog plays when he goes up against a foe who has been battled down through the years. Frisbie, gigantic tackle, who had been out for a month, came back, charged hard, broke through at times and spilled Tech backs for losses. Joe Boland, at center, passed steadily, and backed up his line admirably. And Roy Jacobson was a bundle of energy and fight at guard. At the other guard was Olin Huff, a sub who won his spurs in the Alabama game and continued his scintillating style of play Saturday afternoon.

The work of Hooks and Dudley on defense was another big factor in this holding of Tech. Time and again they drove to nail a Tech back who had gotten through the line. It was their tackling that kept the golden jersied carriers from making a great lot of long runs.

It was Tech's day and the Jacket wasn't disappointed. But a Bulldog, full of fight, added a great deal to the excitement of the day.

Glascow Wins Title In Kentucky by 38 to 0

Lexington, Ky., December 8.—(AP) Ashland outclassed Glasgow High school in a post-season football game announced as deciding the state championship here today and won, 38 to 0. Henderson, undefeated in the western section, however, had challenged the winner. A crowd of 5,000 saw the game.

DETROITERS RIDE DE LUXE COACHES

The de luxe motor coach has definitely established a place for itself in the transportation requirements of large urban centers with the successful inauguration of this class of service in Detroit by the department of street railways.

First deliveries have been made of the fleet of 120 Graham Brothers parlor coaches, purchased from Dodge Brothers and added to the equipment of the street railways, supplementing bus and street car lines already in operation. The new lines are for the main streets of the city and run parallel to the car routes.

Inauguration of the service met with immediate response from the bus-riding public. Added refinements in comfortable transportation, combined with speedy operation, have had a wide and popular appeal. A six-minute schedule is maintained and the coaches are liberally patronized, meeting all demands of heavy rush-hour traffic, according to officials of the railroad department, who announced the entire quota of coaches will be in operation on the streets by December 15.

The Graham coach carries 15 passengers, exclusive of the driver, in deep, leather, air cushion, individual, wicker chairs, standard equipment in this model. It is unusually roomy, ample space being provided between the seats and in the aisles. Speed and ease of operation equal to the passenger car is given by the powerful six-cylinder motor. Safety is assured by Lockheed hydraulic, four-wheel, internal expanding brakes with hand brake operating on the propeller shaft, an emergency door at the rear and non-skid entrance step.

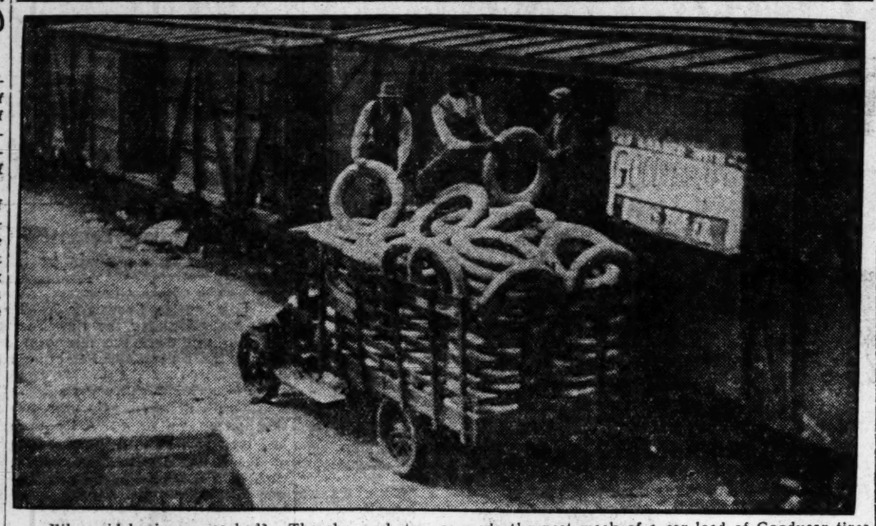
Car Load of Goodyear Tires for Dobbs Tire Co.



Who said business was bad? The above photo was made the past week of a car load of Goodyear tires and tubes purchased by one of Goodyear's leading retail distributors, the Dobbs Tire company. This shipment is the third solid car load received by the Dobbs company this fall, and certainly indicates an unusual demand for this popular tire.

USED MOTOR CAR SALE LAUNCHED BY HUPP DEALER

Thompson Cauthorn Motor company, prominent factors on automobile row and local Hupmobile dealers, launched a $50,000 sale of used cars last week. The sale will continue for 10 days, officials of the company said Saturday.

Representing one of the largest offerings of used cars ever to be held by the company, the event has attracted much attention among automobile dealers and used car purchasers.

The sale has placed on the local market a large variety of automobile makes that have been acquired by the Thompson Cauthorn company in trades on new cars. Big price recessions have been made for the sale, officials of the company stated.

GUILTY VERDICT ENDS 'CELLAR GRAVE' TRIAL

Munfordville, Ky., December 8.—(AP)—Apparently unconcerned as to his fate, George Miller, 40, Horse Cave butcher, today heard a Hart county circuit court jury find him guilty of the "cellar grave" murder of Miss Lula Kirchner, Cincinnati, and fix his sentence at life imprisonment. When the verdict was read after three hours and 33 minutes of deliberation by the jury, Miller's wife and 14-year-old daughter sobbed brokenly but Miller showed no emotion.

Miss Kirchner's body was found September 17 in a shallow grave in the cellar of an abandoned farm house near Rowletts a month after her disappearance and the day after the body of her sweetheart, William Ferris, was discovered shot to death on the neighboring farm of his sister, Mrs. Garland Martin.

Miller and Martin told conflicting stories at the trial. Mrs. Martin related that Miller confided to her that he had been paid $200 to kill Miss Kirchner and buried her body. Miller claimed Mrs. Martin told him that her brother, Ferris, had killed Miss Kirchner and that she later had killed her brother in a quarrel.

The defense attempted to prove Miller was in Horse Cave the day Miss Kirchner was killed.

The jury was given instructions by Judge Basil Richardson at 8 o'clock this morning after the defense had completed its testimony last night.

Counsel for the defense announced later that a motion for a new trial would be presented to Judge Richardson Monday, and if the motion is overruled the defense plans to take the case to the court of appeals. The defense contends the conviction was made on circumstantial evidence insufficient to warrant a verdict of guilty.

EUREKA COLLEGE STUDENTS' STRIKE ENDS IN VICTORY

Eureka, Ill., December 8.—(AP)—A hectic but victorious week of rebellion had ended today for 300 students of Eureka college.

Bert Wilson had resigned as president in response to student clamour against his faculty changes; the board of trustees, faced by a student strike, finally had accepted Wilson's resignation.

A crisis in the school's affairs came when students rebelled at the trustees' refusal to accept Wilson's resignation. Less than a dozen attended classes this eek afetr the Thanksgiving recess; professors lectured to empty classrooms. The trustees last night ended the impasse by voting to allow Wilson to quit.

Student leaders yesterday told the trustees they would withdraw their demands, but the board, heeding Wilson's protest that he could not remain with students feeling so antagonistic, accepted his withdrawal.

FOUR BLUEJACKETS LAUDED AS HEROES BY NAVAL CHIEF

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—The heroism of four American bluejackets at Tutuila, Samoa, was specially commended by Secretary of the Navy Wilbur today for having helped to fling into the sea from a British steamer parts of a flaming cargo of such highly combustible materials as acetylene, creosol, matches, paints and oils.

"Such conduct is in keeping with th best traditions of the naval service," read the secretary's commendation of O. T. Heslip, of Fort Worth, Texas; V. B. Webster, of Cody, Wyo.; R. W. Akers, of Kansas City, Mo., and H. E. Stevens, of Tutuila.

CONFESSES LOOTING FROM NINETY ALTARS

Thefts From Catholic Churches Are Valued at More Than $100,000.

San Francisco, December 8.—(AP)—Gold and silver chalices encrusted with precious stones, brocaded vestments and other articles worth more than 100,000, stolen from the altars and sacristies of ninety Catholic churches in California and Mexico, were being returned to their regular places today following the arrest here of a former San Quentin convict who confessed to their theft.

San Francisco police yesterday announced the arrest of Ralph Joseph Sawyer alias Sauer, as the thief, after the precious articles had been located in antique shops here and in Los Angeles. They said Sawyer made a full written confession in which he implicated two others. Police said that nearly the entire loot was recovered.

The police said Sawyer's confession revealed that he had been educated in a Catholic school and that he conceived the idea of choosing the quiet atmosphere of the churches as a field of thievery while serving a sentence in a California prison.

Sawyer said he had invented the idea of disposing of the church articles by representing to antique dealers that they had come from the churches of Mexico during religious troubles there.

His knowledge of Catholic rites enabled him to choose an advantageous hour of the day for entering the churches. Sawyer said he and his two companions learned to enter a church usually when the priest was absent, kneel as if in prayer as near to the valuables as possible, and snatch cups, robes, candlesticks and communion plate as the opportunities offered themselves.

Wrapping paper, carried under their coats, enabled them to carry away the larger articles without being suspected. The police are still searching for Sawyer's confederates.

Sawyer served at San Quentin from March, 1920, until July, 1923, when he was paroled. He was sent up from Los Angeles following conviction of highway robbery.

Head Grant-Harris-Rippey Co.

W. J. GRANT.

HOMER B. HARRIS.

Announcement is made in today's paper of the association in the Rippey Motor company of W. J. Grant and Homer B. Harris, to sell and service both Lincoln and Ford cars, which is considered one of the most important made in Atlanta automobile circles recently.

These men have been identified in the automobile business in the south for many years—Mr. Grant 13 years and Mr. Harris nine years—both having been connected with the Ford industry either as factory representatives or dealers.

Mr. Grant takes over his new duties with 13 years' Ford and Lincoln experience, having served six years in the Atlanta Ford plant, and seven years as Ford dealer in West Palm Beach, Fla.

Mr. Harris has been with the Ford interest for the past nine years in their Atlanta and Jacksonville branches and comes to his new connection with the merchandizing insight that few men can boast.

Associated with the above two men is E. O. Stone, retired Atlanta capitalist, who has been identified with the Rippey company for the past four years and is well known in every section of the country.

This firm, pending erection of a new home that will be ready about May 1, 1929, will be located at 505 West Peachtree street, at Baltimore Block, where they have installed the very latest shop equipment to handle Lincoln and Ford service; also spacious display rooms, where a complete line of these two cars will be carried at all times.

LIVESTOCK EXPOSITION CLOSES IN SPLENDOR

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—Under the lofty, flag-bedecked ceiling of the international amphitheater, blue-blooded horses brought the greatest livestock exposition in history to a brilliant close tonight. Spectators jostled for places while society gave the event an added touch of elegance from their boxes.

Out in the stables weary exhibitors and their helpers were tucking their prize ribbons and belongings into grips in preparation for their homeward journey.

From the farthest corners of the nation and Canada they had come with their fine-bred cattle, horses, swine and sheep and the selected grain.

But even in the excitement of the closing hour the victors still discussed the drama which has been packed into the seven days just ended.

Never has an exposition offered anything to equal the romance of the achievements of that youthful pair, Clarence Geoke and Keith Collins, of Iowa.

Clarence appealed to the crown from the first, when his light little frame made a striking contrast to the big Hereford which won various class championships and finally the grand championship. His prize winnings amounted to near $10,000.

They will talk about young Collins, who showed the exposition something it had never seen before: A champion dressed carcass which also was offered as the champion steer carcass on hoof. Another record price, $4,873.50, was the reward he received.

Almost half a million persons visited the exposition during the week.

CHEAPER AND BETTER AIRPLANES FORESEEN

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—The world soon will have cheaper and better airplanes because of intense competition which is just beginning to show its effects upon the aeronautical industry, Major Lester D. Gardner, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, said tonight.

With the international aeronautical exposition here entering the last 24 hours of its showing, Major Gardner called attention to the spirit of business-like rivalry which has prevailed throughout the week among the airplane exhibitors.

"Competition has played an almost negligible part in these first few years of commercial aeronautical development," Major Gardner said. "But the next year will find intense competition as a new and much-needed stimulus to the developemtn of aircraft.

"Like the autoamobile in its early days, the airplane is a relatively expensive product. The employment of mass production methods in the development of airplanes, which the next year will see on an unprecedented scale, will mean cheaper and better airplanes."

Manufacturers of aircraft products represented at the international exposition reported sales of more than $3,000,000 during the first eight days. Although some of these sales were made to private owners, many of them buying their first airplane, most of the sales involved air-line operators or other manufacturers.

More than 100,000 persons have visited the exhibition since it was opened a week ago tonight.

ELECTRIC LINER OFF ON FIRST TRIP; TO SKIRT CANAL

New York, December 8.—(AP)—The new electrically-driven liner Virginia sailed today on her maiden voyage to Los Angeles and San Francisco via the Panama canal.

The Virginia, owned by the Panama-Pacific line, carried 692 passengers and 3,800 tons of cargo. The vessel, commanded by Captain H. A. T. Candy, former skipper of the Virginia's sister ship California, is expected to make the trip in 13 days.

NATIONAL GUARD AIR CORPS PLANES RATIO IS CHANGED

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—Change of the ratio of three service and five training planes to four service and four training planes for national guard air corps units has been authorized by Secretary Davis. The progress made in flying by national guard units in the last year was considered such as to warrant a further increase in the allotment of service planes to each unit.

School Children Told To Salvage Paper by Sutton

Atlanta school children were urged to save all the waste paper possible as a means of conserving the timber supply of the nation, in the weekly letter addressed to them by Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of city schools, on Saturday.

Superintendent Sutton's letter follows:

"My dear Boys and Girls:

"Friday, December 7, has been designated in this country as "Arbor day." What a wonderful thing it is to plant a tree and to see a tree grow, and what a contribution to the world is one great tree? And then when we think of thousands and thousands of trees constituting great forests, of the water vapor which they throw into the air, of the carbon dioxide which they take up and the oxygen which they give off, and of all the wonderful things which a tree does to make life livable and to add to our pleasure—when we think of all these I am sure that each of us really desires to make Arbor day a worthwhile day in our lives and make it contribute to the pleasure, comfort and happiness of ourselves and others.

"I am sure, through Miss Rainwater's department, through newspaper articles and many other ways, you have become acquainted with the value of growing trees. One of the methods by which we may conserve the forests of this country is to save waste paper.

"So much waste paper is being burned and uselessly destroyed. It has a commercial value. It is actually worth something in money, but the value which it possesses in saving the forests of our nation far outstrips the monetary value which we receive when we sell it. For every six tons of old paper collected and sold we save one acre of timber which might be otherwise destroyed to provide pulp for the paper mills.

"Practically all of our schools have had a paper sale and each of them contemplates another sometime during the year. I wish to urge our boys and girls to see that all waste paper about the home is saved and that they enlist the help of their neighbors in saving paper for your next waste paper sale. It is a wonderful thing to plant a tree, but the planted tree may die. It is a still more wonderful thing to save a tree that is already planted and growing.

"So let me request all of our boys and girls to become thrifty in one additional way; namely, the saving of waste paper for your paper sale date in the future.

"Always your friend,
"WILLIS A. SUTTON,
"Superintendent of Schools."

Atlanta, Ga., December 8, 1928.

CHICAGOANS PLAN BOARD TO GUARD CITY EXPENDITURES

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—Chicago's current financial crises prompted a group of the city's civic leaders today to lay plans for a permanent municipal expenditures commission to serve as a watchdog over the city's pocketbook.

The shortage in the school board treasury, which necessitated postponement of payment to school teachers, disclosures made in connection with the payroll of the sanitary district, and expenditures regarded by many as excessive in other city departments led to the present move.

George O. Fairweather, chairman of the joint committee on real estate valuations and a leader in the plan, estimated that taxpayers would be saved from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 annually if there were a non-political, civic body charged with scanning the expenditures of all departments of the city government.

The commission would scrutinize payrolls, letting of contracts, bond issues, public projects, special assessments, purchase of supplie sand revenue from water and other non-tax sources.

NATIONAL CHAMBER TO MEET IN 1929 IN COLUMBUS, OHIO

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—Columbus, Ohio, has been selected as the next meeting place of the national council of the chamber of commerce. The announcement of the meeting, made today by headquarters of the organization, said that the date had not been definitely fixed but that it would be held sometime next autumn.

The meeting is held annually to bring together members of the council and also representatives of more than 1,500 member organizations of the chamber.

The announcement said that Columbus was chosen as the meeting place because of its location in the heart of an important business and industrial section.

TILSON SEES SESSION FOR TARIFF IN SPRING

Montclair, N. J., December 8.—(AP) Representative John Q. Tilson, of Connecticut, republican floor leader in the house, said in an address here tonight that there probably would be an extra session of congress in the spring to deal with the tariff and farm relief questions.

Mr. Tilson's speech was made at the rally in "Nick" Robert's old Yale barn in acceptance of the Montclair Yale bowl, an honor which is conferred annually upon some graduate "who has made his 'Y' in life."

After reviewing the major questions before the present session, Mr. Tilson said: "On the whole it looks like an interesting short session of congress and probably an extra session sometime next spring to deal with the tariff and farm relief questions."

"My own belief is that there is no complete panacea that will cure all the ills of agriculture," he said, "but that helpful measures may be agreed upon as the need for them may develop, and that these might well be acted upon without delay, even at the present session. As to this being done, however, I am none too hopeful as far as the short session is concerned.

Regarding tariff legislation, Mr. Tilson said there was need for revision to meet changes in conditions since the passage of the present tariff act seven years ago.

"It need not be a drastic revision that will in any way disturb legitimate business," he said. "It should encourage business to know that protection to American industries has been at last accepted by all political parties as the permanent tariff policy of the country."

Among the other important issues before congress Mr. Tilson listed hydro-electric power and the naval program and said that an attempt would be made to enact a reapportionment law to redistribute representation in congress on the basis of the 1930 census.

2 BURGLARS KILL OHIO PHYSICIAN, WIFE AND ESCAPE

Dayton, Ohio, December 8.—(AP)—Two burglars who early today shot and killed Dr. Horatio Z. Silver, 55, prominent physician, and his wife, 58, when surprised while ransacking the Silver home here, were objects of a statewide search tonight.

Mrs. Silver was killed instantly by a bullet which pierced her heart when she discovered the burglars in the act of ransacking her home. Dr. Silver, who had gone to his wife's assistance when he heard a commotion in the hall, was shot and wounded fatally by the second of three bullets fired by the intruders, when he seemingly failed to heed the burglar's injunction to halt. He died five hours later in a Dayton hospital. The third bullet went wide.

ODDIE DEMANDS BUDGET BUREAU STUDY MINERALS

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—The American mining congress closed its annual convention today after hearing a demand for enlargement of the budget bureau to provide more adequately for the needs of the government's scientific services and adopting a resolution calling for "sufficient tariff protection to enable the greatest development" of mineral industries.

Senator Oddie, Nevada, chairman of the senate mines committee, in calling for enlargement of the budget bureau, charged that clerks and bookkeepers who lacked technical knowledge passed on the appropriation requests of the government departments. He declared that a loss of "many millions" had been caused to the industries and natural resources of the country through failure of the budget property to finance government scientific investigations; and said experts on mining and other industries should be provided by the bureau to pass upon budget estimates for their respective industries.

Revision of the national tax laws to relieve the mining industry of burdensome taxes, and exemption of income from gold mines were urged in resolutions adopted by the congress. It also went on record as favoring increased funds for the development of new mineral resources under governmental guidance.

A New Thrill In Motoring

GRAHAM PAIGE

Owners say they get a new thrill driving a Graham-Paige with four speeds forward. Fourth, used most of the time, gives a new smoothness and swiftness—third, a quiet internal gear, provides rapid acceleration in traffic, and up steep hills. The gear shift is standard. You start in second—first, in reserve, is seldom used. A six or eight is at your disposal.

Five chassis — sixes and eights — prices ranging from $860 to $2485. Car illustrated is Model 835, five-passenger Sedan, with 4-speed transmission (standard gear shift), $2285. All prices at factory.

ANNOUNCING NEW SUPERIOR
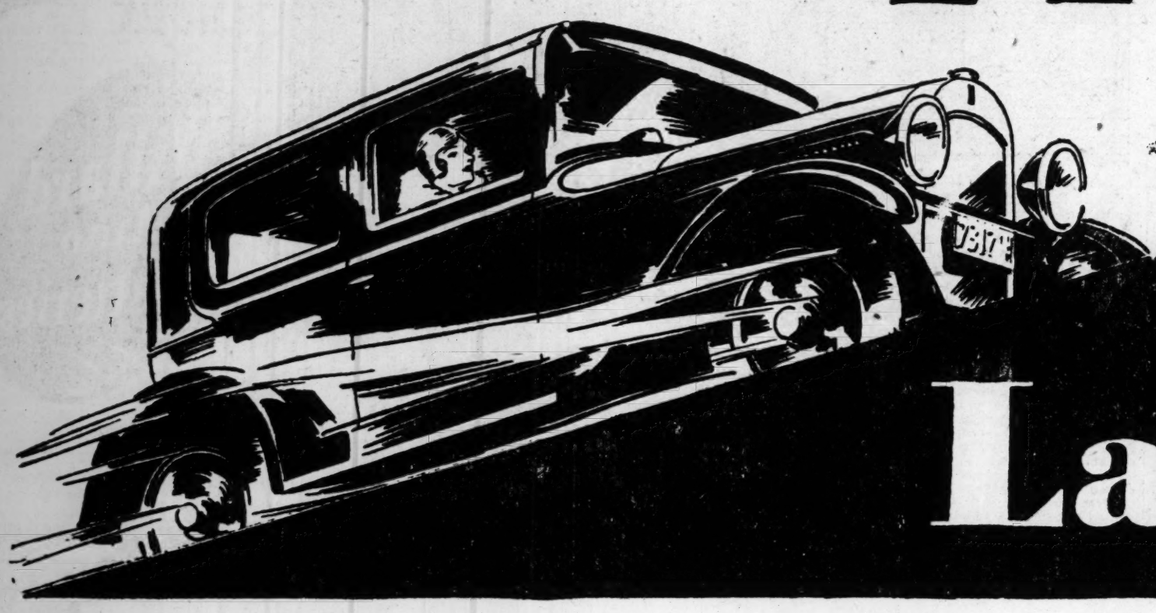
Whippet



Greater Beauty, Larger Bodies!

with "FINGER-TIP CONTROL"

-the most notable advance in driving convenience since the self-starter

What "Finger-Tip Control" means to you

Greater Convenience: A single button, conveniently located in the center of the steering wheel, controls all functions of starting the motor, operating the lights and sounding the horn.

This fundamental improvement does away with all troublesome foot fumbling for the starting button, a frequent source of annoyance particularly to women drivers. It also avoids changing from the comfortable driving position to reach a light switch on the dash.

Greater Safety: With the new "Finger-Tip Control," you can at all times keep your hands on the wheel and your eyes on the road. An important safety factor, especially when driving at night.

TODAY Willys-Overland presents for public judgment the new superior line of Whippet Fours and Sixes, setting new standards of beauty and comfort for low-priced cars . . . the artistic triumph of master designers . . . as far ahead of competition in beauty and style as the original Whippet was ahead in engineering advantages. The new Superior Whippet introduces the style of expensive cars to the Four and light Six field just as the original Whippet introduced the engineering practice of high-priced cars to the low-priced field.

Greater beauty, longer bodies, higher radiator and hood, more graceful lines, richer colors, heavier one-piece full-crown fenders — all these contribute to the trim, smart appearance that denotes creative genius and superlative mastery of modern design.

Roomier bodies, greater comfort

More spacious interiors in the new Superior Whippet afford added leg room and elbow room. The wider, form-fitting seats are deeply upholstered . . . all passengers enjoy relaxed, restful positions.

The longer wheelbase, plus the lengthened springs both front and rear, plus oversize balloon tires, and snubbers—all combine to make far easier riding under all conditions.

Greater power, greater speed

In mechanical improvements the new Superior Whippet advances even over its famous predecessor. The new higher compression engine gives more than 20% added horsepower, resulting in increased speed, faster pick-up and greater hill-climbing ability. A completely redesigned steering gear makes this new car instantly responsive to the lightest touch.

Through these further advances in scientific engineering, dependable performance and minimum operating costs are assured.

NEW WHIPPET MODELS, LARGER AND ROOMIER, ANNOUNCED

CARS COMPLETELY REDESIGNED; SET NEW BEAUTY MARK

"Finger-Tip Control" Called Greatest Advance in Driving Convenience Since Self-Starter.

Development of body lines that strike a note of beauty and quality, heretofore found only in cars that sell in the higher price range, is seen in Willys-Overland's announcement of its completely redesigned lines of Whippet four and six cylinder cars. The lowness of the prices on both lines completes the marvel of the achievement.

President John N. Willys, one of the largest automobile manufacturers now brings high priced car beauty and greater value to the low priced field in addition to presenting a car of proved mechanical excellence. This development follows just two and one-half years after successful introduction of the original Whippet.

In presenting the new Whippet fours and sixes, Mr. Willys says: "When the original Whippet was introduced, designed along lines that entirely revolutionized the light car field, it was predicted that within two years every car manufacturer in the Whippet classification would be forced to adopt the mechanical features first set by the Whippet or be relegated to the obsolete group. This particularly applied to four-wheel brakes. That these predictions came to pass in less than two years is history, with other car manufacturers both in the low and higher price fields following the trend set by the Whippet.

"Now we present the completely redesigned Whippet fours and sixes, bringing to the low price class for the first time in automotive history high priced car value, beauty and advanced features, in addition to proved mechanical superiority."

Outstanding among the features which place the Whippet in a distinctive position, is the new "Finger-Tip Control." By means of an ingenious improvement all functions of starting the motor, controlling the lighting system and sounding the horn are operated from a single button conveniently located in the center of the steering wheel.

AUTO ASSOCIATION TO CELEBRATE 10TH ANNIVERSARY

The early part of this week the finishing touches will be put by the committee on arrangements for the big celebration of the tenth anniversary, and election of officers of the Atlanta Automobile association, to be held next Friday night, December 14, third floor, Atlanta Athletic club. Requests for tickets have poured in to the executive secretary's office during the past week, and between 300 and 400 members, employees and guests are expected to attend. Those who have not secured their tickets are requested to do so as early as possible this week, by sending remittance for such number as they desire, at $2.50 each, to the executive secretary's office, 1306 Citizens & Southern Bank Bldg., because the total number of reservations must be given the Atlanta Athletic club not later than Wednesday evening.

Al Belle Isle, chairman of the committee on entertainment features, promises the members something extraordinary and interesting from every angle. The entertainment will follow immediately on top of the splendid course dinner, which will be served accompanied by an orchestra, special quartette, and other musical numbers. The whole event will be preceded by a short business session of a half hour, convening promptly at 6:30 on the fourth floor of the Athletic club, when the retiring officers will deliver their annual report for the past year, and the officers for the new year will be elected. The president's annual report will bring out particularly the fact that the annual automobile show held last January in the auditorium was the most successful financially and in point of numbers the association has ever held, and there is every indication that the enthusiasm and interest aroused by the last show will make the next show in January, 1929, the biggest and most interesting ever staged in the south.

Increased Sale of Franklin Shown in Recent Check-Up

A strikingly new interest in the Franklin Airman Limited on the part of the American public and a decided increase in the sale of these air-cooled quality motor cars, resulted at the nation-wide salon recently staged by Franklin distributors in the 15 important trade centers of the country, according to reports coming to executives of Franklin Automobile company at Syracuse, N. Y.

Men close to the trend in the automobile industry declared that this pre-winter Franklin salon with its exhibits which drew thousands of persons to Franklin showrooms all over the country, sounded an advance note of what the public might expect in the way of style and quality among the finest cars of the world during the coming year.

Following the salon it was reported that nearly a score of the largest Franklin distributors and dealers in widely scattered sections of the nation had, before the last of October, exceeded their total retail performance for the entire 12 months of 1927, by margins ranging from 2 to 51 per cent.

A further check-up by the Franklin sales organization revealed that numerous other Franklin dealers were practically equal with the total retail business for last year while others stated that before December they will have exceeded their last year's sales volume.

Franklin executive declare that this marked increase in Franklin sales, which are exceeding last year's volume, is due to recognition of the outstanding efficiency of the Franklin air-cooled power plant and the position of leadership in style, design and quality accorded the Franklin Airman Limited.

AUTOMOBILE WHEELS UNDERGO BIG CHANGE

Automobile wheels have undergone considerable change within the past 10 years, and some of the most notable improvements are to be seen in the wheels with which the new model A Ford car is equipped.

These new wheels are known as "steel spoke" wheels and are of special Ford design and manufacture. Like other features of the new model A Ford, they combine lightness and graceful appearance with strength and durability to a degree never before attained in wheels designed especially for light, low-priced cars that must give long and hard service in many parts of the world and under many and varying road conditions.

The steel spokes, of which there are thirty in each wheel, are made of a fine grade of Ford steel, electrically welded to the steel rim and the hub shell so that the entire wheels, hub, spokes and rim, becomes in reality one piece of steel, with no part that can work or wear loose and weaken the wheel structure or become noisy. Besides, each spoke before being welded to hub and rim is set at just that angle in relation to the other spokes which makes it perform the best possible bracing and pulling friction. This feature of the design prevents road shocks being transmitted directly to any single spoke in the wheel and distributes the shock equally to all of the spokes and to all sections of rim and hub, thus lessening the danger of wheel failure.

The rim of this new Ford wheel is of the "drop center" type, which gives greater strength to the rim, imparting the same qualities of rigidity that are found in channel and corrugated steel, and which also greatly facilitates changing tires, as the tire, once the air is out, may be removed easily even without the aid of tools.

Graham-Paige To Use The Talking Motion Picture

The talking motion picture has been put to work. This newest development of the movie, the world's entertainment medium, heretofore devoted only to purposes of amusement, has already been seized upon by industry and commerce, and sent out in the world to earn its way as a producer of business—a super-salesman.

The possibilities of the talking film in business are without limit. It is freely predicted by some that it is destined to revolutionize methods in many lines of commerce, enabling the masters of industry to exert their forcefulness and their personality "to sell" themselves and their interests the world over.

The advantages of the talking film in business are well illustrated in its first use. A motor company that has a message to its dealers throughout the country is delivering that message by showing the world's first commercial film, projected through the first portable reproducing devices ever made, at meetings in many different cities. The result is that the dealers, instead of receiving a message by duplicated letter or through a representative of the company, are addressed by the officers of the company in their own voices, with all their naturalness of gesture and intonation, and all their warmth of sincerity and personality.

The three Graham brothers, at the head of the Graham-Paige Motors corporation, are the speakers in this first commercial talking film. In the ordinary course of events, it would be an extraordinary occasion when all three of them could journey to a distant city to address a dealer meeting, and it would be beyond possibility for them to cover the entire country. By the use of the talking film, with the new portable projectors, the three Graham brothers are enabled to carry their message directly to the dealers in every community; and moreover, they can appear in one or a hundred towns at the same time.

The flexibility of the film for such purposes was demonstrated in the making of the Graham-Paige picture. Robert C. Graham was in Europe when the plan for the film was completed. His speech was recorded before the camera in London, rushed to America, fitted in with the recorded addresses of Joseph B. and Ray A. Graham, and was ready for delivery before he returned from abroad.

Another great advantage of the speaking pictures for commercial uses is that it can create an atmosphere favorable to its purpose. Incidental features that could not be made a part of personal appearances can be incorporated in the film at its recording, and serve forever afterward. For instance, in the Graham-Paige film, atmosphere is skillfully created by making the speeches of the three Grahams part of a continuity of scene and sound and speech, all designed to promote the object of the film.

There is a prologue, with spectacular illustrating the principles of the Graham-Paige legion, and incidental music by the famous Roxy theater orchestra, and a spoken sequence by Lionel Atwill, one of America's foremost actors. This prologue leads up to the personal addresses of the Grahams, inviting every dealer to Detroit January 3-4 for a great national gathering of Graham-Paige sales representatives. After the addresses of the three brothers, there is a short sequence with music—Arthur Pryor's Graham-Paige Legion March—and a spoken epilogue by Atwill.

The Graham-Paige company is now operating "road companies" to take the "talkies" all over the country in December, to promote the attendance at the national dealers' meeting in January, just prior to the New York automobile show.

Before the perfecting of the portable equipment now used exclusively by Graham-Paige, talking films could be used only in theaters in which had been installed the costly apparatus for reproduction. The portable apparatus, including projector, sound reproducing devices, amplifiers, and so forth, are packed in three special trunks, only slightly larger than the ordinary wardrobe trunk. Transformers permit using the apparatus with any electric current. The projector is set up and its sound reproducing device connected to the amplifier back of the screen. The synchronism is automatic, for the sounds are recorded on the picture film itself.

At the first showing in Detroit, before dealers from all over Michigan, those who had previously heard the Grahams speak were impressed with the naturalness of the reproduction, which not only showed every mannerism of each speaker, but faithfully reproduced every characteristic of voice and delivery. Those who had never heard the speakers before remarked that thy felt as if they had met them personally.

The January meeting for Graham-Paige dealers, the subject of the world's first commercial speaking film, is planned to bring the country-wide dealer organization in closer contact with the factory officials, and to let the dealers see for themselves the Graham-Paige factories in Detroit and Wayne, Mich., which have been doubled in size since the three Graham brothers assumed control in 1927.

More Cities To Have Chevrolet Pre-Showing

Although Chevrolet originally planned only for 11 major advance showings of its new six-cylinder car, the tremendous interest which has been excited throughout the country to see the new car has made it necessary for the company to plan 50 additional advance showings in other important centers, company officials announced yesterday.

Already additional showings have been at Philadelphia, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Flint, Columbus and Cleveland. The first four of these observed openings last Saturday. The Cleveland opening was held Monday. has been displayed thus far the crowds Columbus had its opening Tuesday.

Everywhere the new Chevrolet line has been displayed thus far the crowds have been tremendous. At New York, Detroit, Chicago, Los Angeles and Washington, cities on the original list of 11 where showings have already been completed, close to a million persons flocked to inspect the new cars.

At Detroit the opening day crowd, November 24, was 28,000, a figure which bettered by 3,000 the best opening day crowd in the history of the famous Detroit automobile show. Approximately a quarter million people visited the showing during its six-day New York run. Proportionate crowd interest was demonstrated at Washington, Chicago and Los Angeles.

The revised plans for a more widespread showing of the sensational new Chevrolet will in no way affect the presentations originally scheduled and still unfulfilled. Three of these cities, St. Louis, San Francisco and Cincinnati, are now holding showings and Portland, Dallas and Atlanta will have openings December 18.

When it was decided that the advance showings should take in more territory so that no large center would be overlooked prior to the nation-wide exhibit December 29, Chevrolet's vast and efficient sales force went into immediate action. Marshalled by H. J. Klingler, general sales manager of the company, and captained by the regional sales managers, arrangements were culminated almost overnight to bring about the showings in Philadelphia, Cleveland, Columbus, Indianapolis, Kansas City and Flint.

Cars from the Flint factory had to be loaded and rushed express. Dealer organizations in each of these places, working smoothly in every instance, selected centrally located and popular exhibit places. Newspaper advertising was relied upon to welcome the public. And the success of the suddenly planned venture was attested to by the mammoth crowds which poured forth at all these points to view the handsome new Chevrolet.

While the Chevrolet sales organization, expecting its greatest year in 1929, is busy with the advance showings, and special dealer exhibits, the production forces of the company are equally busy behind the scenes.

Fifteen mammoth Chevrolet factories throughout the country are working at top speed turning out parts and assembling these parts into complete automobiles. Everything is being pushed forward at peak capacity so that the thousands who have already placed orders will not be disappointed when deliveries begin January 1. As soon as the cars come off the assembly line they are distributed to the dealer organization so that every Chevrolet dealer will have cars on display and ready for delivery to customers December 29.

FIVE BABY HEALTH CENTERS THIS WEEK

The Outstanding Chevrolet of Chevrolet History

—a Six in the price range of the four!

The Chevrolet Motor Company announces The Outstanding Chevrolet of Chevrolet History—a Six in the price range of the four.

Spectacular as Chevrolet's achievements have been in the past—notable as its engineering triumphs have proved themselves to be—the presentation of this remarkable new car dwarfs every previous Chevrolet accomplishment It introduces into the low-price field an entirely new measure of performance, comfort, beauty, style and value.

Developed from more than a hundred motors designed over a period of years for this great new car and tested on the General Motors Proving Ground, its new six-cylinder valve-in-head engine stands out as a masterpiece of automotive engineering. Remarkably smooth and quiet—so powerful that both its speed and acceleration more than satisfy the most exceptional requirements—it makes truly luxurious performance the pleasure of the many rather than the privilege of the few.

In beauty, too, this Outstanding Chevrolet is an automotive sensation—so smart, so stylish, and so distinctively appointed are its beautiful new Fisher bodies that it rivals the costliest custom creations.

See this sensational new automobile at its advance showing. You will be amazed to find such tremendous progress revealed in a car of such outstanding beauty, comfort, style and performance at prices so remarkably low.

'SATISFIED,' SAY DESOTO '6' OWNERS

Some idea of the ownership satisfaction which the Chrysler-built new DeSoto Six is producing can be gained from the following unsolicited letter written by Amos C. Case, of East Berlin, Conn., to the dealer from whom he purchased a DeSoto Six recently.

"I have driven 4,500 miles at an average of nearly 19 miles to a gallon of gasoline," writes Mr. Case. "In all my experience as a car owner, and I have driven many makes, I have never found an automobile which pleases me as much as this DeSoto Six cupe. Its riding qualities are wonderful, it is the smoothest car I have ever driven. At 50 miles an hour you can hear only a purring sound from the motor.

"During the last nine days I have visited Stroudsburg, Pa., Sidling Mountain, Md., Richmond, Va., Brownsville, Indiana, Mount Vernon, Ky., Redford, Va., Endless Chasm, Va., and on my last day I completed over 495 miles in one day. I am more than satisfied with the DeSoto Six and recommend it without hesitation to anybody, regardless of the priced car they wish to own. When I went to fill up the radiator with water I was more than surprised to find that it took only half a cup full.

"There seems to be no labor to the DeSoto Six and the way in which it glides over the hills and rough roads, the manner in which it steers; with its instant and dependable brakes and its quieter engine, the DeSoto Six is in every way a car worthy of its name."

GIVES INSTRUCTION TO CHRYSLER OWNERS

To assure Chrysler owners of maximum automobile comfort and efficiency during the coming cold months, Chrysler service experts have prepared a list of suggestions which cover the essential points of pre-winter car preparation

Where a motor car is not to be used during the winter, the experts advise storing it in a dry, evenly heated and not too light place. The car should be washed and dried, all oil and water drained off, wheels jacked up to lift weight from tires, the tires partly deflate', and unpainted metal parts covered with heavy oil or vaseline to prevent rust or corrosion. To prevent rusting of rings and cylinder walls, the spark plugs should be removed and one gill of engine oil poured into each cylinder. Then distribute the oil by turning the engine over a number of times and replace the plugs.

Good Condition Important.

Where it is intended to keep the car in commission, changes in operating conditions call for attention to certain important details. It is important that cars be in good operating condition to overcome the rigors imposed by cold weather. Whenever possible, owners are urged to use the facilities of Chrysler service stations. For those who prefer to condition their own cars, these suggestions should be followed:

Remove all accumulated sludge from the oil pan and refill with oil of good quality. Frequent oil changes during the winter, with proper adjustment of the crankcase ventilator, will safeguard oil circulation. Lubricate the chassis completely. Change oil in the transmission and differential. Inspect and clean the generator and replace any worn parts. Check the battery and recharge the electrical system, if necessary.

Remove and clean the starting motor and replace worn parts. Clean connecting cable terminals of electrical system and grease those at the battery, generator, starting motor and starting switch. Clean and adjust distributor and spark plug points. Inspect cables and replace, if necessary. Reset timing.

Clean Gasoline Tank.

Clean gasoline and vacuum tanks, gas lines and carburetor. Adjust carburetor to proper winter mixture. Tighten water hose connections or replace worn hose, if necessary. Pour in anti-freeze mixture. If alcohol is used, check specific gravity weekly to prevent freezing of the mixture.

Align wheels to prevent tire wear. Tighten body bolts and spring clips. Adjust clutch, brake pedals and brakes for cold weather driving.

"Chryslers are exceptionally well equipped to provide the utmost comfort during winter," says Harry L. Sommers, Inc. "In the closed cars, especial attention has been devoted to draft prevention. Rubber mats cover the floor of the driving compartment, insulated underneath with felt pads. Draft plates are used around the pedals and controls. A waterproof dash liner with felt backing insulates the dash panel. Large size windlaces with rubber tubing and rubber weather stripping seal doors tightly against the entry of cold air."

WILSON IS PROMOTED BY RUSSELL COMPANY

Middletown, Conn., December 8.—(Special.)—According to announcement made here today by W. T. Palmer, manager of the Russell Manufactured company, J. M. Wilson, formerly assistant division manager of the company's branch at Atlanta, has been appointed belting sales manager of the replacements department. Mr. Wilson will have his headquarters in this city.

Following his work at Atlanta, Mr. Wilson was active in sales management for the company at New York, being subsequently promoted to his present post at the company's home office. His promotion is one of several made recently to fill executive positions made necessary by the expansion of Rusco business.

In addition to the Atlanta and other division branch in the United States, the Russell Manufacturing company will operate a Canadian branch factory as soon as construction work on the dominion plant is completed. Approximately 1,500 men and women are employed in the Middletown plant at the present time, some departments working 24 hours a day.

FOUR ARRESTED FOR SELLING RUM IN SCHOOL AREA

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—The vise of the law clamped tighter today against dispensers of liquor to school children. Three men and a woman were under arrest.

All four, propietors or attaches of resorts, were arrested in the Hauson Park grammar school district.

Investigators previously had bought liquor at the soft drink parols of Mrs. Kate Marawski and George Johnson. Felix Twargowoski was arrested when beer and wine were found in his store. At the Serenaders Inn, where officers found gin, wine and beer, Ray Rothgery was arrested. Two other places where youthful investigators had bought drinks were found closed.

NOVEMBER BIGGEST IN REO'S HISTORY

The Reo Motor Car company has just closed the biggest November in its history, according to figures released tonight by Richard H. Scott, president and general manager of the company.

Total shipments for the month were 2,711, which compares with the previous November record of 2,606, and likewise compares with 2,404 for November of 1927. Last year, it will be recalled, was the biggest year the company has enjoyed.

The new November record was established in the face of the fact that only within the past 10 days has production gotten under way on the new moderate-priced pleasure car model which Reo will introduce on December 15. Flying Cloud shipments were more than 50 per cent greater in the month just closed than in the corresponding month of 1927.

"There is every indication," said Mr. Scott, "that December production and shipments will run substantially ahead of last December; and that our total for the year will exceed slightly our total for 1927, our record year to date."

TELLS MOTORISTS HOW TO TEST THEIR BRAKES

Though the latest brake testing machines are not available to every motorist there is no reason why any driver should be at a loss to know whether his rear brakes are equalized, in the opinion of brake experts on the staff of the Russell Manufacturing company. Intelligent use of the speedometer is said to be a handy means of meeting this problem.

The test is outlined as follows:

Drive at a normal speed along the road and apply the brakes forcibly. If the speedometer dial immediately swings back to zero the indications are that both rear wheels have locked. If either of the two rear wheels fails to lock the speedometer will continue to register car speed until the machine actually comes to a stop.

While the test does not assist in checking front wheel adjustment it is useful in helping motorists guard against unequal adjustment of the rear wheel brakes, a condition which is more undesirable than unequal adjustment between front and rear sets of brakes.

DODGE PLANT VETERAN FINISHES 38TH YEAR

"The Daddy of the Plant!"

That's what they call him out in the shops of the mammoth Dodge Brothers factory in Detroit—the gray-haired, slightly stooped engineer on duty at one of the big compressed air machines for operating the huge steel presses.

He is William Wohlfeil and he is 60 years old, the last active member of the little group of Dodge Brothers workmen who have seen the organization grow from a small machine shop with 20 employees to its outstanding position in the automotive industry, ranking with the automotive industrial concerns of the country and the world.

But, in spite of his three-score years, "Bill," as he is known familiarly to thousands of his fellow employees, has kept pace with the times. His ideas of how the modern automobile should be made are the ideas of today. They came to him in the evolution of the industry and the part he has played in it—first the bicycle, then the four and now the popular six-cylinder car.

Wohlfiel was a young man, barely 22, when he crossed over the Detroit river to the Canadian border town of Windsor 38 years ago to work for the Dodge Brothers in the manufacture of bicycles. Employed there until 1901, he returned to Detroit with founders of the company to open their first machine shop, one of a bare handful of employees. Later, when Dodge Brothers were turning out parts for the pioneer automobile companies, he was the blacksmith and in 1914, with the advent of the first Dodge motor car, his engineer's papers came. Today he takes a keen interest in his job as engineer on the big air compressor.

In nearly four decades with Dodge Brothers, Wohlfeil has gained for himself the reputation of being among the most reliable employees in the plant.

"For more than 20 years his time card has not varied more than a couple of minutes," a Dodge official said. "He is always here five minutes ahead of time and has seldom missed a day or even an hour from his job."

His greatest compensation, Wohlfeil declares, has come through a feeling that he has been close to a phenomenal achievement—a sense of pride in the growth of the Dodge organization and the development of the automobile industry.

Willys-Overland Completes Greatest Year in History

Toledo, Ohio, December 8.—With Willys-Overland just completing the greatest year in its entire history, John N. Willys president, announced today that the company is rapidly swinging into production on the new Whippet four and six-cylinder models, which he confidently expects will establish, not only a new conception of artistry in design but also will introduce superior mechanical features as revolutionary in character in the light car field as was the original Whippet when it was introduced two and one-half years ago.

Although details regarding the new Whippets will not be made public until December 9, when they will be formally presented to the public, it is known that the new cars undoubtedly represent the greatest achievement of Mr. Willys in his more than 20 years as one of the world's leading car manufacturers.

Mr. Willys indicated that the company was prepared to meet every form of competition in the low-priced field on a sound basis in 1929, and that, with the increase of the car building capacity from 1,500 cars a day to 2,500 cars daily, the coming year's business would exceed that of the past, which set a new sales record for Willys-Overland.

"All of the Willys-Overland plants are now in production on the new Whippet four and six-cylinder models, which will set a new trend of beauty, quality and performance in the light car field," Mr. Willys said. "The new models are, not only of longer wheelbase with more spacious and beautiful bodies, but embrace a number of new mechanical features and innovations that are not found in any car today, regardless of its price.

"For the past year our engineering and production departments have been concentrating on the developing of these new cars. The body design has been in complete control of the designer who created and established the present-day body lines which have been followed by practically every motor car manufacturer.

"In design and equipment of the new Whippet models Willys-Overland again sets a new trend in the light car field as revolutionary as the original Whippet when it was introduced two and one-half years ago with numerous features that made previous engineering practices obsolete."

While Mr. Willys did not reveal the prices of the new Superior Whippets, as the new cars are to be designated, it is understood that they will remain directly competitive with the lowest priced fours and six-cylinder models now offered the public. This will maintain for the Toledo manufacturer the same strategical position in the light car field that he has occupied during the past 11 months, and which resulted in a sales increase of 85 per cent over the same period of last year and more than three times as great as shown by the industry as a whole.

WAR CORRESPONDENT DIES AT SPOKANE

Spokane, December 8.—(AP)—Will G. McRae, 62, world war correspondent in France for northwest newspapers and at various times engaged on newspaper staffs from coast to coast, is dead here following an operation.

McRae received his first training as a reporter on the Boomerang at Laramie, Wyom., when that publication was edited by Bill Nye, famous humorist. After working in Chicago, Washington and other eastern cities, McRae came to the coast about 35 years ago.

Plumbing Bureau Office for Atlanta; H. B. Fuller in Charge

The Plumbing and Heating Industries bureau, with headquarters in Chicago, a national organization serving manufacturers and wholesalers of plumbing and heating equipment as well as plumbing and heating contractors, has established a district office in Atlanta in order to better serve those engaged in the plumbing and heating industry in the states of Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, North and South Carolina.

In line with the bureau policy recently adopted to have district offices in large, centrally-located cities, district offices have been opened in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Tacoma, Denver, Pittsburgh, Boston and Atlanta. One of the largest and most important of these district offices is the Atlanta office, which will be in charge of H. B. Fuller, a native of Atlanta and well-known in this city and southeastern territory.

Mr. Fuller states that he is highly pleased with his assignment as the bureau's southeastern representative and is glad to be back among his friends after having lived for the past four years in Evansville, Ind., and Chicago, where the main office of the bureau is located. He expects to bring his family to Atlanta and make his residence here shortly after the first of the year.

A. M. E. ZION CHURCH SEEKING EQUIPMENT

Funds for needed equipment, including Sunday school and industrial class rooms in the basement, are asked in an appeal sent out by the congregation of the new A. M. E. Zion church at Boulevard and Irwin street. This new $30,000 church for colored was first occupied on September 9, when the auditorium was so far completed as to be available for the Sunday services. Members of the church have since been bending every effort to secure the necessary equipment for the auditorium and the rest of the church plant.

A number of white friends have already contributed to the cause, it was stated Saturday, and the pastor, trustees and members are uniting in an appeal for further gifts. Contributions, it was said, could be sent either to the pastor, Rev. A. M. Goodwin, 164 Webster street, or to Peter F. Clarke, cashier of the American Savings bank at 140 Peachtree street.

High-Class Entertainment For Annual Meeting Today

Al Belle Isle, general chairman on arrangements for the entertainment features to be put on at the annual meeting and celebration of the Atlanta Automobile association, Friday evening, December 14, Atlanta Athletic club, says the entertainment this year will surpass anything the association has ever before attempted. Every effort is being made to secure the very best talent possible, and everyone who attends the celebration is assured of a delightful evening.

A brief business session will be held at 6:30 promptly, at which time the president will submit his annual report, and officers for 1929 will be elected. The nominating committee, consisting of the past presidents of the association, and headed this year by T. K. Johnson, chairman, after considering carefully recommendations made to them by the membership, has made up its slate which will be presented to the business session at the annual meeting to be voted upon.

Immediately following the business session, the members will sit down to an elaborate course dinner, accompanied by a high-class musical entertainment. Following the service of the dinner, the meeting will be turned over to Mr. Belle Isle, who will introduce many highly entertaining and unique features throughout the remainder of the evening.

The annual meeting this year will be given up largely to jollification and fun, with no set speeches of any kind. The association feels that at least once each year the members and their employees should be brought together in a social meeting, where they can become better acquainted and establish a closer feeling of good fellowship.

The annual report of President Alexander will cover such items as: Results of the 1928 automobile show, and plans for the 1929 show—benefits derived from association membership taken out during the year in the National Automobile Dealers' association—preparations for the 1929 session of the Georgia legislature—successful membership meetings staged—work of board of directors, standing and special committees—work of information bureau—matters of civic betterment—better roads and highways of Georgia—membership work—publicity—any many other features.

TWO MEN KILLED AS POLICE FOIL STORE HOLD-UP

Indianapolis, December 8.—(AP)—Two men were killed and two police officers slightly wounded when a squad of police frustrated an attempt to hold up a small dry goods store here early this morning. A third man was captured.

The men killed were Carl Kitrell, 34, and Otto Price, 40, both of Indianapolis. The officers were wounded slightly, each in the hand.

Police received advance information of the intended hold-up and hid in the store. They exchanged a number of shots at close range with the hold-up men.

Deserving of its record-breaking success . . . .

Value speaks more plainly and unmistakably in today's motor car market than it has ever spoken in the past.

There you can lay your finger directly on the main reason for the unprecedented, swift advance of the Chrysler-built De Soto Six to its present heights of popularity.

Entirely aside from the fact of its Chrysler origin, and on its own individual merits, the De Soto Six deserves every iota of the widespread preference which an eager public is conferring upon it.

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

Houses for Sale 84

SAY MAN—

WHAT would make your wife and children more thankful than for you to tell them you had bought a real home for them? WEST END Heights, corner of Lawton St. and Donnelly Ave., is a good place to buy. I am finishing some real attractive homes on Donnelly avenue and Ewing place. If you paid twice as much as I am asking you could not get better material nor workmanship. Best grade oak floors, built-in tub, copper screens, concrete basement, furnace—in fact a real home.
NOW, I will tell you the best part. Can be bought on the disappearing mortgage plan. No interest coupons to pay, no reduction in loans to be bothered with. You pay the same each month, no more than the amount the house would rent for. If you want a home you should come to see me.

THE GIST
OF THE WHOLE MATTER IS THIS: The SPECIALIST is the man of the hour. Everyone knows that the man who does one thing all the time, day in and day out, can, and DOES, do it easier, better, quicker and CHEAPER than anyone else. HOPKINS BUNGALOWS are built by mechanics who have been doing nothing else for twenty years. Every purchaser of a HOPKINS BUNGALOW gets the benefit of our twenty-five years' experience in building bungalows. During this time we have made a diligent study of designing and planning homes and of building materials. On top of that, our experience includes extended tours of inspection throughout the state of California, the home of the bungalow. Drive out this afternoon to 1087 Amsterdam Ave., N. E., two blocks east of Highland, and see the result of experience of which experts are made. Before you come, look at some homes that are priced at ten thousand dollars, and get the surprise of your life when you price ours. We can also convince you that our homes are more conveniently arranged, better constructed and contain better material throughout. And the terms are such that you simply can't LOSE. P. B. Hopkins & Son, Palmer Bldg., owners and builders.

Pi Delta Epsilon Meeting Concluded With Banquet

The 1928 convention of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity, which opened Thursday here as the guest of Emory university and George Tech chapters, closed Saturday night with a banquet at the Georgian Terrace hotel. Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech, was present and addressed the convention in place of Senator Walter F. George, who was unable to attend. At the final business session of the convention, held Saturday morning, it was voted to hold the 1929 convention at Pennsylvania State university. George Washington university, at Washington, D. C., made a strong bid for the convention, and University of Minnesota was in the running. The final vote of the convention was 34 for Penn State, 22 for George Washington, and four for Minnesota. University of Arizona placed a bid for the 1930 convention. The date for the 1929 convention was not set.

Patty Named.

Joseph C. Patty, of Greenville, Ohio, former grand treasurer of the fraternity, was unanimously elected president to succeed Professor George M. Sparks, of Georgia Tech. Mr. Patty is a graduate of both Massachusetts Institute of Technology and George Washington university, and now is in business in Greenville. He was not present at the Atlanta convention.

Other officers elected at the Saturday meeting were Dean H. G. Doyle, of George Washington university, who was reelected grand vice-president, and Roland S. Evans, a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan college, and now in business at Columbus, Ohio, who was named grand treasurer to succeed Patty. He had charge of the treasurer's duties in the absence of Mr. Patty at the convention. Grand Secretary Lobdell, of Massachusetts Tech, and Grand Editor McNeil will remain in their present positions, these offices being filled every two years.

"Scandal Sheets" Disfavored.

In the resolutions offered by the committee to the convention Saturday morning, it was suggested that the fraternity take official action expressing disfavor at college "razz" or "scandal sheets" such as are published in many colleges. The resolution was adopted, the convention stating the action due to the fact that Pi Delta Epsilon was founded to promote higher types of journalism.

The fraternity sponsored a sports luncheon Saturday noon at the Georgian Terrace, at which O. B. Keeler presided. Among those present were Ed Hamm and W. L. (Young) Stribling, along with several sports writers. The out-of-town delegates were guests of the convention at the Tech-Georgia gridiron classic Saturday afternoon.

The convention adjourned following the banquet Saturday evening. Representatives of around forty chapters were present for the three-day session.

Million Little To Couzens; Has "Too Much Money" Now

:: COLLEGES, CHURCHES TO GET NONE ::

BY KENNETH G. CRAWFORD, United Press Staff Correspondent.

(Copyright, 1928, by United Press.)

Washington, December 8.—James Couzens, millionaire senator from Michigan, confessed a conflict of emotions tonight over the receipt of a tax rebate from the United States treasury of almost $1,000,000.

He was elated at the victory the rebate represents over his enemy, Secretary of Treasury Mellon, but somewhat sad at the additional responsibility involved in this increase to his vast fortune.

"I have ten times as much money now as I should have or can use," he said. "I am not overjoyed about the money this rebate gives me. But I am pleased at this victory for American taxpayers."

Delivery of a check of $089,883.49 to Couzens' attorney in Detroit today was the result of a transaction dating back to 1919, when the senator paid several million dollars income tax on the increased value of his Ford Motor company stock between 1913 and 1919. The case was considered closed but in 1925, the treasury demanded $10,000,000 more, contending that the original stock valuation was not high enough.

Couzens charged that the case was reopened to punish him for criticisms of Mellon during a senatorial investigation of the internal revenue bureau and carried the case to the board of tax appeals.

The board not only upheld Couzens' contention that he was not indebted to the treasury for $10,000,000 more on the 1919 tax but rules that he had paid too much and was entitled to the almost $1,000,000 repaid today.

"I have far too much money," he said. "How am I to know what to do with it? How am I to select the worthy from the unworthy among the hundreds of requests I receive for philanthropies.

"I do not contribute to churches or colleges and that limits the field. I am interested in no church and I never attended a college. Consequently I know little about them and I leave their support to members and alumni. I feel justified in giving only to the causes with which I have first-hand knowledge.

"But even so I have managed to give away millions of dollars."

Couzens is a short, sturdily-built man, who can smile easily but fight strongly oin a legislative cause. Unlike many senators, he is not an orator—and realizes it. He makes speeches only as necessity demands.

He is one of the staunchest supporters in the senate of high income and inheritance taxes although they hit him harder than any other man in that body.

Chest Plans Xmas Program As Workers Seek Drive Quota

While a devoted group of workers kept in the field, seeking to complete the fund of $480,000 asked of the public by the Community Chest for support of Atlanta's welfare work in 1929, while efforts to the same end were being pressed by mail and telephone, the chest and its 39 societies began Saturday preparation of a program of practical helpfulness at Christmas time.

The monthly service reports of the Community Chest by Frank Miller, executive director, besides revealing that the 39 agencies served 17,485 individuals or families in October, included suggestions for valuable service by chest societies, particularly the Family Welfare society, in helping the distribution of Christmas charity among Atlanta's unfortunates.

These societies, with their knowledge of homes and quarters where need exists, and where happiness is least likely to come at Christmas time without thoughtfulness by the more fortunate, will perform in this connection one of the details of public service for which the chest and its units stand, Mr. Miller explained.

"A suggestion as to Christmas giving will be timely," he said, "coming from the Family Welfare society. A thoughtless giver may make Christmas a time of humiliation to those in need. Unwise giving may awaken cupidity and low desires. The sanctity of the home and of family life may be violated. Little children may receive their first impression, destructive of self-respect, of what it is to be dependent and the recipients of charity.

Christmas Remembrance.

"If we believe in the kind of charity that builds up character and establishes normal social relationships, when we make our Christmas gifts to the poor, let us remember:

"1. That Christmas, commemorating the birth of a child, belongs to the home, to the family, to the children. Secure the names of families you would remember from the social agency which already knows the need and can direct your gift in such a way that there will be no need of the humiliation of 'an investigation,' no duplication, no gift that does not fill a real want.

"2. That Christmas is the time for strengthening the ties between father, mother and children. It is natural and right that little children should look to their parents to provide Christmas. The social agency will help you to help some mother or father to provide Christmas for children who otherwise could not be made happy at this time. The mother, however poor, can protect the child who receives your gift through her, from the harmful realization, often first recognized at Christmas time, that he is different from other children, that he is one of 'the poor.' Let our Christmas gifts carry encouragement and the hope that spurs to success, not a recognition of weakness, of handicap and defeat.

Buy Lasting Gift.

"3. That to those destitute and in need of the essentials of life, the same money that provides the Christmas feast and trivial toys will buy something of lasting comfort and beauty for the barren home, will buy garments that while they give warmth and comfort to the body, may clothe the spirit with self-respect, with courage and the will to strive.

"If the Community Chest agencies can help you with your Christmas giving call Walnut 3211."

The explanation of this service was presented in Mr. Miller's report, it was explained, as involving the policy of "constructive helpfulness" which underlies all activities of the chest and its agencies, and on the basis of which the support of the public is being asked in the appeal which canvassers are making. Approximately $100,000 is yet needed to raise the minimum declared necessary for effective operation of all the societies in 1929, and without which there must result a curtailment of activities, with a certainty of unrelieved suffering in many quarters and a decrease in the program of character-building and human development, Mr. Miller said.

GRIDIRON CLUB TAKES CRACK AT DEMOCRATS

Washington, December 8.—(United News.)—Using as its main theme the recent presidential campaign, the Gridiron club "toasted" the nation's political leaders, including President Coolidge, at its annual dinner here tonight.

The "Battleship Maryland" bearing "President-elect Hoover" on a good will South American tour, with stowaway republican regulars aboard bent on seeing that the "pie" goes to the "old guard" was paraded by the club before the distinguished guests, which included cabinet members, a governor, ambassadors, senators and representatives.

Songs were sung of democratic wailings at losing the solid south and "Chairman Raskob," of the democratic national committee, in the guise of Hamlet, "The Melancholy Magnate," delivered a soliloquy on the "brown derby."

To emphasize the democratic defeat in the south the Gridiron singers, to the tune of "Massa's In the Cold, Cold Ground," sang:

"Twenty votes lost down in Texas.
"Twelve in Carolin'.
"Twelve are missing in Virginia.
"Florida is six behind.
(Chorus):
"Way down in Dixie,
"Hear dat mournful sound.
"All the democrats are weeping,
"Smith lies on the cold, cold ground."

Glass Sees Grant Better.

This bit of yodeling prompted Senator Carter Glass to remark:

"Gentlemen, the purpose of this lodge of sorrow is to find out what hit us. Grant was more magnanimous than Mr. Hoover; he left us our horses. Mr. Hoover took our shirts."

Clad solely in a barrel, Raskob ambled onto the stage and announced he was going south to have a whispered conference with Will Hays, expert on the subject of campaign deficits, the democrats finishing their campaign $1,300,000 in "the red."

Here the scene shifted to the deck of the battleship Maryland whereon were Senators Curtis, Moses, Brookhart and Watson, dressed as seamen, who, it was explained, had joined the crew "to keep an eye on Mr. Hoover."

Dr. Hubert Work was there dressed as a first mate and asked caustically, "What chance have the senators of going into the cabinet? None of you belong to the European relief squad or the food administration gang."

"That's what we are here for," Moses replied, "to put a little politics in Hoover efficiency and keep him regular."

The "Hoover board of engineers" was introduced and asked Senator Borah, who appeared as a candidate for secretary of state, whether he could coordinate his ideas with those of Mr. Hoover.

"They will coordinate so long as his ideas run in my direction," he replied.

The guests turned their attention to a member of the club who entered with an armful of books, announcing he had been sent from the white house to burn them after President Coolidge had looked over the election returns. The books were the president's private library copies of "Have Faith in Massachusetts."

A Christmas recitation on "Mr. Hoover's favorite theme, 'The American Home,'" was given. It follows in part:

"'Twas the night before Christmas when all through the house,
Not a creature was sleeping, not even a mouse.
The glasses were set on the mantle with care,
In hopes that the bootlegger soon would be there.
The children were dancing to KDKA
For six brand-new tubes had been purchased that day.
And mama with her diamonds and I with no trumps,
Were winning a hand from a couple of chumps.
When down in the street there arose such a clatter
The children all cried: 'What in hell is the matter?'"

After this, Vice President Dawes confided to Vice President-elect Curtis that "you're getting away to a flying start. 'Hell 'n Maria' was my line, but 'too damn dumb' will get you just as far."

Senator Heflin was referred to as the "strong, silent man from Alabama" and Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, as belonging to the "I told you so club."

President Coolidge made a speech at the close of the dinner but following the custom of "no reporters being present" his remarks were not reported.

Exclusive Isle of Undisturbed Quiet Is Florida Novelty

Miami Beach, Fla.—The world's smallest and most exclusive island—to which casual visitors are never admitted—nestles on the leeward shore of Miami Beach. It is Nautilus Island, adjacent to the Nautilus hotel, where those who wish to dwell in undisturbed quiet and still retain the conveniences of hotel service, spend the winter. At the shore-end of the narrow bridge which connects the 16 picturesque Spanish cottages with Miami Beach, is a watchman whose sole duty, both day and night, is to see that no curious person disturbs the exclusive peace of the smallest inhabitated island in tropical waters.

Farrell, Open Champ, Sets Golf Record On Miami Beach Links

Miami Beach, Fla.—A low-medal golf mark that will spur the top of the professional field for many years to come was set up last season by Johnnie Farrell, Quaker Ridge, present national open champion, when he won the first annual Miami Beach-La Gorce $15,000 open tournament from spirited competition with 274 strokes for the 72 holes of play. Ten strokes under par for the course, this record shattered all marks in the history of competitive golf fo four rounds of play.

Four Ohio Brothers Compose Polo Team

Miami Beach, Fla.—For the first time since the famous Bacon brothers many years ago rode the field together in a family quartet, four brothers compose a complete polo team in winter play at Miami Beach. The four polo horsemen are the sons of Harvey S. Firestone, Akron, Ohio, rubber tire manufacturer—Russell, Raymond, Leonard and Harvey S. Firestone, Jr.

Poisoned Carcass Of Deer Is Stolen; Radio Sounds Alarm

Minneapolis, December 8.—(AP)—A poisoned deer carcass, left in the brush near Stevens Point, Wis., as wolf bait, has disappeared. Game wardens, believing it to have been stolen for food, radiocast warnings last night.

Victoria, British Columbia.—A tri-city service between Seattle, Victoria and Vancouver, to start in April, is announced by C. V. Eakins, president of the Union Air Lines, Seattle. The service will be operated by a subsidiary company, the two planes in use having a capacity of 16 passengers each.

FIRM RENTAL MARKET IN STORES, HOMES, '28 SURVEY SHOWS

SITUATION STILL BELOW NORMAL FOR APARTMENTS

Outstanding aspects of the property rental market in Atlanta, as set forth in a survey by the Atlanta real estate board just made public, indicate firmer demand in the home and business property rental field, while apartment house vacancies continue at a rate above normal. Low rentals, with the trend pointing upward, is another feature of the market revealed by the survey.

Report of findings from a survey comparing the rental situation of today with that of this time last year in apartments, residences, business stores and warehouse space was drawn from questionnaires sent to members and from other sources of information. A summary of the report follows:

"The apartments situation in Atlanta today is the same as it was at this date in 1927. The average vacancy is 14 per cent; this is the same vacancy that existed in 1927. As 10 per cent is considered normal, the vacancy now is 4 per cent over normal. The average vacancy in 1926 as of this date was 5 per cent, making the present vacancy 9 per cent worse than was shown in 1926.

"Apartment rents are reported as being down from 1927 but, at present, rates are steady with indications of continuing firm for the balance of this renting season. The types of vacancy are larger units and units in apartments that do not have a favorable location.

"The present demand for apartments is slow. This is accounted for by the fact that the tenants are insufficient in number to fill the space, which is evidence that the apartment needs of this city are more than ample. This shows an oversupply.

Surplus Apartments.

"Overbuilding of apartments in Atlanta is evident, and this alone is reason for the present situation. Buildings constructed during the past year have been more than excessive, and unless some remedy is offered the net income from apartment buildings will continue to decrease. It is recommended that construction of apartments be stopped, and that when they are built that they be financed on a sounder basis.

"It is evident that location of apartments is playing a great part in the occupancy percentage. Fewer vacancies are found in apartments well located than in those that do not enjoy this advantage. It is felt that, with the present rental of apartments in Atlanta, when buildings have a 10 per cent vacancy, and over, that this vacancy goes a long way in consuming the owner's profit.

Homes, Stores Good.

"The present rental demand for homes is reported as being slightly better than that of this time in 1927. It is shown that most any residence in a good location and in good condition can be rented without much delay. The rents on residences are reported a little off from those of 1927. At present the construction of homes is somewhat off, and it is felt that this will have a tendency to improve the condition. At the same time, the discontinuing of building for awhile would be a sure cure.

"The rental demand for business locations is reported as being slightly better than in 1927. The demand for downtown and close-in business units is firm and, with proper rents, tenants can be secured.

"The rental demand for community center business stores is somewhat better—that is in the good community developments—but there is reported an excess of business units for rent at places where construction has taken place without proper consideration as to the purchasing power in the area to be served by the units constructed.

Zoning Law Aids.

"Adoption of the zoning law at the last general election will help this situation and, when the new city zoning ordinance is adopted and put into effect, improvement should be registered.

"Demand for warehouse space is about the same as in 1927, showing a slight weakness. This is brought about by over-building. The rents are reported as being fair.

"From the above data, which is compared with the report of 1927, it is evident that the renting situation is about the same. No special increase is shown for any class of renting property. It is felt that the condition of rents is more staple and that they are gradually seeking the normal level.

"A factor that would help the renting market in all classes is elimination of speculative building. It is realized that in construction a large number of different interests are involved which make it hard to control, but at the same time, if construction would stop for 12 months a big improvement would be seen as to vacancies and rental income on all classes of property.

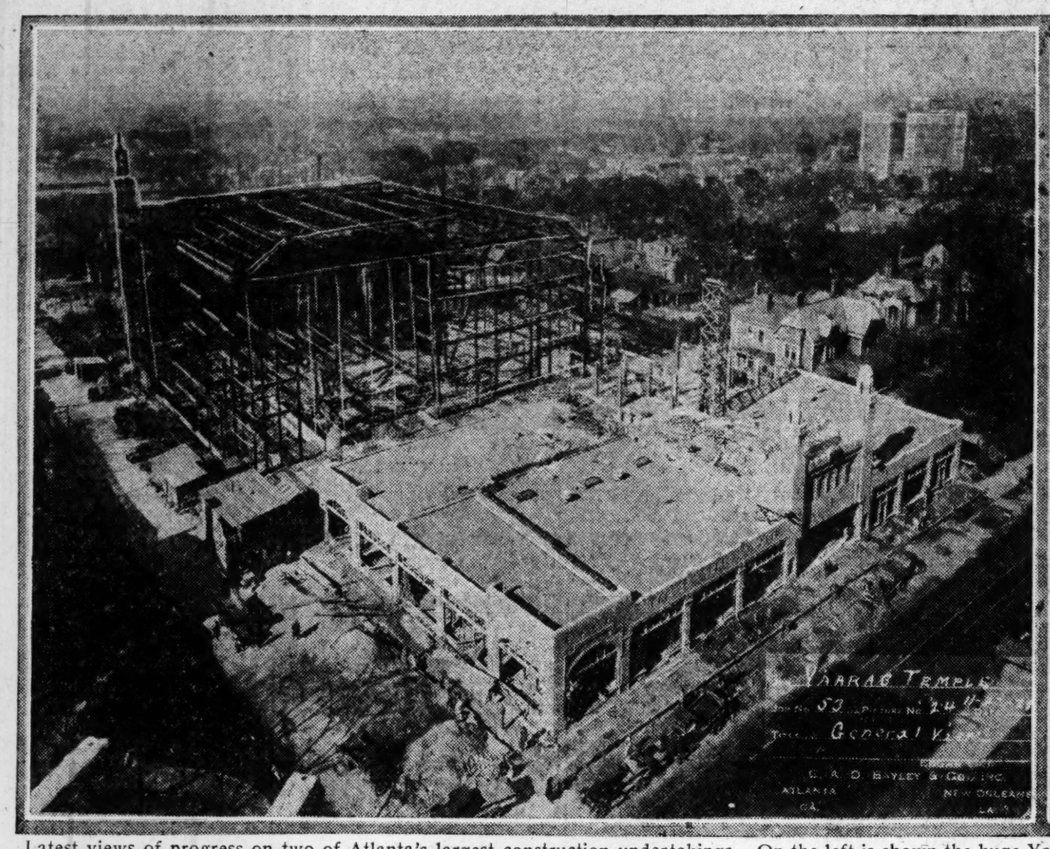
"It is recommended that property for rent on today's market be kept in good condition by the owner and offered to the tenant at a rate that will make his business profitable, thereby assuring the owner of a continuous income from the property rented.

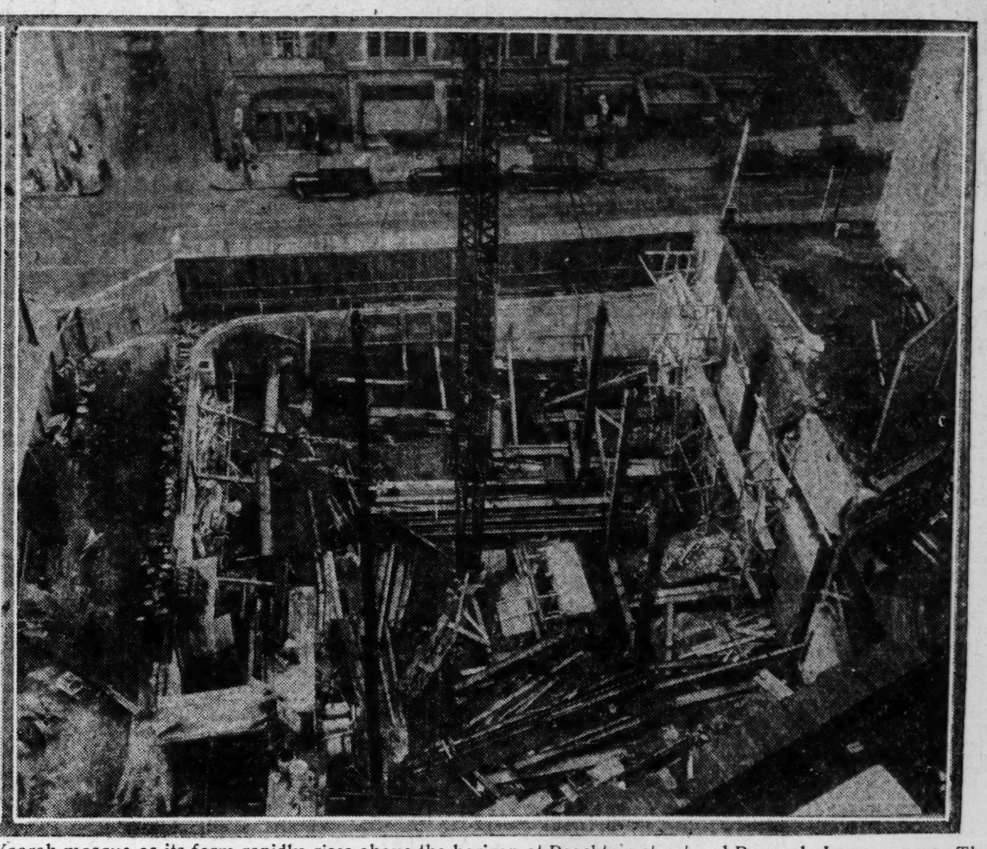
SUIT IS FILED TO BAR HOOVER FROM OFFICE

Cleveland, December 8.—(AP)—Suit to prevent Herbert Hoover from taking office as president was filed in federal court here today by Gustave F. Ebding, who contends Hoover has been a resident of the United States only since 1919.

Ebding, who has written works attempting to prove that the world is not a globe, told secret service men who questioned him that "patriotism and conscience" moved him to file the suit. Specifically he asks that Vice President Dawes be restrained from certifying to the senate the electoral vote cast for Hoover.

Progress on Beautiful Mosque of Mysttic Shrine and Rhodes-Haverty Skyscrapper Continues At Rapid Race; Magnitude of Atlanta's Huge Building Projects Attract Wide Attention





Latest views of progress on two of Atlanta's largest construction undertakings. On the left is shown the huge Yaarab mosque as its form rapidly rises above the horizon at Peachtree street and Ponce de Leon avenue. The front portion, containing eleven stores, practically all of which are leased, is seen nearly completed. Shrine quarters are expected to be ready for occupancy early in summer, while the main auditorium (note massive steel substructure in rear) shown in rear will be ready to open next September, according to Joseph S. Shaw, supervising engineer. Pictured on the left is a scene of activity at the Peachtree and James streets corner, site of the 22-story Rhodes-Haverty building. Concrete foundations and first steel girders observed here indicate progress on the city's latest and tallest office building undertaking.

REALTORS TO PROBE FARM LAND FUTURE

Meeting at Birmingham To Attract National Experts; Study Revival.

What will be the work of the future for the dealer in farm lands? That is the question which the National Association of Real Estate Boards will have before it at a special conference to be held by its farm lands division in Birmingham, Ala., in connection with the annual business meeting of the association, January 23, 24 and 25.

George S. Wehrwein, professor of agricultural economics at the University of Wisconsin, will address the division on the future work of the farm land realtor.

Professor Wehrwein has recently made a study of land settlement in northern Wisconsin and in Texas, examining in detail the motives which bring families to the land and their history as settlers. As a member of the staff of the institute of land economics and public utilities, Northwestern university, he earlier made an important study of farm tenancy, the study being an examination in detail of the actual farm ownership in selected counties of Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa. The study brought out both the type of tenure and the degree to which farming by the owner is being superseded by farming by a tenant.

The study went into the question of how far the farm laborer becomes a farm tenant and how far the farm tenant becomes a farm owner.

An analysis of the present demand for land will be brought before the division at the Birmingham meeting by Arthur J. Mertzke, of Chicago. Mr. Mertzke, who is the head of the association's department of research and education, will give the results of an investigation of actual recent farm sales, bringing out what the sales indicate as to who is buying farm land at the present time, and what price tendencies are.

Suggested standard forms for the appraisal of farm land will be brought before the division by C. B. Jennett, of Chicago, chairman of a committee appointed to work out such forms.

The proposed standard forms are expected to be a pronounced influence for the more accurate valuation of farm properties.

Joseph E. Johnson, of Champaign, Ill. farm manager for the Citizens State bank, Champaign, will address the division on "What I Would Do If I Were a Farm Land Realtor."

A. John Berge, of Chicago, sales councillor for the national association, will illustrate the use which farm land dealers can make of charts, maps and other visual aids in bringing before prospective buyers the advantages of a given property.

Harvey Rathbone, Lincoln, Neb., chairman-elect of the division, will forecast the work which it expects to undertake.

J. E. Miller, Geneva, Ohio, chairman of the division for the present year, will outline the work accomplished by the division in 1928.

U. S. DOMINATES IN TOY MAKING

Washington, December 8.—(United News.)—An American note will dominate the toys on sale during the Christmas season this year, the National Geographic society reports.

Exhibits of toys by old world designers at the recent Leipzig fair showed an amazing number of devices with a strong American influence.

Numerous toy automobiles in American styles, and copies of various American mechanical devices featured the toy fair. Many familiar figures from the comic strips were recognized by Americans attending the exhibition.

"The newest mechanical animals seem more life-like than ever before," says the Geographic. "The mechanical lion, for example, retreats, crouches, and then springs forward, roaring. The peacock pridefully struts about extending and closing his tail. Mechanical fish swim with an undulating motion.

"Doll designing has become a fine art, and excellent talent, including famous sculptors, is engaged in this work. The most novel of the new dolls is the 'synthetic' type. Various parts are detachable and may be substituted by parts of a different color or shape—heads, arms, legs, wigs, etc. Doll wardrobes are of bewildering variety, including complete outfits for morning wear, the street, evening wear, and night wear.

"Much space at the toy fair was taken up with ornaments for Christmas trees. Many of the ornaments are factory made, but the familiar colored balls and tinsel designs are made for the most part in the kitchens of German farm houses. The handicraft, like wood-carving, has been handed down from generation to generation, and the workers are singularly expert.

LATIN AMERICAN PACT UP MONDAY

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—Assembling for one of the most important conferences called since Pan-Americanism was first broached delegates from 19 Latin-American republics and the United States completed plans today to start negotiations Monday to conclude a multi-lateral covenant of arbitration and conciliation designed to assure permanent peace in the western hemisphere.

Responding to a resolution adopted at the Havana Pan-American congress last February, all American republics but Argentina have designated representatives in the hope of establishing firmly the principle of compulsory arbitration for the peaceful settlement of international disputes and to provide means for smoothing over international quarrels for which no machinery now exists.

Argentina, although a signatory of the Havana resolution, declined at the last minute to send delegates to the forthcoming gathering.

The objectives of the conference will be two. The first will be to reduce to as few as possible the types of international disputes which all participating countries do not feel ready to have arbitrated, and to stipulate how all others would come under such a system of adjudication.

The second will be the establishment of machinery whereby any dispute which should defy solution by any other means would be subjected to the review of an impartial international commission. Pending final decision by the commission the disputants would be obliged to refrain for one year from any warlike activities, thus providing a "cooling off" period.

GIL DEFIES MEXICO LABOR FEDERATION

Mexico City, December 8.—(AP)—The political situation created by the attitude of the Mexican federation of labor toward the administration of President Portes Gil was called "unimportant and transitory" by the chief executive today. He gave this characterization to a gathering of foreign newspaper correspondents, telling them that C. R. O. M., as the federation is popularly known, represented only a minority of the Mexican proletariat with its strength concentrated in Mexico City.

Luis N. Morones, leader of C. R. O. M., was making a drastic appeal for justice, while the president was belittling his following. He spoke at the final session of the federation convention just after he had been named head of a new directing committee of the organization.

The nation has nothing to fear from C. R. O. M. as it seeks only respect for the worker's movement and does not desire violence, he declared. He reiterated that efforts were being made to disrupt the federation and dramatically added:

"Morones will die at his post, rather than abdicate."

The president and Aurelio Manrique, agrarian leader, were assailed by numerous speakers at the convention. Manrique was leader of the attack on Morones in the chamber of deputies. He had also criticized former President Calles for the latter's appearance at the labor convention. Since then Senor Calles has expressed disapproval of the federation's order that all its members give up government posts. He also has resigned as chairman of a new political movement which was designed to unite the revolutionary elements of Mexico into one cohesive party.

President Portes Gil accused C. R. O. M. of trying to split the revolutionary party. He said this attempt had failed largely because of Senor Calles' action in repudiation of it.

C. F. PALMER HEADS NATIONAL COMMITTEE

Atlantan Chosen by National Association of Building Owners.

The personnel of the constitutional commission of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, created at the Detroit convention for the purpose of revising constitution and by-laws of the association, has been announced by President Paul Robertson, of Indianapolis, for the ensuing year.

The commission, by the action of the last convention in St. Louis has been increased from five to seven members. Charles F. Palmer, of Atlanta, who served last year as chairman of the commission which developd the present constitution of the national association, has been appointed co-chairman with J. Clydesdale Cushman, of New York. Other members are Andrew Steers, Seattle; Earle Shultz, Chicago; Tarrant P. King, Boston, and E. Clarence Holmes, of San Francisco. One more member of the commission remains to be named and the appointment of the seventh member will be announced by President Robertson in the very near future.

Present plans call for a meeting of the commission in Chicago Wednesday, January 23, immediately preceding the meeting of the presidents' conference and the board of governors, January 24, 25 and 26. This will permit the immediate consideration of any recommendations of the constitutional commission to be passed on to the general membership at the 22d annual convention to be held in Montreal, Quebec, June 10-14.

"ADVICE" BUREAU PLANNED TO AID SUBDIVISION MEN

A consultation bureau for subdivision projects will be set up by the National Association of Real Estate boards through its home builders and subdividers' division.

The bureau is to be a machinery through which a subdivider, at the time he is planning a subdivision project, may get the advice of a group of the ablest men in his own business to pass upon the details of a subdivision project in its formative stage. In examining the project in detail the group, appointed by the association's home builders and subdividers' division project in its formative stage. In examining the project in detail the group, appointed by the association's home builders and subdividers' division from among its membership, would have the advice of competent consultants on problems of city planning, engineering and law. It would give the developer whatever suggestions it found advisable for the better planning or plotting of the subdivision, for better financial set-up, or for better sales plan, or any other suggestion that experience indicates would better the project as a piece of sound city building.

PLAN TO CONTROL UNSIGHTLY SIGN BOARD DISPLAYS

Question of what should be done to protect scenic values and residential real estate values against indiscriminate use of the billboards, and indiscriminate placarding of trees and telegraph posts, has become so acute that a national conference on the subject is projected, to be held in connection with the next annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate boards, according to a plan outlined at a recent meeting of the association's special committee appointed to study the subject of control of outdoor advertising.

The convention will be held in Boston in June, 1929.

Outdoor advertising interests, which, through a special committee of the Outdoor Advertising Association of America, Inc., have been working closely with the National Association of Real Estate Boards in a joint study of the question, will be invited to take part in the projected conference.

Advertising signs have an important and legitimate place in modern business, but the uncontrolled use of such signs in recent years has come to injure to a great extent the investment which the public has made in its highways, by reason of marring the pleasure of the view, which is a public possession, it is pointed out.

Growing criticism against luncheon stands, filling stations, and so forth of the "shack" type has also been brought to the attention of the special committee of the national association which has been studying the problem of outdoor advertising control.

The committee, which has been engaged in drafting a suggested plan for public control of billboard use, so as to conserve legitimate use and cut off use which is opposed to the general public interest, has been working jointly on the subject with a special committee representing the Outdoor Association of America, Inc.

CONSTITUTION DEMONSTRATION HOMES SHATTER ALL ATTENDANCE RECORDS; MODEL HOME SALE ANNOUNCED

JUNIOR CHAMBER CHIEF, M'CUBBIN LAUDMODELHOMES

Point Advantage of Visiting Structures in Order To Raise Standard of Home-Building Here.

Further proof of the fact that The Constitution's master model home and model home in the Morningside section are developing a consciousness among home-builders and the public generally of the value of building for real permanence, is evidenced by additional letters of praise received by this paper.

During the past week the mayor of Atlanta, the president of the Atlanta Woman's club, the builder of the homes and the local leader of the Better Homes in America movement have congratulated The Constitution on the high-type of the structures and urged it to continue the good work of raising home-building standards here.

The new statements of congratulation come from N. Baxter Maddox, chairman of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and John C. McCubbin, chairman of the local committee representing the membership of the Home Owners' Institute of America, under whose auspices the homes are presented.

Maddox's Leader.

On behalf of the junior chamber, an organization deeply interested in all civic and improvement movements, Mr. Maddox writes:

"Editor Constitution: I would like to take this opportunity to express, on behalf of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, their congratulations to The Atlanta Constitution for its interest in raising the standard of home-building in Atlanta.

"Your Master Model home at 705 Morningside drive, which is built completely in accordance with the specifications of the Home Owners' Institute of America, is without a doubt the finest example of home-building that Atlanta has seen in many years. The Model Home on Rock Springs road is complete in every respect and has caused much enthusiastic comment on the part of those who have visited it.

"It must be very gratifying to you and your associates to see the keen interest the people of Atlanta have taken in your Model Homes. Again congratulating you and assuring you that Atlanta appreciates your good work.

"N. B. MADDOX, President.
"December 7, 1928."

Value of Demonstration.

In addition to giving The Constitution credit for sponsoring actively an important step toward improvement of Atlanta home life, Mr. McCubbin in his letter points out the value of the home demonstration to the public, generally. His letter follows:

"Editor Constitution: As chairman of local committee representing national manufacturers who were members of Home Institute, Inc., I have naturally been interested in Master Model home sponsored by your paper.

"It is a pleasure to know the people of Atlanta have shown their appreciation of the opportunity to inspect a Master Model home. The record of attendance has proven this.

"Considering the small number of Master Model homes built under supervision of Home Institute, Inc., in the United States during 1928, Atlanta was fortunate in being selected as one of the locations. Also, that Atlanta architect and builder, also sub-contractors had the opportunity of constructing a home designed and built that would give a purchaser full value for money spent.

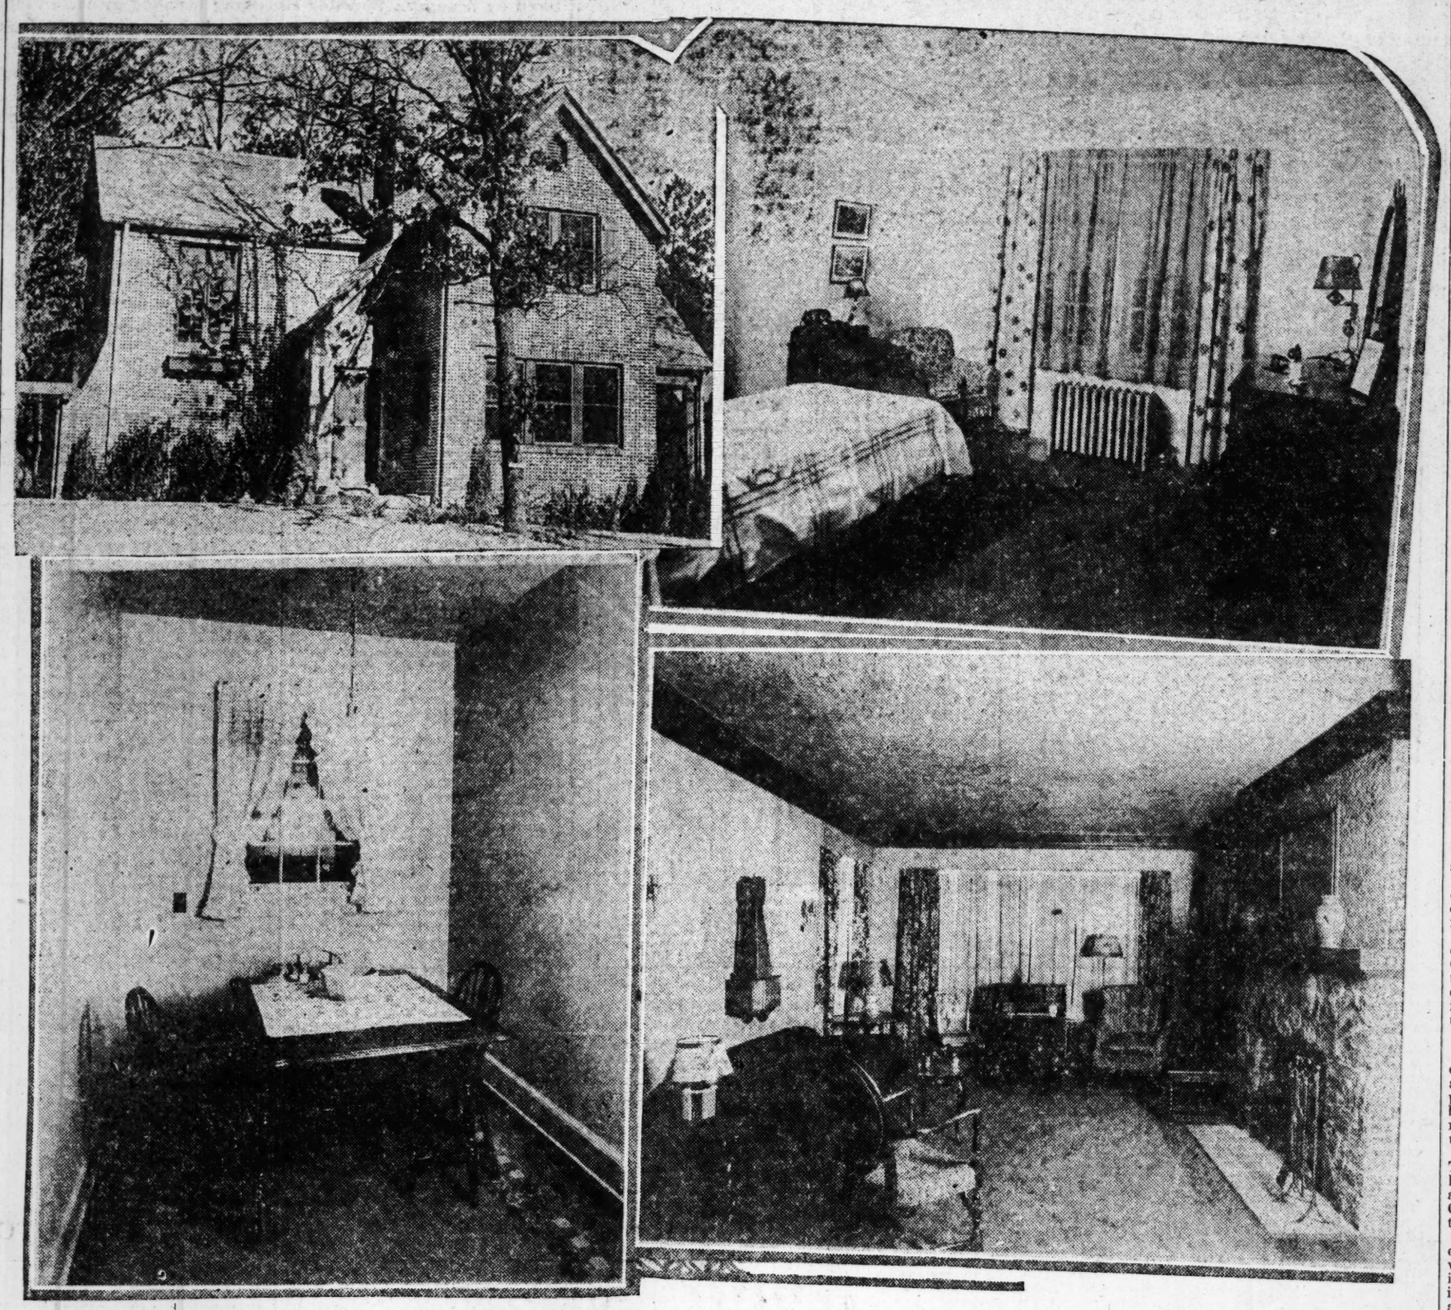
"I have received many favorable compliments from people connected with the building industry on the construction and workmanship, as well as the idea of presenting a Master Model home to prospective home owners of this community. The publication given this work by your paper has spread further than the city of Atlanta. I am of the opinion it will do a great deal towards the improvement in home building in other sections.

"JOHN C. McCUBBIN.
"December 7, 1928."

Mrs. C. H. Sanders.

Coleman, Ga., December 8.—(AP)—Mrs. C. H. Sanders died at her home near here yesterday of influenza, while her entire family, her husband and nine children are confined to their beds with the disease.

Constitution's Model Home Attracts Purchaser During Inspection Period



Views of The Constitution's Model Home at 1643 Rock Springs road, sale of which has been announced to Horace L. Tutwiler, manager of the local advertising staff of The Constitution. Above at left, an exterior view of the demonstration home. Upper right, the boy's room. Lower left, the cozy breakfast room, and lower right, the charming and restful living room.

Public Is Invited To Pay Call On Two Ideal Dwellings Today; 60,000 Attendance Mark Is Set

Horace L. Tutwiler, Constitution Advertising Official, Purchases Home on Rock Springs Road—Interest Continues Keen in Educational Movement.

The Constitution's two demonstration homes in the beautiful Morningside home community will swing into their third inspection Sunday today with clear weather promised and with every prospect of breaking their own records for attendance.

Officials in charge of the homes estimate that so far 60,000 men and women have viewed the master model home at 705 Morningside drive and the model home at 1643 Rock Springs road, which figure is far in excess of any established by any similar educational home display here for the period of time involved.

The homes will remain open until December 23, and all who are aiding The Constitution in sponsoring them are confident that they will have virtually doubled the attendance mark of any home opened to the public for inspection in the history of the city and section.

Open from 2 to 10 Today.

Today the homes will open at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and remain on display until 10 o'clock to tonight. The public is issued a cordial invitation to visit them and ask questions concerning their many features of construction and appointment new and needed in this section.

The model home at 1643 Rock Springs road has been sold to Horace L. Tutwiler, manager of the local advertising staff of The Constitution, it was announced Saturday by Thomas K. Windham, builder of both homes. Mr. Tutwiler was charmed with the Rock Springs road structure and expressed delight at securing for himself and his family so charming and well-built a home. Mr. Tutwiler will move into the home about the first of next year.

The two ideal dwellings are designed as a concrete demonstration of the advantage of building homes not only for a maximum of beauty and comfort but also for permanence and repair-free service.

The master model home is built according to specifications of the Home Owners' Institute of America and is the only structure of its kind in the city and section. The Home Owners' institute specifications call for the use of many highly-advanced features.

Firms Aid Movement.

A glance at the list of firms cooperating in the building of the homes and the materials which they supplied will convince the reader that both are far superior to the average run of Atlanta homes in their particular class.

Thomas K. Windham, head of Thomas K. Windham, Inc., built both homes. R. Kennon Perry, prominent architect, with offices in the Wynne-Claughton building, designed the master model home.

Atlanta stores, under direction of Katherine Daley and Lyda Nash, well known decorators, have made the interior of both homes beautiful and in keeping with the best taste as it is applied to modern appointments. A long list of Atlanta stores cooperated whole-heartedly with the decorators. From their stocks came the magnificent furniture, objects of art, musical instruments, electrical appliances and other articles to be seen in the dwellings.

The homes are built and furnished with an eye to meeting the income of the type of families which would be expected to live in them. The ambition of the decorators was to secure exactly the right thing and place it in exactly the right place, their work resulting in a harmony that created the atmosphere of real homes.

Maid services is available to all women visitors, and all questions concerning the homes are readily answered. Week-day hours for visiting are from 2 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon. On Sundays the homes are open from 2 to 10 o'clock tonight.

BUILDERS APPROVE CASEMENTS OF STEEL

The great popularity of steel casement windows for homes and apartments is welcomed by all progressive home-builders.

Truscon steel casements, used in the Master Model Home are completely assembled in the factory and require no fitting of sash to frame on the job. Hardware of improved design is furnished with the casements. The saving in field labor speeds up the work and enables quicker completion of the job.

Installation of Truscon casements is simple. Due to efficient manufacture, their cost installed compares favorably with wood windows.

Home-owners are familiar with the many advantages of Truscon steel casements; the charm and distinction they give to the home; the full opening that doubles the amount of fresh air; the perfect setting for drapes and curtains; their ease of operation under all weather conditions; their superior design and workmanship; their permanence and fireproofness.

Truscon steel casements are carried in stock for immediate delivery by all Truscon warehouses throughout the country and by dealers everywhere. The Atlanta office of the Truscon Steel company is at 705 Wynne-Claughton building.

COPPER GUTTERING LONG ON ENDURANCE

Gutters and rain pipes—the conveyors of water from the roof—should be made of copper to meet modern and advanced building requirements. Rain water, concentrating in gutters and rushing in flood volume to downspouts, severely tests rust-weakened metal. That is why gutters and rain pipes of iron last only five to eight years, while those made of 16-ounce copper wear a lifetime, repaying the slightly higher first cost many times over.

The same is true of flashings—strips of metal used to weatherproof the roof wherever it comes in contact with chimneys, dormer windows or other projections. It is most important that the metal used be copper because poor flashings will soon rust, admitting water to rot the woodwork and perhaps to cause considerable damage to the interior of the house.

Aside from their permanence, gutters, rain pipes and flashings of copper actually save an average of $24 a year, year after year, because once installed they require no further attention. Copper need never be painted, but if corrodible metal is used it must be painted at regular intervals to delay the action of rust. This cost is not always considered when a house is being built. Yet the cost of repainting corrodible metal work will in a few years bring the price of the copper material as high if not higher than that of everlasting copper, which requires no attention whatsoever. Copper guttering is used on The Constitution's Master Model home.

MASTER MODEL HOME HOT WATER PLENTIFUL

A simply constructed apparatus know as the Excelso water heater, manufactured by the Excelso Products corporation, a subsidiary of the American Radiator company, is being widely used as an auxiliary to a steam-heating plant for the supplying of hot water for house use.

The Excelso hot water heater consists of a cast iron shell open at one end. Within the shell there is a heavy copper coil heating element installed without the use of packing. This apparatus is attached to the steam boiler just below the water line, with the two openings from the cylinder—one as an inlet and one as an outlet, both tapped to the steam boiler in such a way that the water in the boiler when heated circulates through the shell. The copper coil also has two openings and is attached to pipes leading to the inlet and outlet of the hot water supply boiler.

When the water in the boiler is heated to boiling point (212 degrees F.), the copper tube in the Excelso is immersed in water heated at 212 degree. The action of the water in the boiler is similar to the action of any ordinary fire-back range heater. The hot water is circulated through the hot water supply tank and is heated to a degree ranging from 150 degrees to 190 degrees. This equipment is easily installed and at a comparatively small cost in comparison to other hot water supply equipment.

The Atlanta Constitution Model Home hot water system is equipped in this manner and persons interested in seeing this equipment can be accommodated when they visit the home. This heating arrangement, of course, is only used in the winter time when the steam plant is in operation. An automatic gas water heater, also manufactured by the American Radiator company and a part of the equipment in the Model Home, is for use in the summer time.

WORKING OF ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR TOLD

How can electricity make both heat and cold is the question often asked of refrigerator men. With the advent of electric refrigeration the public has been educated to the proper preservation of foods. An unusual interest in the process of refrigeration has resulted.

According to officials of the Alexander-Seewald company, local distributor of General Electric refrigerators, the process of cooling with electricity can be likened to emptying a tub of water with a sponge. By immersing a sponge in water, allowing it to absorb as much water as it can hold and then squeezing it out, a tub of water can be emptied. Heat is removed from the refrigerator and carried outside by electricity in much the same way. In the General Electric refrigerator, the refrigerant absorbs the heat within the refrigerator and is then carried to the coils on the top where the heat is dissipated into the room. This disproves the popular theory that an electric refrigerator is cooled by the refrigerant giving off cold waves.

"Electric refrigeration is a new development in the industry, but it has taken the General Electric company 15 years to perfect the General Electric refrigerator, Alexander-Seewald officials state. "Many models were constructed and tested during this period of development as it is the policy of the General Electric company that a product must be perfect before offering it to the public."

The General Electric refrigerator is revolutionary because of its simple construction. It has neither belts, fans, pipes, drains, or stuffing box. The moving parts are hermetically sealed and none whatever are exposed. The woman of the house need not trouble about oiling the refrigerator at regular intervals. A permanent supply is sealed within the unit. And it takes only a few minutes to install, merely lowering the entire unit into the top of the box and plugging it into into a convenient outlet. The machine starts and she need never think o fit again, that is, insofar as the mechanism is concerned. It will make itself conspicuous only as a modern, attractive piece of furniture which not only keeps milk and vegetables fit for the table, but also makes a pleasing variety of frozen desserts available for entertaining.

Architect Helps Owner to Obtain Best Home Value

His Knowledge Invaluable at Each Step in Planning and Building of House.

BY ARTHUR BATES LINCOLN,
Registered Architect.

The decision to build a house is a most important step in the life of every family. It is not feasible to build cheaply today, nor does the wise home builder care to do so. In an investment involving the expenditure of several thousand dollars of savings, and the acquiring of obligations for a mortgage loan of considerably more, the best value is not the cheapest price, but the lowest price with the use of durable materials. But even the use of the best materials may prove an unsuccessful venture if the house upon completion proves to be awkwardly planned.

The home owner should swell with pride as he points out the house he has built for his family. If the design does not win the admiration of the observer again it is a failure. Nor is it possible to avoid disaster by closely copying a house built 20 years ago. It would be as logical to insist upon a 1915 model when buying a new car. To obtain the best value for the money to be expended you should have an architect. It is but natural that a man who has trained his thought and hand for years should be best equipped to guide you to the most successful solution of your home-building problems.

Architects' Opinions Impartial.

Your architect is not a real estate salesman. Therefore, he will often give you a more impartial opinion regarding the possibilities or disadvantages of a site or sites, the purchase of which you may be considering, than a salesman. If you have already determined upon the style of home which you want, by all means heed your architect's advice as to the type of plot most desirable.

You may have drafted one or many floor plans along lines suggested by designs appearing on this page and elsewhere; your sketches will be of great help to the architect, outlining in concrete form the size and number of rooms you want. He will soon have a compact and economical plan for your approval, with the important details incorporated therein. Some ideas you hold may be impractical. This is the time to settle these, once and for all. A house crammed full of more or less good ideas will leave very little room for the family.

With plans well started, the important matter of specifications will occupy your attention. At this stage of your building venture your architect will prove an invaluable counselor. Specifications are highly technical, but they determine not only the materials to be built into your home but also, and more important, the methods to be used in building them in. For this reason it is important that specifications be written by an experienced architect.

With the plans and specifications complete, you are ready to secure estimates of cost. The architect will want four or five bids and will usually know several builders who can be depended upon to build the type of house desired. During the ten days required by the bidders to make up their estimates the owner will have an opportunity to review plans and specifications to make sure nothing has been omitted.

The receipt of the estimates is always a critical period. So often bids come in high, even with conservative planning, that elimination and change are necessary to bring the cost down. With a satisfactory bid and builder finally approved, contracts can be signed. Shall the builder be bonded? It is not usual on small house work, but conditions on each job should determine the proper procedure. Here again architectural service aids you.

With construction started you begin to see concrete results of your weeks and months of discussion and planning. No mater how complete the plans and specifications, there will still be countless details to be discussed and many decisions to be rendered. There will be times during the months of construction when the builder or a sub-contractor will present problems requiring immediate decision. The architect, taking into consideration all correlated factors, will render decisions in the best interests of architecture. Without architectural counsel the owner would delay construction while trying to decide from his inexperience what should be done, finally in desperation telling the builder to do what he thinks best.

Steel Casements Practical For All Types of Windows

Steel casement windows are not only beautiful from the architectural standpoint but they are also practical for any building. They may be procured in combination units completely assembled at the factory. Single units of various sizes, together with rectangular and semi-circular transoms, provide for all desired window openings.

Steel casements are quickly and easily installed in any type of wall construction usually at a saving of labor and time in the field. A priming coat of paint applied at the factory covers every part of the metal, giving it protection

Developer Most Important Realty Factor for Homes

Real estate is a business of many complications and very close specialization. Workers concerned with real estate activities divide themselves into four major groups: developers, who improve acreage and sell it in home sites; operators, who build homes for sale; brokers, whose field is the resale of properties, and agents, who manage renting properties.

The real estate developer is the man or the organization which takes over raw acreage, or farm land, for development and allotment purposes, lays it out, improves it, cuts it up, and markets it as home sites. After the pioneer, who blazes the trail, pulls the stumps and redeems the land from the wilds of nature, the developer lays the foundation for all subsequent real estate activities.

Plaster Reinforced With Steel

If you could look into the heart of the plastering in the Atlanta Master Model Home, you would find there a mat of steel firmly embedded in the plaster. This steel reinforcing is metal lath, the modern shrink-proof, warp-proof, fire-safe plaster base which prevents plaster cracks, lath streaks and stains.

Don't build or buy until you have examined the beautiful plaster in the Model Home and obtained the free booklet from the hostess. When you have gone over the evidence, you will agree that "plastering is one of the most important home contracts and that the only modern specification is Better plastering on Metal Lath"

Six-Room English House Designed for 40-Foot Plot

Built at Englewood, N. J., Plan Featured Today Has Well Located Starway, Large Living Room, Much Closet Space.

BY L. PORTER MOORE,
President, Home Owners Institute, Inc.

Here is a small dwelling with a distinctive exterior following English architectural lines that has six rooms, bath, sun room, breakfast alcove and garage, designed for a forty-foot plot, that, after construction, has been found a thoroughly practical and entirely comfortable home. Such tested designs are uncommon. This home in Englewood, N. J., was designed by W. H. Beardslee, who is in charge of residential design in the offices of B. Spencer Newman, registered architect, of Hackensack, N. J. The house contains 24,500 cubic feet, and is offered as plan No. 339-S.

Portland cement stucco with wide brown-stained siding and rigid asbestos shingles have been used for the exterior, with common brick chimney, steel casement windows for the sun room and forged iron hardware in English design. Slate floors for the entry and hearth.

Due to the location of the stairs one has access to the second floor from the kitchen without having to pass through other rooms, a feature that has several advantages. A pleasantly large living room with well placed fireplace and sun room of good size are points about the first floor plan that are worth noting.

Overhang Increases Space.

On the second floor there are three good bedrooms, a roomy bath and six closets. Additional space is gained for the bedrooms by an overhang of the second story on the front of the house which is not evident, due to exterior design.

If the builder of this design gives careful thought to selection of hardware and lighting fixtures, and makes suitable allowance in his budget for these items, the appearance of the finished house will repay him, for both hardware and fixtures may be purchased that harmonize with the architecture of the house. It is attention given to such details that make a home out of the ordinary and pleasing, even if it is no more costly than neighboring dwellings.

An outline of the specifications recommended for the enduring construction of this plan is as follows:

Masonry—Concrete footings under all walls, as shown on drawings. All foundation walls to be of poured concrete or concrete block made with Portland cement. Concrete to be mixed with waterproofing compound. Foundation walls may be of common brick, laid in one-to-three Portland cement mortar, at owner's option. Chimney of common brick; all flues lined. Fireplace selected brick; provide ash dump with clean-out door in cellar. Steel basement windows of standard sizes with cam-acting latch and double contact weathering shall be used.

Incinerator—Built-in incinerator to be installed in chimney, with receiving hopper door located in or near the kitchen for disposal of garbage and trash. Basement-fed type at owner's option.

Carpentry—All framing lumber shall be well seasoned and free from large knots, either Douglas fir or yellow pine. Exterior walls of wide siding, where shown on drawings. California white pine for exterior millwork and interior trim; oak floors; steel bridging for floor joists. Interior doors and built-in kitchen cabinet as required.

Stucco Work—Exterior walls finished with three coats of Portland cement stucco on metal lath, where shown on plans. Finish coat colored and textured as directed.

Hardware—Owner shall furnish all hardware. Exterior hardware shall be rustproof. Hinges for entrance doors shall be of the ballbearing or antifriction type equipped with roller pins. Designed hardware to be of forged iron in English tulip or Warwick design unless otherwise specified. Garage hardware shall be sliding and folding type, depending on type of opening, delivered complete in original box.

Casement Windows — To insure maximum light and air steel casement windows in single or multiple units with transom as shown on drawings are recommended. All corners to be electrically welded; all muntins to be flush on both interior and exterior faces. Malleable iron or solid bronze hardware to be used. Frames to be anchored with continuous angles. Screens of bronze wire are recommended.

Plastering and Lathing—Three-coat work over metal lath is recommended. A less expensive job may be obtained through the use of one-half inch of plaster over flat rib expanded metal lath or wood lath. Insulating lumber or plaster-board may be used if desired by owner. Lime plaster for base coats, with finishing hydrate for smooth, white finish coat or textured finish, is recommended for all plastering.

Metal Work—Gutters, rain-pipes, valleys and flashings to be sixteen-ounce copper.

Roofing—Roof of rigid asbestos shingles; styles, thicknesses, colors, sizes and shapes as specified; to be laid in accordance with manufacturer's instructions. Stained cedar shingles at owner's option.

Painting—Strictly pure white lead and linseed oil in proper proportion, with zinc oxide where desired, or a good grade of ready-mixed paint shall be used. Interior trim to receive two good coats of flat paint and one coat of nat enamel. Finished floors to be varnished or waxed throughout as directed.

Electrical Work—Complete system of electric wiring from meter to all outlets, including all panel boards, junction boxes and other fittings. The installation must be in accordance with the rules and regulations of the National Board of Underwriters.

Lighting Fixtures—Lighting fixtures shall be correctly designed to harmonize with architectural details; rustproof metals recommended and quality of finish to be considered.

Plumbing—Brass piping for hot and cold water lines. Gas or coal fired hotcoil water heater. Reinforced concrete septic tank where sewer connections are not available. Acid resisting enamel fixtures, with chromium-plated brass fittings, recommended for laundry, kitchen and bathroom. System must be as shown on plans and conform with local regulations.

Tile Work—The floors and wainscot in bathroom, with built-in china accessories.

Heating—Steam, hot air, or hot water redjacketed sectional boiler thoroughly and indestructibly insulated—for hard or soft coal, coke, oil or gas. All steam mains and returns, and all hot water lines to be insulated with three-ply, cross-corrugated asbestos pipe covering; fittings to be insulated with a 3-4-inch asbestos cement; all applied in accordance with manufacturer's instructions. Thin tubular radiators recommended; air valves where necessary.

Temperature Control—Heat regulator with eight-day or one-day clock thermostat, limit control on boiler or furnace, and electric or spring motor.

Insulation—Throughout with insulating building board (or insulating quilting if preferred) used as plaster base on second floor ceiling operates as roof insulation.

Stock Trim Economical.

Trim around door and window openings has always reflected the skill of the designer and the pocketbook of the owner. Thus the colonial mansions which have been preserved to us show a charming richness of molding, which goes far to create the stately inpression these houses give the visitor.

The "gingerbread" architecture of the '80s and '90s witnessed an elaboration of molded trim which lacked all charm. The natural reaction resulted in the absolutely plain trim sometimes called "sanitary" because of the entire absence of any moldings.

Today there is a growing appreciation for the finely molded trim. It must not be too heavily molded nor will it be acceptable if absolutely plain. Proportion of molding to flat faces must be pleasing. Several large manufacturers of trim, recognizing this growing demand, have developed stock molded trim of pleasing line and contour. It is not necesary to undergo the expense of specially manufactured trim, when by reference to the products of these manufacturers a trim of pleasing proportion and suitable for the style of house design may be purchased from stock.

EFFORT TO "SCARE" UNRULY SON ENDS WITH FATAL SHOT

St. Louis, December 8.—(AP)—Edward L. Leidner, 60, cashier of the Carpenter Ice Cream company, today related how he fired a shot last night to "scare" his son, Walter, 35, and unintentionally killed him at their home in University City, a suburb.

His account was corroborated by his wife, Charlotte, and by Mrs. Edith Behrman Leidner, widow of the son. All said the younger Leidner had been drinking and quarrelsome, and had struck his father and mother before the father tried to "scare" him.

As his son died, Leidner said, he moaned, "Dad, I know you didn't intend to do it." The father notified a friend who called the police and Leidner was arrested.

Leidner later was exonerated by a coroner's verdict of accident.

Swanson Invokes Habitual Criminal Statute in Chicago

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—John A. Swanson, Cook county's new state's attorney, today ordered enforcement of the habitual criminal act, passed in 1883 but seldom used. Under that law, criminals can be sentenced to life imprisonment when convicted of a second time for robbery or burglary.

"We do not need any other laws to break the back of crime," Swanson said. "If the habitual criminal act is strictly enforced, it will do just as much good as the passage of a new law patterned after the Baumes act of New York."

Swanson ran for the office of state's attorney in November on a platform pledging him to put an end to the "unholy alliance of crime and politics" and to rout the criminal element.

COUNTY TAXPAYERS WARNED TO PAY BY DECEMBER 19

Among the other things worrying "Dad's" pocketbook, such as Christmas presents and tickets to the Tech-Georgia struggle, there came Saturday the clarion call of the county tax collector that 1928 taxes must be paid by December 19—or else.

W. S. Richardson, county tax collector, Saturday said that the taxes are coming in slowly and that unless the receipts pick up materially between now and the closing date, a lot of Fulton county taxpayers are liable to be out of luck.

The tax collector's office is being kept open until 5 o'clock Saturday afternoons in order to accommodate the taxpayers, but the taxpayers do not seem to be taking advantage of the accommodation, judging by the number of those who call by, Mr. Richardson said.

LIME USED BY MAN DURING EVERY AGE

To anyone who studies the subject of plaster and mortar from the advent of plastering to the present time, the continual and predominant use of lime is evident.

From the time early man first heated lime rocks by building his fire of stones around them, thereby obtaining a plastic substance to supercede the mud he formerly use—from that time, tracing the progress of plastering through Egyptian, Grecian, Roman and English history to the present, one finds the universal plastering material to be lime. Lime of the ancient days was a quicklime or "lump lime." as now commonly designated. And some lump lime is still used.

However, because of the lack of facilities on the job for slacking lump lime, the time and expense involved and probability of por results through the use of improper slaked lime—because of all these, there is a universal preference for hydrated lime. Furthermore, shipping and handling of unslaked lime is more or less unsatisfactory.

The Kelley Island Lime & Transport company, which supplied the famous Tiger Finish hydrated lime for The Constitution's master model home, is the largest producer of lime and limestone products in the world. It was organized nearly 38 years ago, and has shown a steady and healthy growth. Today its annual capacity of manufactured products is more than half a million tons. Over 5,500,000 sacks of hydrated lime were produced and distributed during 1923.

This company has eleven active manufacturing plants conveniently located. Plants that produce Tiger Finish are at White Rock and Gibsonburg, Ohio; those producing Tiger Masons are at Marblehead and Marion, Ohio; Huntington, Ind., and Dover Plains and Buffalo, N. Y. General offices are in Cleveland, Ohio.

Miller's Book Store Supplies Models For Model Dwellings

Minute detail with which the two demonstration homes of The Constitution are furnished has caused widespread comment among visitors. One of the many touches which give an air of real home comfort to the master model home and the model home are the presence of many beautiful books.

These come from Miller's Book Store, one of Atlanta's best known institutions of its type. The books supplied by Miller's cover a wide range of reading and include old classics as well as works from the pens of modern authors. All are attractively bound and displayed in book cases in the two homes.

Window Display Boosts Master Model Home

This impressive window display at the American Radiator company, 326 Peachtree street, greets the eyes of many thousands daily during the 30-day inspection period of The Constitution's Master Model Home at 705 Morningside drive. The display is a replica of the model basement of the Master Model Home, a feature little known in this section of the country and one that is emphasized in the demonstration dwelling on Morningside drive. The basement is a finished room used as a laundry, a billiard room and a playroom for the children on rainy days.

Sub-Floor Found Valuable in Tests By Forest Service

Stiffening Effect Shown in 30 Trials; Helps Prevent Crackling of Plaster.

That the addition of a subfloor has a valuable stiffening effect in wooden floor construction is confirmed by recent tests at the Forests Products laboratory, United States forest service, on 30 different constructions conforming to floor designs and conditions met with in common practice. These tests indicate that a subfloor adds very appreciably to the strength of a floor system by distributing loads placed upon it, reduces floor distortion and vibration, diminishes the cracking of plaster, and probably decreases floor squeaking.

Under a load such as is represented by piano or other piece of furniture the joists supporting a floor are deflected or bent. One effect of this bending of the lath and plaster on the ceiling below, which may cause the plaster to crack. It was found that a subfloor of ordinary thickness added to a floor system consisting of a one-inch hardwood floor on two by ten-inch joists, 12 feet long and 16 inches apart, reduced the total deflection or bending of an individual joist approximately 30 per cent and its deflection with respect to adjacent joists approximately 40 per cent. Less bending of the individual joists means less tendency for the paster on the ceiling beneath to crack.

Many houses and apartments are still erected without subfloors, and with the finish floors supported directly by the poists. That a subfloor has advantages which should not be overlooked, is conclusively demontrated by the laboratory's study.

"The use of a subfloor," says a laboratory authority, "very often affords a degree of satisfaction to the home owner that far outweighs its additional cost."

NEW ROOF OVER OLD IS MODERN PRACTICE

The fear of the home-owner that the process of re-roofing his home in the spring is an expensive, slow and unsightly one, is now groundless, declares a statement of the engineers of the Johns-Manville corporation, largest makers of asbestos roofing and insulation.

No longer, the Johns-Manville engineers have made clear, is it necessary to rip off the old shingles, accompanied by a dozen and one disagreeable features. They can all now be obviated, for it has been found, as the result of 12 years' experimentation and practice, that asbestos shingles, if laid on a roof right on top of the old shingles, give as good, and better, service than if the old shingles were torn away.

Asbestos shingles are made of asbestos fiber—the silky strands of a rock which geologists tell us is many millions of years old. It has been seasoned and tempered by all the volcanic fires and changes of the earth; it is waterproof; it is fireproof; it is indestructible. Asbestos fibres combined with Portland cement under a terrific hydraulic pressure are formed into shingles which are literally slabs of stone. Shingles of this sort, once placed upon a roof, preclude the necessity of reroofing again. One's roof troubles then are over.

By the new method all that has to be done is to apply the asbestos shingles over the old shingles. Once this is done, roof troubles are over.

The extra layer of shingles (that is, the old wood roof) insures extra secure nailing and in addition provides an effective insulator against the heat of summer and the cold of winter.

Insulated, Sectional Boiler Has Steel Jacket

That every nook and corner of the home be filled on the coldest winter day with a 70-degree cozy springtime warmth is the ideal of home heating which is especially well met, according to the manufacturer, by a jacketed, indestrucitbly insulated, sectional boiler.

Its long, double flue gallery retains, it is stated, the hot gases of combustion within the boiler for the longest period of time, insuring the extraction and utilization of their heat in the highest degree. It is completely equipped with automatic regulation and all accessories. Thorough insulation is given by an inch-thick asbestos padding within its jacket. Its attractiveness is enduring also, for all doors are porcelain enamel finished and the jacket is of baked enamel.

Dustproof construction is obtained by grinding smooth all contact surfaces on doors and plate work. Economy in fuel purchase is also possible with this boiler, for special grates allow the use of small size coal, such as buckwheat and pea. An ashpit of ample proportions with sturdy cast iron base provides for easy caretaking.

Asbestos Cement Wall Finish for Texturing

The increasing popularity of textured wall finishes becomes more evident each day. A wall finish made with a base of white Portland cement, asbestos and with its other ingredients processed with oils and chemicals becomes a plastic sensitive medium of permanent beauty and economical durability in the hands of the efficient craftsman.

This wall finish is applied by brush, sponge, or trowel, variation in texture being obtained by stippling, troweling, brushing, knifing and wiping. It is easily and quickly applied to any kind of surface, brown or white plaster, concrete, brick, tile, gypsium or fiber wall board, wood, metal, and old painted or papered surfaces, according to the manufacturer.

The powder is made in white, slightly grayish cast, and in such standard colors as light buff, gray, pink, blue, and green. When other colors are desired colors ground in oil are added to the mixture. The material is delivered, ready for application, in one gallon cans, five gallon pails and steel drums holding larger amounts.

CENTRISTS ELECT

Professor of Church Law Heads German Party.

Cologne, Germany, December 8.—(AP)—The centrist party today in a stormy session which revealed serious divergencies between factions elected Dr. Ludwig Kaas, professor of ecclesiastical law at Treves university, as its chairman. He succeeds Dr. Wilhelm Marx, former German chancellor.

Adam Stegerwald, labor leader in the reichstag and former Prussian premier, was the first candidate for the post to be defeated in the balloting.

The party then named by acclamation as its chairman, Joseph Joos, of Muenchen-Gladbach, an editor. Joos said that he was unable to accept the chairmanship because he regarded the defeat of Stegerwald as a blow against the labor group in the party.

PROMINENT DOCTOR AND WIFE KILLED BY BURGLARS' GUNS

Eaton, Ohio, December 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Lora Silver, 58, was killed and her husband, Dr. Horatio Silver, 55, prominent physician here, was wounded fatally by two burglars who entered their home early today.

Mrs. Silver was killed instantly, a bullet piercing her heart, while her husband, with a bullet wound in his abdomen, died in a Dayton hospital five hours later, following an operation performed in an effort to save his life.

Basement-Fed Incinerator.

In homes where a suitable flue for the chimney-fed type of built-in garbage and trash incinerator was overlooked or not provided, a basement-fed incinerator may be installed to rid the premises of garbage, the unbeautiful, unhealthy garbage can and the fire hazardous basement rubbish pile.

The basement-fed incinerator becomes a permanent part of the building, a convenience that adds comfort to living in the house and makes a property more attractive to buyer. It will not rust or wear out. The large ashpit requires cleaning only three or four times a year.

Combustion chamber of the smallest model for five and six-room residences holds six bushels and accommodates not only garbage and combustible waste, but also rubbish and non-combustibles like tin cans and bottles. Broken up wood boxes, fiber cartons and similar items are deposited through the large fire door.

No More Dry Enforcement Than in Preceding Years, Is Forecast by Bureau

New Appropriation Permits No Greater Force; Only Change To Be in Methods of Agents.

Washington, December 8.—(United News)—Prohibition enforcement during the coming year, dry officials indicated tonight, will be neither more nor less drastic than it is now.

In making this forecast, however, they admitted they were leaving out of consideration any possible changes in policy that may occur when the new administration takes office next March 4.

While there is an apparent increase of $770,860 allotted to the dry unit by the $1,116,675,000 treasury-postoffice appropriation bill just passed by the house, this bill will be almost entirely taken up by higher pay for employees.

In his appearance before the appropriations committee, Commissioner James M. Doran explained that $767,164 for the increased appropriation asked will be necessary to provide pay raises under the Welch act.

The actual amount available to the prohibition bureau for enforcement of the dry and anti-narcotic laws, therefore, will be $12,732,836, an increase over last year of only $3,696. Officials said it will not be possible to do much more than is already being done.

Treasury officials, including Secretary Mellon, frown on President-elect Hoover's suggestion in campaign speeches, that a commission be appointed to investigate prohibition conditions.

Statements from officials of the prohibition unit indicate that there will be no radical departures after next March 4 from the policies pursued in the past.

"We are already doing all that is possible with our available force and appropriation and I cannot see now how any change of policy could possibly better our present accomplishments," Dr. Doran said.

He called attention to what he told the house appropriations committee—"if congress wants to embark in the police business it will take $300,000,000 and a police force covering the land."

Two major changes, however, are in prospect for the dry service during the coming year. Renewed efforts will be made to have Canada sign a treaty shutting off the flow of liquor now pouring across the northern border.

Canadian public opinion is understood, however, to oppose such a regulation. Newspaper summaries of the Canadian viewpoint hold that it is not Canada's concern how much rum is shipped here by Canadians as long as their customs laws are not violated.

Existing treaties with Canada provide that officials here shall be advised of all liquor shipments cleared through their customs for this country. What is sought is a treaty forbidding clearance of any liquor shipments to United States ports.

During the forthcoming year, also, the dry service will be placed completely under the civil service. At present only about 1,000 of the 1,500 agents are civil service employees.

Quebec, Quebec.—The Kent house, on the brink of Montmorency falls, near Quebec, has big dogs which race over the snow with guests. A year ago two French-Canadians who owned them were expatiating in French on their merits. "Grand chien! Grand chien!" they cried. George Doran, a Kinograms photographer, promptly cemented the entente cordiale by exclaiming with enthusiasm, "Oui, oui! Hot dogs! Hot dogs!"

Brown rats are more ferocious, but less agile, than black rats.

There have been more than 120 eruptions of Mount Etna recorded.

Chicago Now Only Seven Hours Away by Airplane; Modern Cabin Ships Provide Safe, Pleasant Travel

Travel by air to Chicago in the big planes of the Interstate Air Lines, Inc., is comfortable and safe and speedy. At the left is one of the company's ships in flight, and at the right is an interior view, showing the comfortable facilities which have been provided for passengers.

Seven hours away, Chicago from Atlanta. That is all. Every day, now, the interested observer can see three or four or six modern travelers who have learnt that the time-distance between the metropolis of the midwest and the metropolis of the south has been cut to this point.

They are traveling by air, in the modern cabin planes of Interstate Airlines, Inc., which leave both Atlanta and Chicago every morning about 9:30 o'clock and arrive at their destinations at 4:30 o'clock. They are traveling on schedule, bearing mail, express and passengers and they are becoming known as a means of fast transport as normal as automobile or train. Incidentally, according to official figures, they are a safer means of travel than any other except steamship.

Much Mail Carried.

Today there is, on a daily average, 355 pounds of air mail coming into Atlanta, and 430 pounds going out. These figures were given out at the postoffice Saturday. Of this poundage 45 pounds incoming and 65 pounds outgoing is credited to the new Atlanta-Chicago route. This does not include the opening day mail, which is always heavy, and officials pointed out that there is always a slump right after operations have started, with the invariable experience of a gradual steady increase thereafter.

This fact is illustrated in the present daily averages for the older established lines operating from this city. On the Atlanta-New York line, for instance, there is a daily average of 165 pounds incoming and 200 pounds outgoing. Figures for the Atlanta-Miami service show 65 pounds both ways and on the Atlanta-New Orleans, 80 pounds daily incoming and 100 pounds outgoing.

Opened Last Saturday.

It was only a week ago, on Saturday, December 2, that this new Chicago line opened. That it fills a real need is shown by the fact that not a trip has been made since with less than two or three passengers and, on several occasions, the plane has been filled to capacity with six passengers and the pilot.

They are not figures in the news columns, seeking a little more publicity, who use the service, either. They are average, every-day business men and women, using the air line because it is comfortable, fast and safe. It is fast becoming known in America, as it has been known in Europe for years, that travel by air is as proper and safe a means of locomotion as any other and by far the most pleasant of them all.

The big planes of Interstate Airlines, Inc.—there are six in the Atlanta-Chicago service—make five stops between their terminal points. They land at Chattanooga, Nashville, Evansville, Ind., Terre Haute and Champaign, Ill. They run strictly on schedule and they are operated with the supreme idea of safety.

Price Takes Hop.

J. B. Price, of the Atlanta office of the Chicago Association of Commerce, is temporarily looking after the business of the company at this end. He talked, Saturday, after his experiences on a recent flight he made to Nashville in one of the regular planes of the service. His description of the scenery, sometimes above the fleecy billows of clouds and sometimes smoothly crossing the green and red and purple surface of the earth, voiced in few words a description of the most beautiful scenic wonders man has yet been able to see—the southland from the air.

"I was struck with the feeling of stability," said Mr. Price. "In those great planes there is no sensation of fast speed. You seem to be lazily floating, while the earth, 2,000 feet below, slowly revolves beneath. Except on the rare occasions when you strike a few air pockets, the planes are steadier than trains. A business man, in a hurry, can leave Atlanta in the morning, do all his memorandum work on the plane, fill an engagement in Chicago the same evening, sleep in a Chicago hotel and be home the next day at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon."

Every Pilot a Veteran.

Every pilot in this service is a veteran with thousands of hours' flying experience behind him. They are all chosen primarily for safety of operation. The rules of the company provide that no one—not even the president of the company, can order a plane into the air if the pilot is at all doubtful about the weather or flying conditions.

That weather factor, also, covers the entire route. Before each plane starts the company gets a special report on weather conditions, as applied to flying, from each stopping place along the route. And if the pilot doesn't think it absolutely safe, no one can tell him to go.

On the contrary, if a pilot wants to take a chance and declares he'll hop off anyway, regardless of adverse condition, any field manager of the company has full authority to forbid the flight.

Flying Today Safer.

Flying today, over properly operated commercial lines in the proper kind of planes, is safer than any form of land travel. Even the big life insurance companies have now ruled that flying under these conditions does not affect the payability of a policy. Insurance rates on freight shipped by air in Europe are lower than the same goods must pay if shipped by train.

In short, with the sole exception of ocean steamers, such planes as are operated between Atlanta and Chicago daily are the safest of all modes of human transportation. And they are immeasurably more comfortable, more beautiful, more desirable and faster.

JAMES A. PATTEN, KING OF WHEAT PIT, PASSES

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—James A. Patten, 76-year-old retired "wheat king," died today at his home in Evanston, Ill., of pneumonia.

Although confined to his bed since November 30, the serious nature of his illness was not discovered until last night. His widow, his son, Jack, and three physicians were at the bedside when he died.

Almost coincidentally with the death of the aged financier, the Chicago Board of Trade abandoned the old building and the pits in which he gained his fortune and sent his fame wide and far by his spectacular dealings in wheat, corn and oats.

Born on an Illinois farm, Mr. Patten knew grain at its source from the time he learned to walk. In his early twenties he became familiar with the machinery of the pit after saving a few dollars from a meager farm salary.

He built his fortune through the period when the pit called for fast thinking and he never wavered from a set standard of business principles, which, among other things, barred gambling.

Maintaining staunch views on character, Mr. Patten insisted that young men in his employ save at least half of their salaries.

Starting as a speculator in the late seventies, Mr. Patten bought "calls" in the corn market with $2,500, his entire savings. He closed out with a profit of $25,000. The money was quickly reinvested and it multiplied several times over. By 1890 he was a recognized leader in the grain pits.

In an attempt to corner the wheat market in 1909, he bought 30,000,000 bushels of wheat. The scheme was wrecked by publicity. In 1910 he engineered a cotton "corner" with others which resulted in huge profits and a fine of $4,000 for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

In Memoriam.

In memory of a wonderful mother, Mrs. Allie Howell, who died December 6, 1926. Although it's true she has passed on
To lands more calm and fair,
I'm sure she'd love to know that we
Remember still and care.
So just to bless her precious name
With homage fond and true,
This comes in memory of one that friends love dearly too.

CATHOLICS IN U. S. REACH 21,453,928 SAYS DIRECTORY

Chicago, December 8.—(AP)—The United States Catholic population is 21,453,928, the Catholic Press Directory, issued today, showed.

The directory said there has been a gain of 6,188,760 in Catholic church membership in the past 20 years and that the gain the past three years has been 715,481.

There are nine daily Catholic newspapers, 106 weekly papers, 127 monthly magazines and 49 miscellaneous Catholic publications listed in the directory.

Victoria, British Columbia.—After 22 years in the Argentine, J. Tisdall, prominent racher of Buenos Aires, with other business interests there, has succumbed to the lure of Canada, he told interviewers in the Empress hotel here. Mr. Tisdell, who has been spending a holiday in this city, plans to settle here in the near future after adjusting his business interests in the southern hemisphere.

After next April women will not be allowed to work underground in the mines in India.

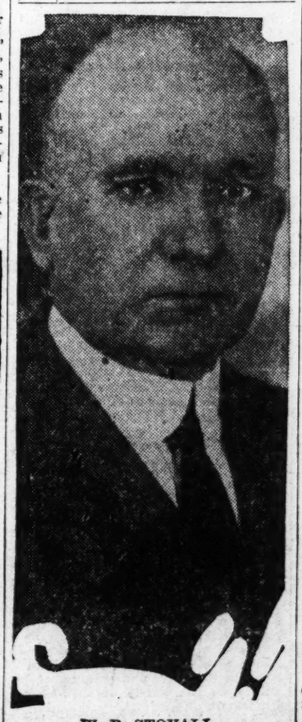
WILLIAM B. STOVALL DIES AT HIS OFFICE

Funeral Services Will Be Held in Franklin County Monday.

William B. Stovall, 62, president and founder of the Empire Trust company, died suddenly Saturday morning at his offices in the Atlanta Trust Company building. Mr. Stovall had gone to work as usual and had seemed to be in good health but shortly before 11 o'clock suffered a lung hemorrhage and died within a few minutes.



W. B. STOVALL.

He had lived in Atlanta 30 years and in that time had risen to a position of prominence as a business man and financier. In 1912 he organized the trust and safe deposit company and was president of this concern until it became the Empire Trust company in 1917.

He was an alumnus of the University of Georgia and of Mercer university, a member of the Atlanta Athletic club, the Druid Hills Country club, the Capital City Country club, the Gate City Masonic lodge and the First Baptist church.

Funeral services and burial will take place Monday at Clarkes Creek church in Franklin county, near Martin.

WILBUR PRAISES WORK OF MARINES

Washington, December 8.—(AP)—A recital praising the work of the marines, now on a front with flanks in Nicaragua and China, reporting important developments in naval flying, and rejoicing in the high morals of his branch of the national defense, is contained in the annual report of Secretary Wilbur.

At the same time the report, made public today, said there was an insufficient enlisted personnel to maintain a balanced fleet and that "a shortage, requiring the reduction of eessels' allowances of personnel below the point of efficiency existed during this current fiscal year" which would increase unless adequate measures were taken.

The report of the secretary touched a wide range of subjects, but dealt with especial emphasis on the marines work in Nicaragua and the important developments in aviation where great strides were reported in obtaining the aircraft to fill the five-year extension program calling for 1,000 planes.

Marines in Nicaragua.

Telling of the dispatch of the special service squadron and more than 5,000 marines and bluejackets to Nicaragua, Mr. Wilbur said "The American naval forces in Nicaragua have executed a very difficult duty with tact and forbearance.

"They have used force only where absolutely necessary and have contributed as much as possible to the happiness and well-being of the Nicaraguan people," he continued.

American forces made 85 contacts with hostile forces during the year, suffering the loss of 19 men killed and 47 wounded in action in addition to two aviators who crashed and later died. More than 4,000 marines were maintained in China.

"The situation at Shanghai has become stabilized, partially due to the fact that we still maintain a force of about 1,000 marines there," Mr. Wilbur wrote.

Thirty Fliers Killed.

The airplane carriers Lexington and Saratoga were added to the fleet during the year and contracts were awarded for two giant 6,500,000 cubic feet volume dirigibles. Thirty aviators were reported killed in crashes during the calendar year 1927.

The remainder of the naval petroleum reserves were returned to the supervision of Secretary Wilbur during the year. He ordered the wells closed down and close check kept to determine whether there was any drainage to nearby wells. Since the closing of the wells in most of the reserves no definite evidence has developed that there is any appreciable leakage of either oil or gas from the reserve wells to the outside wells, the report said. Legislation to fix more definitely the status of the reserves was urged in the report, particularly for the protection of reserve No. 1, which is estimated to contain 600,000,000 barrels of oil and which may be drained by owners of nearby land when they decide to drill.

Secretary Wilbur predicted a shortage of officers would exist for three years unless congress appropriated funds for a new appointment basis. "The rapid development of aviation and the increased proportion of smaller vessels in the fleet combine to require a materially greater percentage of officers to men than did our navy of 1916," the report said.

Sinking of Sub.

The report made no reference to the cruiser bill which passed the house at the last session and which is pending before the senate.

Of the several accidents during the year, the sinking of the submarine S-4 with the loss of 40 lives off the Massachusetts coast following a collision with the coast guard destroyer Paulding was the worst.

Secretary Wilbur recommended the passage of a bill to prevent stagnation in promotion of officers of the line and another to provide for the retirement of staff officers who have been passed over by the selection board for higher rank. A third bill he urged for passage would repeal the measure restricting retired officers from being employed by concerns furnishing supplies to the navy department.

THE MUSCLE SHOALS PROBLEM.

The old and politically foot-balled Muscle Shoals issue has already precipitated a controversy in congress. It again looks as if there will be no legislation on the problem during the short session.

The message of President Coolidge, while a "straddle" on the issue as to its uses for power or for commercial nitrates — advocating both—plainly shows that he would not only veto any real government operation bill passed this session, but that he favors a lease along the lines of the Madden bill. This is the bill urged by the American Farm bureau.

According to Washington commentators, sentiment in Washington is swinging away from government operation and back toward lease to a private company under proper guarantees and restrictions.

There are several reasons for this. First, it is now evident that the Farm Bureau Federation was right when it took the position last session that despite all the talk about government operation, it would be impossible to pass a bill providing for government production and distribution of fertilizers that farmers could use.

This fact has been amply demonstrated. It was made plain even before President Coolidge vetoed the Norris-Morin so-called government operation bill last spring.

The truth is, the Norris-Morin bill did not provide real government production and distribution of fertilizers that farmers could use. The house carefully removed all this by voting time and again and by heavy majorities to substitute throughout the bill the words "fixed nitrogen" wherever the word "fertilizers" had appeared. This bill, if it authorized production of anything, authorized nitrates suitable mainly for sale to fertilizer mixing companies.

But the house conferees, headed by Mr. Morin, in their report on the amended bill made it plain that the bill did not provide for the production of fertilizers. They said it "provides for a government corporation authorized and directed to conduct experiments in the production and use of nitrogenous products."

Senator Norris, on the floor of the senate, said in effect that the purpose of the bill was to produce experiments rather than fertilizers. Senator Norris was not particularly interested in fertilizers; he desired government distribution of electric power.

Neither is there any reason to believe that Mr. Hoover will be any less emphatic in his opposition to government production and distribution of fertilizers the farmer can use.

Mr. Hoover's Elizabethon, Tenn., speech and comments relative to Muscle Shoals, have been misunderstood. He did not say that he would favor government "production" of fertilizers at Muscle Shoals. The word he used after very careful consideration was "development" rather than "production." Neither the farmers nor the people of Alabama and Tennessee want to see the huge Muscle Shoals plant devoted merely to fertilizer experiments.

Mr. Hoover is, in fact, known to be opposed to government operation wherever it can possibly be avoided. It is said he really favors the utilization of the great power energy for development of industry by hydro-electric distribution.

Many friends of the farmer in congress, who really wanted to see Muscle Shoals put to work producing and distributing cheaper fertilizers, are said to now feel rather aggrieved at having been led off—against the advice of the farm bureau leaders—after the government operation will-o'-the-wisp. They are looking for a good, plain and dependable business offer to take the Muscle Shoals nitrate plants and put them to work.

The unvarnished truth is, this great water power can be used to enormous advantage in southeastern industrial development, and the government reimbursed for its investment. This is the sound course, and the question should be divorced from politics, and placed upon an economic basis only.

WHAT IS THE ANSWER?

The United States director of enforcement, in an official statement, says it will take, as a minimum, $300,000,000 a year to enforce prohibition.

The budget, as prepared by the commission, approved and sent to congress by the president, provides for something like $13,500,000 for the ensuing year. That is a comparatively small amount as to the $300,000,000 stipulated in the statement; and if accepted literally the nation will remain about 80 per cent "illegally liquored" for the next year. What are intelligent people to think about this?

In any one day in Atlanta there are approximately 30 convictions for drunkenness and cases involving drunkenness.

Compare the population of Atlanta to the 125,000,000 total population in America, and figure out the percentage. Atlanta is no worse than other cities in this respect, and it has been demonstrated that rural communities are no less infested with "hooch" than the more populous communities, and there you are! But Atlanta's "drunkenness" increase has been almost three to one since the enactment of the 18th amendment.

The Georgia Baptist state convention, which has just concluded its annual meeting at Thomasville, passed the following resolution:

"That this convention again pledges itself to continue warfare against the liquor traffic and for the maintenance of national prohibition as provided in the national constitution by the eighteenth amendment. We commend the good work of the Anti-Saloon league, which is so much hated by its enemies, to the sympathy and support of the Baptist people."

That is sublime and noble, from the sentimental standpoint, but what does it mean? The Anti-Saloon league, "which is so much hated by its enemies," is a political organization in the most ultra sense, and if it has ever helped the cause of temperance that fact remains to be demonstrated.

The whole truth is, too many of us cling to the word "prohibition," and not to the real, underlying principle of temperance.

Everybody who gives the matter real thought, and research, knows the deplorable conditions in this country today resulting from the high tide of the illegal whisky traffic.

In some of the colleges of the country, charges have been made recently of excessive drinking. We believe most of these have been exaggerated. However, the fact remains that this nation is not temperate, and never will be so long as we cling to the word "prohibition" without getting to the bottom of the illegal whisky evil, and eradicate it.

We have the law—then let it be enforced. If it costs $300,000,000 a year to do it, then very well! Let's spend the $300,000,000 so long as the law remains in the statutes without amendments to make it enforceable at less expense.

The point is, the law should either be enforced, or it should be revised so that it can be enforced. No law-abiding, right-thinking citizen wants a return of the saloon. But it is unthinkable that any law-abiding citizen is satisfied with the present status.

GEORGIA FARM LANDS.

Georgia farm lands in general are as productive, when properly tilled, as those of any state in the union. They are far more so than the farm lands of many states.

Any practical farmer, who thinks in economic terms, will keep soil fertility built-up, lands drained, terraced if rolling, and crops rotated.

He will balance his production, and adapt the lands, following a study of soil surveys, to their best uses, and plant winter cover crops to put back into the soil what is taken out in the production of commodity crops.

And it is also a fact, with these exceptional soil conditions known, that agricultural lands in Georgia are cheaper on the whole than less productive lands in a majority of the states of the union.

In California productive lands are selling, or have sold, for $1,000 an acre—and on the basis of production the lands are probably worth the price.

In that state producers know how to use their lands in a way to get out of them a bigger income than we get out of our lands in Georgia.

Actually, California lands are not as good as Georgia lands—except for limited purposes.

If we take our lands, as a whole in Georgia, we can get more out of them, acre for acre, than California landowners can get out of their lands.

Comparing our price of land with that of California, how much better investment has the prospective investor in Georgia? The question furnishes its own answer.

In Wisconsin eight acres of land can be purchased for $1,600, if it is improved and suitable for dairying purposes. This is on the basis of $200 an acre.

Georgia is showing tremendous speed in the development of the dairy industry these days and lands suitable for dairy purposes—just as good as the Wisconsin lands—and better in some respects—can be purchased, and are being purchased at prices as low as $20 an acre.

On this basis of price, 80 acres will cost only $1,600.

Crop diversification in Georgia is bringing about a revival in farm land sales, and values will increase.

There has never been a time in this state when the opportunity to make money—either in up-to-date farm operations, or as investments—was so inviting as that presented by present-day farm land values.

GEORGIA SHOW BIRDS WIN.

The poultry and poultry products industry is rapidly expanding in Georgia. Climatic conditions, in all sections of the state, are ideal, as are the soil conditions for the growing of feed. The gross income from this industry places it, economically speaking, next to the cotton crop. This does not take into account the value of poultry and eggs raised entirely for home consumption.

It is also a fact that show pens from Georgia frequently are sweepstake winners at the great poultry fairs of the nation. To illustrate, A. E. Wright, proprietor of Hill Crest farm at Orchard Hill, has been informed that his chickens "swept the deck" in every class in the Milwaukee auditorium poultry show which has just closed after exhibition of the finest poultry that could be assembled from farms all over the country. The Milwaukee show is recognized as second in importance in the nation to the Madison Square Garden show in New York. There was a paid attendance at the exhibition of over 20,000.

The wire Mr. Wright received from Milwaukee read as follows:

"Your Black Giants swept the deck in every class, winning first, second and third cock; first, second and third cockerel; first, second, third, fourth and fifth hen; first, second, third, fourth and fifth pullet; first old pen and first young pen. You also won the prize for the best display in the show."

Mr. Wright has won frequent prizes in southern as well as in national poultry exhibits. He is vice president of the Georgia Baby Chick association. His poultry won several first prizes in the Madison Square Garden show this year.

Commercial poultry and egg producers in Georgia are learning standardization, and it is a fact worthy of note that many producers of this state have direct contracts with many of the larger hotels of other states, including some of the leading hotels in New York city, for yard eggs at a premium of from five to fifteen cents a dozen over the quoted market prices, the purchasers paying the express charges.

THE WASHINGTON CATHEDRAL.

At a recent dinner in Washington of the Carnegie endowment for international peace, in honor of visiting British journalists, Sir George Armstrong, editorial adviser of the Chronicle group of newspapers, of London, made the following remarks concerning the great Washington cathedral:

"I, in company with my colleagues, had the great privilege of visiting your cathedral, and we had the inestimable privilege of being conducted over that cathedral by your bishop. I think I am right in saying amongst us all that that was the most impressive spectacle that we have witnessed in our tour, and the thought that arose in some of our minds was that this wonderful cathedral, standing on its massive foundation, built in a way which could face thousands of years to come, might one day be the Valhalla of the English-speaking races. The day may come when Westminster Abbey by reason of its age may gradually crumble in the dust, and when that day comes perhaps, who knows, that great cathedral which is slowly rising from its foundation may stand as the center of civilization of the English-speaking world. That, at any rate, is a thought which you will allow is devoid of any national prejudice, but it is a thought which must inevitably arise in the mind of any man who will not permit himself to be swayed by mere national feelings, but who is able to judge the world and humanity from that large standpoint and from that wide point of view, which is necessary amongst us all if we are to bring humanity to happiness, and contentment in the future years."

It was an inspiring sentiment expressed in beautiful sentences, and one, we trust, may find a richness in harvest.

Washington cathedral is being built under Episcopalian auspices on the most commanding ground in the District of Columbia. It is 14th century gothic in architectural design and when completed will rank in size with the great church structures of the world. The foundations, three crypt chapels, the apse and a major portion of the choir walls and crossing are now structurally complete with present work centered on the vaulting or stone ceiling of the choir.

In association with General Pershing, George Washington Pepper and other public spirited laymen are taking active parts in a nationwide crusade to hasten the day when it can no longer be said that the nation's capital is without an adequate expression of the religious ideals of the American people.

It is planned to secure gifts of individual stones from citizens of every state so that the cathedral may be as national in conception as it will be in influence.

GREAT ANNIVERSARY NUMBER.

Today, December 9, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch celebrates the 50th anniversary of its founding by Joseph Pulitzer, by publishing a special number which has been in preparation for over a year.

Advance copies of the seven color rotogravure sections—the heart of the number—have been received by us. They are replete with general interest and literary merit.

The leading feature article is by President Coolidge and relates the personal side of a president's life. In it it is not difficult to discover the reason for his famous "I don't choose" statement. He writes:

"The movements of the president are a very ponderous operation. Other officers of the government can travel with a considerable degree of freedom. If they wish to spend a week-end at a hotel or a club, they can do so without difficulty. They also have greater liberty in accepting private hospitality. When the president moves it is an event. A large retinue follows and extensive preparations have to be made in advance for his reception and care. The only place he can enter without considerable preliminary disturbances is the white house.

"For these reasons it seems to me that some place should be provided in the hills within easy striking distance of Washington where the president might go for two or three days at a time when he was so disposed with conveniences for entertaining members of the government and other guests, where he could have that freedom of action which he has only at the white house, and where he could get a complete change of atmosphere."

The story of the life and works of the great editor and publisher, and his code, who founded the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and was also the editor, owner and publisher of the New York World, is the feature of one entire section.

Other special features by Chief Justice Taft, Henry Ford, Andre Siegfried, Stephen Leacock, Sidney Hillman, and many other notables in the professional, business and literary worlds give the issue a peculiarly fine balance. With it all the story of developments in the sciences, arts, trades, industries during the past half century makes the edition a veritable history of value and service to every one, and of peculiar worth for public and private libraries.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch is one of the great newspapers of this country, and the half century anniversary number is one of the most pleasing, from every viewpoint, ever issued by any newspaper at any time.

DON'T SACRIFICE CORN.

Commissioner Talmadge, of the state department of agriculture, has issued the following statement:

"I am informed that in a great many sections of Georgia the farmers are selling their corn for 75 cents and 80 cents a bushel.

"Of course, if it is necessary for the farmer to raise some money and he can't do it any other way he would have to sell his corn. I am writing this article to the farmers who do not have to sell their corn at any such prices.

"The corn crop in Georgia, especially in south Georgia, is the shortest it has been in the past twenty years. We have not enough grain in Georgia to supply the demand another year. Corn should bring a dollar a bushel f. o. b. any shipping point in the state of Georgia, and the farmer who sells it for less than this, unless he is absolutely forced to do so, will make a great mistake."

Mr. Talmadge is entirely correct. However severe the stress there is always a way for a hard-working, honest farmer to bridge it. In the first place, a good, practical farmer so pitches his crops to "live at home." Such a farmer has little to worry about, regardless of off-crop conditions that press upon him. At any rate, if there is any way to avoid it, a farmer should decline to sacrifice his corn. It would be obviously unsound to the core to sell corn at 75 cents a bushel and later on, before the next harvesting, buy corn to take its place at $1 a bushel.

In a great section of north Georgia the 1928 corn crop was good. Crop depressions in Georgia this year are in spots, and the farmer who properly balanced production, with hogs, chickens and cows, and with pasturage, is in generally good shape everywhere. Of course there are exceptions, as in every industry or business, or other activity.

Chicago will bar street carnivals beginning next summer. An ordinance to that effect has been passed which particularly puts the hula girl, fat woman and snake charmer into the discards. Nothing was said about the gunman or the bomb thrower.

Sigrid Undset, Norwegian author, who was awarded the 1928 Nobel prize for literature, intends to devote the entire sum to charity. As charity begins at home we editors are entertaining high hopes of being remembered.

Just because they planked down for the campaign fund is not sufficient to accredit them as cabinet material.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL

The Serpent of Sectionalism and the Hope That Its Head Is Bruised.

Washington, December 8.—(Special.)—The top-liner movietone in the Washington theaters this week is the new sound-squawking version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." It is showing on 12-hour runs week days and 3 to 11 p. m. on Sundays. Mrs. Stowe's colossal libel upon the southern people seems to have solved the perpetual motion problem for the northern people. There are 10 to 20 pretentious or barn-storming companies playing the stage version in theaters and under tents in all the regions above the Mason and Dixon line.

Although near the middle of my seventy-eighth year of life and have been far from a recluse during those years, I have never witnessed a performance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The ungodly book was published the year after I was born and from my earliest recollections I heard my father denounce it. In spite of his Presbyterian eldership any mention of Mrs. Stowe or her book would make him swear. Out of respect for his judgment I never read the book until after his death; then I thoroughly agreed with him.

A Fomenter of Enmities.

In my public activities as journalist, evangelist and lecturer I have had close contacts with the people in every state of the union. Their sentiments and favorite feelings became familiar to me. It has been my candid conviction for 40 years that as long as "Uncle Tom's Cabin" continues to be the primary volume in the family, school and public libraries north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers, and the grotesque and burlesque play based on it continues to draw packed audiences in those regions, sectional enmities between the southern and northern people will endure.

It is deplorable that any cause of contempt and hatred should exist now between the people of the two regions of our common country. But I know from abundant testimonies at first hand that most of those in the north who read the book or see a "Tom show," as they are called, get an ineffaceable conviction that the southern people are heartless, brutal and unChristian. And no properly bred southerner can see the play without becoming enraged by its slanderous scenes.

I shall always feel proud of my old fellow citizens in Griffin who made an "Uncle Tom" company climb back on a train and scurry out of the state.

A Leaven Hard to Purge Out.

Falsehoods dressed and vivified in dramatic paraphernalia penetrate the minds and excite the emotions of people in a peculiarly permanent way. They can be used effectively to color and prejudice the opinions and actions of the masses in any nation.

For that reason one can sympathize with the protests of the eminent Hebrews of our country against the prevalent type of "Jew" represented on the dramatic and vaudeville stages of the nation. One must also sympathize with the protests of other racial leaders and of religious leaders who denounce misrepresentations of their countrymen and their co-religionists by the ham-fatters of the theaters.

Even to this day American children gather from their history text books serious feelings of repulsion to "the British" because of the oppressions that led to our war of independence.

Such inherited or injected enmities are of the character of obsessions that President-elect Hoover once said:

"They may modify themselves with time—but in terms of generations!"

How many generations must yet come before we get rid of "Uncle Tom?"

A Promise From Election Results.

Here in Washington I have conversed with some very excellent persons who believe that the recent breaking up of the democratic "solid south" presages the crumbling away of the last of the psychological barriers between the sections so long in political opposition.

These good people say that the reunion of the south and north ethically, socially, industrially and patriotically in national emergencies has long since reached completion. Now they hope that with half of the old southern states registered in each of the great parties the old political prejudices have no legs to stand upon. They hope the south will stay broken as a condition precedent to a thoroughbreaking up of the recent republican solidarity of the north and west.

But the southern leaders here, whether they were recently Smith or anti-Smith, stoutly affirm that their states—Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Florida and Texas—will be back in their old party ranks at the next election. If they are right about that we are likely to resume the old status of sectionalized parties.

* * * *

But Are They Well Advised?

There is scarcely anything in human experience that tastes better than freedom!

The people of the south haven't had a general taste of political independence for 50 years. We have been self-bound in the chains of tradition, fear, hate, sectional prejudices and the clannish spirit inherited from our Scotch and Irish forebears.

But this year great masses of our people resented the burden put upon their sentiments and loyalty and their revolts led to disastrous party results. The question now arises—can their resentments be appeased and they be corralled again in the old camps?

The situation is the most delicate one that our southern leaders have ever been called upon to readjust. They are sensible enough that a horse which ran away at one place is liable to do so again when he comes to the same place. And they are wise enough to confess that they must not steer the democratic party in the south into the predicament of 1928 another time.

A Congressman and a Prime Minister

Mr. Britten's suggestion to the prime minister, that a conference on disarmament should be held by a committee composed of representatives from the parliament of Great Britain and the congress of the United States, raises many interesting questions. The idea of such a conference instantly seized the imagination of both the British and American public.

It is pretty generally conceded that the failure of the meeting at Geneva was due to the fact that both countries were represented by officials of the navies of their respective countries. These men were professionals, who had been trained to the business of building and orgauizing for naval warfare. Their very training inevitably gave them the attitude of opponents, and each felt himself to be the representative of the fighting force of his country. They were simply out of place in a diplomatic conference, whose purpose was to reduce the fighting power of each nation in the interest of peace. Mr. Britten's suggestion is that we shall take this discussion out of the realm of professional warfare, and trust our plans for peace to civil representatives of two peace-loving peoples.

Question of Procedure.

With the purpose which Mr. Britten had at heart, there is almost unanimous agreement on both sides of the Atlantic, but the manner in which he attempted to accomplish his purpose has raised a storm of protest. The conduct of our foreign affairs has been definitely committed by the constitution to the president. All communications between our government and other governments must be made by him through his secretary of state. It is true that, should he come to agreement with some foreign nation upon some question, which requires a formal treaty, then his action must have the ratification of the senate. Even the senate, however, must not take the initiative in foreign relations, but wait until the chief executive has submitted some formulated agreement for its ratification, or until the executive has formally requested its advice upon some question of state.

A little consideration reveals the wisdom of this provision. When the United States speaks to another nation, there should be one mind and one voice, otherwise there will be hopeless confusion. A foreign country could never tell when it was dealing with an authoritative representative of our nation. It will be a long time before the world will forget our tragic failure to adhere to this principle in the closing months of the administration of Mr. Wilson. While our president was supposed to be representing in person the authority of the United States at the peace conference in Paris, members of the foreign relations committee of the senate were constantly in direct and indirect communication with official representatives of the governments with whom our president was dealing, and succeeded in crippling his influence and damaging his prestige with these nations. Ever since that day, whenever the president of this country speaks, the rest of the nations of the world raise the question, "Does he speak for America?"

Lack of Unity.

Even if it were proper for Mr. Britten, as chairman of the naval committee of congress, to speak to the prime minister of Great Britain upon a question of such delicacy and importance, how could he speak for congress until congress had acted? But granted that the lower house of congress should authorize its chairman to speak, the senate is yet to be heard from. Granted that the senate should agree, it would still be necessary for the president to give his approval. We have here every element necessary to make "confusion worse confounded."

Here again we have revealed the weakness of our system of government in dealing with foreign affairs. There is no concentration of authority, and thus no concentration of responsibility. Ours, in the true sense, is not a parliamentary government. Our forefathers, in their fear that a centralized government would mean a centralized tyranny, so divided authority—making the legislature a check upon the executive, and the executive a check upon the legislature—that they made it almost impossible for there to be any unity or consistency in our foreign policy. The truth is that we do not have a parliamentary government. Our executive is elected for one term of years by all of the states, but the house of representatives is elected for another terms of years by congressional districts within the states, and our senators are elected for still another term by separate states. All these different representatives, elected by different constituencies, in different political atmospheres, on varying political issues, go to make up what we call our government. In this particular incident, Mr. Britten does represent the sentiment of the masses of the American people, but who does and who can represent us officially?

NEW YORK SKYLINES

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT, JR.

Written Exclusively for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.

New York, December 8.—(Special.) Called out to work at 3 o'clock in the morning. Streets so foggy the town has no skyline. Few persons are abroad, and they are not visible 100 feet away, for fog hides them and seems to muffle their steps.

Riding downtown on the levated. Through gray space and against the train's lazy rattle come the two rivers' defensive cries. The confusion of bells and whistles of warning, in toto suggesting that fabulous city under the sea, with cathedral bells ringing.

Is that all? No. These blowings of fog horns and tootings of whistles fuse into a doleful clamor, vague, distant, unreal, yet immediate, insistent. What is it? Let's see. The month of December. Christmas is coming. Oh, yes, and that brings to mind Dickens, and next Scrooge, and the ghost of Marley, taking his affrighted partner to the window of his lonely quarters, raising a hand and bidding him listen:

"On the raising of the hand he became sensible of confused noises in the air; incoherent sounds of lamentaton and regret; wailings inexpressibly sorrowful and self-accusatory."

Funny thing, but at the fancy that the city's fog sounds are like the mournful dirge of Dickens' phantoms, wringing their chains in regret, while they wander through the air in restless haste, the mood of weary melancholy is succeeded by a Christmas glow, and going to work at the milkman's hour becomes, for once, a fascinating adventure.

The Girls Aren't Appreciated.

Take it from Mrs. Jane Deeter Rippin, who is director of the Girl Scouts, and ought to know, the American girl in her teens has an overwhelming ambition to take care of the entire family. No, not to run the family, as it generally assumed.

"The teen age," says Mrs. Rippin, returned from a convention in Chicago, where girls from many states told her what they don't tell their mothers, "has great potentialities for doing and becoming. Girls at this age desire—more than ever again—to support the whole family. Yet no one suspects them of it. They stand in a no-man's land, and grownups are too busy to bother with their yearnings. Later they may become selfish, but at this time they ache with longings to be of use."

The Girl Scouts are now practicing up on Christmas carols to sing at hospitals and to shut-ins. This serenade of girlhood will ring through the nation, where hundreds of thousands of the country's future wives, mothers and women of parts now acknowledge the leadership of Mrs. Rippin. She came into her job by way of teaching, supervising cases of cruelty to children, the post of probation officer in Philadelphia, and work among girls created for him, and from then on the good idea runs the course of membership, contributions, propaganda and lobbying up to the final effort to have itself expressed in governmental action.

Congressman Britten was impatient and could not wait for his good iden to run the usual course, even with the start of his own position as chairman of the house committee on naval affairs. He knew just what was needed and he would get immediate results by convincing old Baldwin himself. So he wrote the British prime minister—not of course as prime minister, but merely as a member of parliament—just a little informal note from an M. C. to an M. P., and invited him to a little party up in Montreal somewhere, where they could settle this awkward matter of naval competition without the disturbing presence of admirals and other people who are supposed to know about navies.

Of course, if Mr. Britten could have such a party, there is no reason why the chairman of the senate committee could not also have one. And then there are the two communities on naval affairs and two on foreign affairs and the navy department and the war department. They might all have limitation parties, doubtless with most interesting results.

How To Have Refined Banquets.

A tip not for waiters, but about them:

Many futile attempts to keep up with the waiters and eat the viands on the plates before they clear them away all lead to the conclusion that refined banquets on a large scale are impossible in the big hotels here, unless missionary work is done among the waiters.

They must be brought under the civilizing influence of committees on arrangements. They must be assured that it will be worth their while, in a money way, maybe in advance, to lower the banquet tempo. Under the system of mass production and distribution now in vogue it is entirely natural for the waiters to hurl the food on and off with demoniacal fury. They work on schedule, serving robots rather than individuals, even if the banquet list be solid who's who and social register.

The thing must stop. Banquets are becoming positively barbaric. Overexposure to them is ruining the table manners of some of our best people. In self-defense, and almost unconsciously, they surround their plates with their hands, and growl defiance at the oncoming waiters. Some night a guest of honor is going to pour soup down the waiter's back. And that will be news!

Gibson Girl Not Extinct.

A seasoned bachelor was both shocked and hurt when his flapper niece made fun of a "Gibson girl" of Spanish-American war time. It had been clinging to his walls all these years. Poor fellow, he went sentimental as the century ended, having loved and lost, and still the fading face with the pompadour and obsolete clothes suggests to him the girl of his dreams.

Although the "Gibson girl," once the ideal American girl, no longer is imitated by fashion plate designers, she isn't extinct so long as old time swains revere her. Many a cavalier of yore has one on his walls, or buried in a treasure chest, and Charles Dana Gibson, ever prolific, still has his settled fame in her.

Even in his Christmas drawing of an old gentleman and an old lady stepping out, with the avowal, "We believe in Santa Claus," one finds some semblance of the now old-fashioned maid. This drawing is going into Mr. Gibson's magazine, "Life," which he bought after his sketches therein brought him wealth. Gone are his girls from the dens in women's colleges, but he still calls his wife "Cutie," and talks glowingly of his early one-dollar prize sketch of President Garfield.

Comes Out For New York Food.

A food addict declares himself mistrustful of hotels and restaurants with excessively long bills-of-fare. It stands to reason, he argues, that they cannot afford to maintain such a variety of dishes at a high standard, with all ingredients fresh. His advice to eager visitors, loath to waste any time on indifferent grub, is to seek out the places that show pride in their own specialities.

This epicure, by the way, differs violently with the disgruntled ones who insist that prohibition doomed discriminating dining. He holds the contrary true, remembering that in the old days the epicures, desparing of good cooking in public restaurants, formed eating clubs, hired their own chefs, and set to at their own boards.

"These grouches," explains our dissenter, "have dyspepsia from eating the food they praise. New York contains the epicures of the earth. They come from smaller places all over the county. Their judgment on cooking was formed in true American homes, where the mothers of a passing generation put all of their sound sense and energy into preparing the most tasty of viands. And ever since they left home their sons and daughters have been questing for meals like mother used to make."

Thus, one epicure brands as false the story of the traveler who saw over the restaurant pies a sign, "Like Mother Used to Make," inquired if that were really so, and then ordered ice cream.

The Background of Foreign Affairs

Long Live the King! Mexico Makes a Peaceful Change; Celebrating Jugo-Slav Disunity; Every Man His Own Diplomat.

BY HENRY KITTREDGE NORTON.

(Copyright, 1928, for the Atlanta Constitution.)

All over the world anxious eyes have scanned each new edition of the papers for the latest news of the condition of King George, of England. In this world-wide interest there has been little but sincere solicitude for the life of a man whose personal decorum and devotion to his duties have won universal respect.

If there has been any other thought in connection with the matter it has concerned the succession to the throne. There seems to be a somewhat widespread impression that the Prince of Wales does not care for the responsibilities of kingship and will, therefore, step aside in favor of his brother, the Duke of York. Strengthening this impression, one hears quoted various statements of apocryphal origin to the effect that the prince has stated that he would not ascend the throne.

One of our own aspirants to political honors once remarked that no man ever ran away from the presidency. Heirs apparent in the past have exhibited no greater inclination to renounce the higher honor of kingship.

In his travels about the world the Prince of Wales has endeared himself to millions of people because of his qualities as a man. It should not be forgotten, however, that these journeys have been made as a public service. He has been playing and playing well, the part which fell to him as the heir to the British throne. Possibly no one of his predecessors has prepared himself more broadly for the duties which would fall upon him as king.

There are a number of thrones which a young man of spirit might hesitate to mount, but this does not apply to the throne of England. As king and emperor the British monarch occupies a unique position. He is much more the symbol of the unity of the empire than a ruler. The self-governing dominions have already relieved London of all the responsibilities of government except those which concern the empire as a whole. But the question of loyalty to the throne has never been seriously raised. Without its king, England would soon find herself entangled in problems the solution of which no one could foresee. Even the socialists, with their congenital antipathy to kings, have no desire to abolish the British throne.

For the second time in succession the Republic of Mexico has witnessed a peaceful transfer of the presidency. When General Obregon was assassinated there were many ready to claim that Calles would avail himself of the opportunity to remain in office. Some of his bitterest enemies did not hesitate to accuse him of complicity in the assassination for this very purpose.

Calles, however, put a quietus on this kind of talk by a prompt and final announcement that he would not only give up his office at the end of his term, but that he would never occupy the presidency again. Critics may discount the latter statement as they will, but the former has already been fulfilled, and Senor Portes Gil has added his name to the meager list of civilians who have occupied the Mexican presidency.

Mexico is entitled to all credit both for the peaceful change of office and the elevation of a civilian instead of a military man to the chief magistracy, but a certain degree of caution should be exercised before concluding that either democracy or civilian control has been established in Mexico. The group headed by General Obregon and General Calles has ruled the country with firmness and some measure of credit during the last eight years. Despite Obregon's death, that group remains firmly in the saddle. So long as they remain united they can maintain Portes Gil or any one else in the presidency. Without them President Calles is by no means stepping out of the picture. The day after his retirement from office he became the head of a great new political party, which, despite the fact that it was formed to support the government, designates itself "revolutionary." The same group of generals and politicians, under a new name, continue to govern Mexico under a new president.

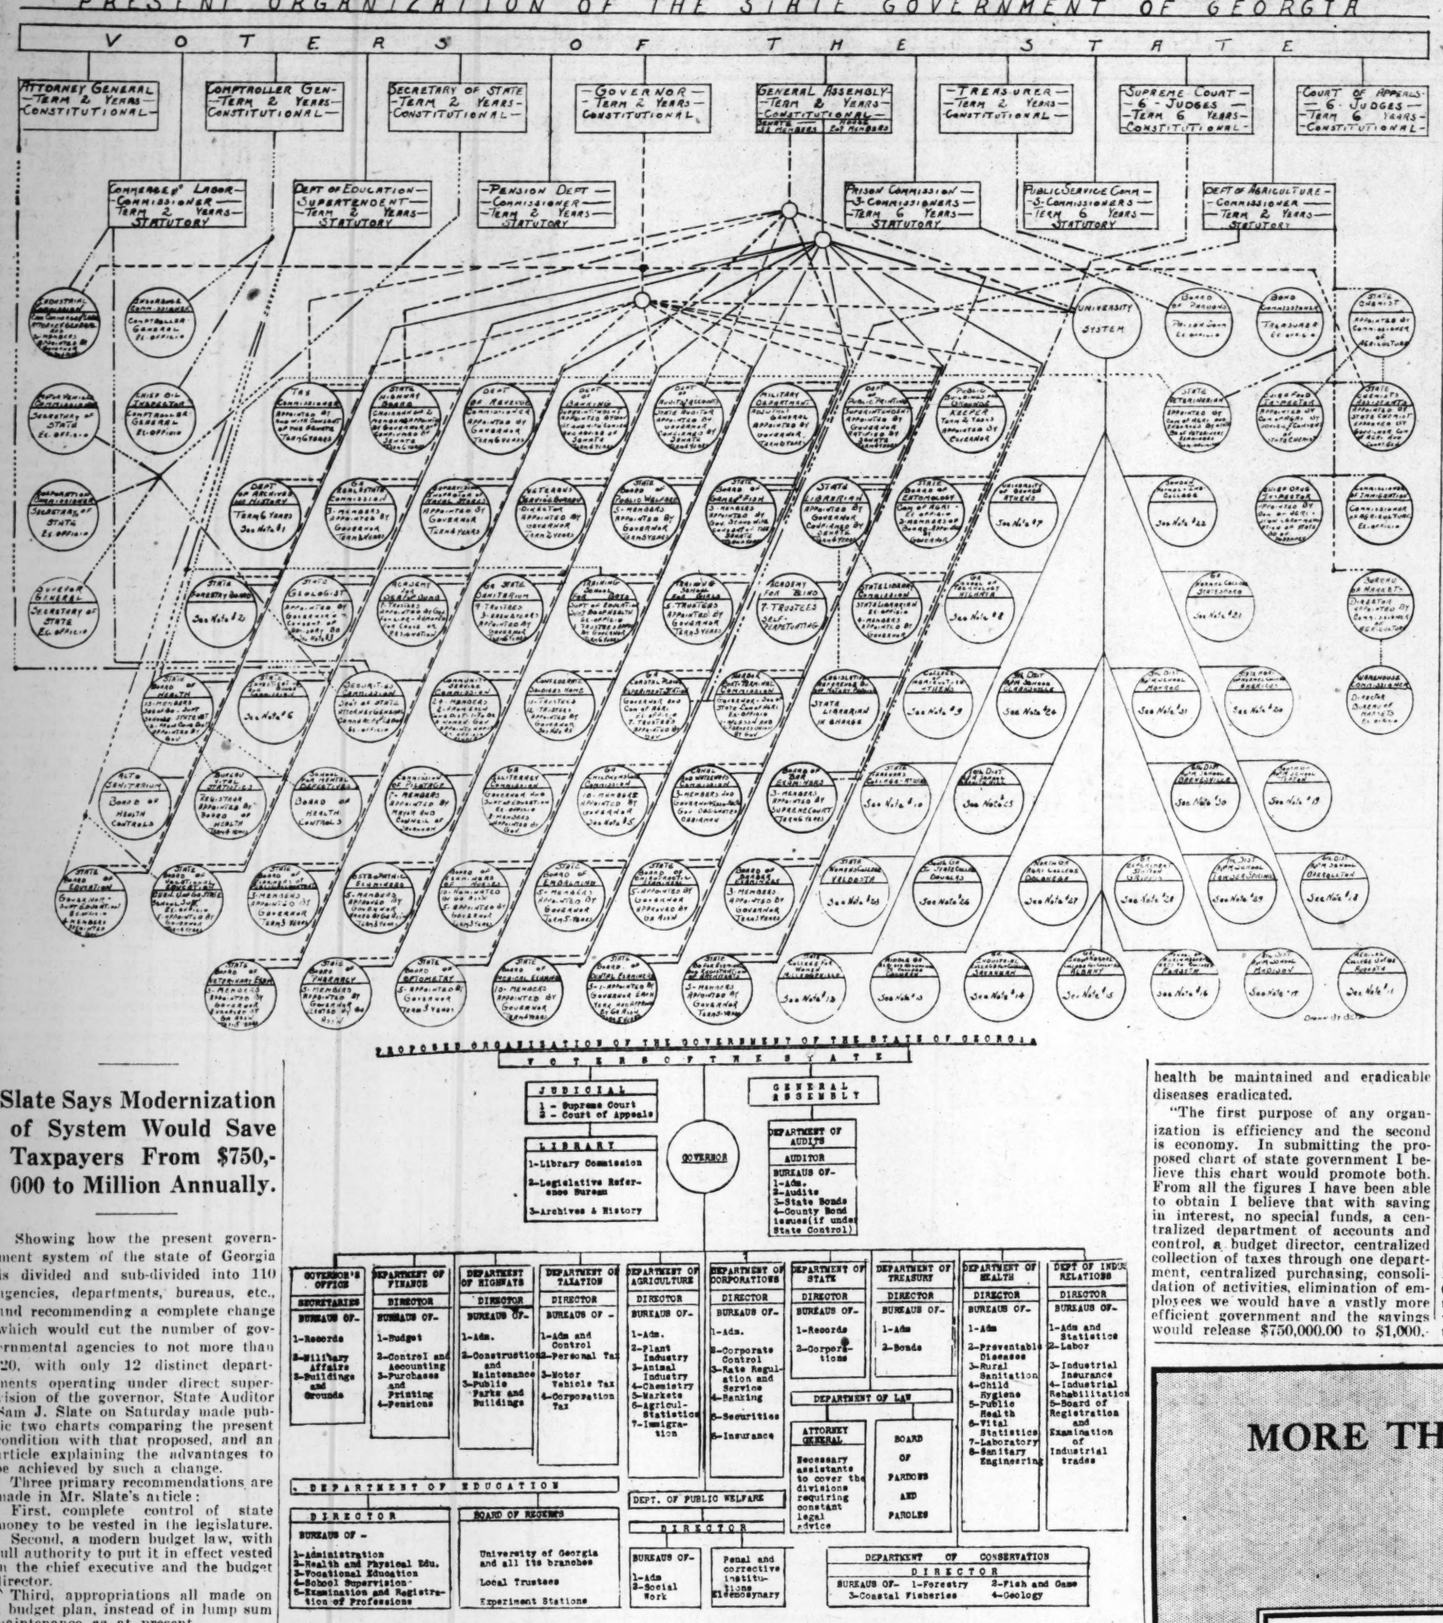
The kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes has made a commendable attempt to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the unification of the South Slavs. Such celebrations are usually dull affairs. Not so this one. It was enlivened by a goodly amount of rioting and frequent clashes with the police.

The difficulty is that the unification did not unify. The southern Slavic peoples are less united today than they were at the formation of the new kingdom ten years ago. They are probably much less unified than when they were ruled from Vienna, Budapest and Constantinople. Then, at least, they were united in the desire to be free. The culmination of this desire in the formation of the Jugo-Slav kingdom has for all of the groups except the Serbs, proved illusory. The new kingdom was built upon the framework of the old kingdom of Serbia. The Croats, the Slovenes, the Bosnians, the Dalmatians and the rest were simply transferred from the rule of Vienna or Budapest to that of Belgrade. They have not been highly pleased with the change. In their way of looking at the matter they have never been allowed to participate equably in the new government. On the contrary, they feel that the Serbians have simply extended their rule over territories which they are not properly equipped to administer.

The conflict, especially in the case of the Croats, the largest and wealthiest of the new groups, is complicated by differences of religion and background. The Croats consider themselves somewhat civilized in the European sense. They look upon the Serbs as only partly civilized, even in an Oriental sense. Thus, while the Serbs were eager to celebrate ten years of South Slavic unity, and said it with perfervid orations, the Croats were equally eager to demonstrate the disunity, and said it with brickbats.

Congressman Britten, as has happened on occasions to many another of his countrymen, had a good iden. Ordinarily when Americans have good ideas they find a few enthusiastic friends to agree with them and group enthusiasm begins to ferment. Then they get some wealthy gentlemen and ladies to contribute to "the cause." As soon as this happens a professional "secretary" steps into the berth thus

State Auditor Urges New Governmental System for Georgia In Place of Present Complicated Plan of Numerous Bureaus



Upper chart shows the cumbersome and expensive method of government, with its scattered responsibility in many departments and bureaus, now in force in Georgia. The smaller and lower chart shows the modern, simplified plat of state rule, advocated by State Auditor Sam J. Slate.

Slate Says Modernization of System Would Save Taxpayers From $750,000 to Million Annually.

Showing how the present government system of the state of Georgia is divided and sub-divided into 110 agencies, departments, bureaus, etc., and recommending a complete change which would cut the number of governmental agencies to not more than 20, with only 12 distinct departments operating under direct supervision of the governor, State Auditor Sam J. Slate on Saturday made public two charts comparing the present condition with that proposed, and an article explaining the advantages to be achieved by such a change.

Three primary recommendations are made in Mr. Slate's article:

First, complete control of state money to be vested in the legislature.

Second, a modern budget law, with full authority to put it in effect vested in the chief executive and the budget director.

Third, appropriations all made on a budget plan, instead of in lump sum maintenance as at present.

To Effect Saving.

Mr. Slate declare that adoption of the method he outlines and scrapping of the present archaic governmental system would give the taxpayers greater value for every tax dollar or, in other words, would achieve the same efficiency or better at an annual saving of from $750,000 to $1,000,000.

The two charts accompanying Mr. Slate's article are reproduced herewith, the larger showing the far reaching division of state authority and jurisdiction into innumerable bureaus and boards, as it is now constituted, and the smaller showing the method that Mr. Slate advocates.

Auditor's Explanation.

His explanatory article follows:

"In order that the people of Georgia may more clearly understand what has been proposed by this department in the shape of an organization of state government to meet our needs, I submit two charts: One of the present organization which shows its cumbersomeness and one of the proposed plan. To remedy certain conditions, we must have three things.

"First, for the legislature to assume control of the state's money and to have every dime of gross income of every nature paid into the treasury and every expenditure authorized by legislative appropriation.

"Second, to pass a modern budget law with full authority in the executive and budget director to carry the law into effect.

"Third, appropriation should be made on a budget plan and no longer under a lump sum maintenance.

Scattered Authority.

"Our present condition is that we have our different departments and institutions now acting, in many instances, as collectors of revenue and drawing their money in lump sum from the treasury, making expenditures and often going into debt without centralized authority and direction. Under this method, in the future, as in the past, we will reward extravagance and disobedience to legislative mandates by a deficiency appropriation and punish economy because, after paying unauthorized deficits, the legislature has no money to give a department or institution which has lived within its income, however great the need might be for expansion in such department or institution.

"We have no control over purchases nor over appropriations for buildings. A department of finance or of accounts and control should be established at the capitol to handle the purchases and keep the accounts of the state departments and institutions. The general purpose of an auditing control procedure is to forestall any illegal or irregular expenditures before they are disbursed and to account promptly for the collection and deposit of cash receipts. This amounts to a pre-audit of accounts as distinguished from a post-audit, or periodical audit.

"The controller shall keep all the books and issue warrants on treasurer covering all disbursements. In general, he should know before a disbursement warrant is issued that the expenditure covered by warrant does not represent a claim already paid, does not create a deficit in cash belonging to fund upon which warrant is drawn, or an over-expenditure; that the expenditure is charged against correct appropriation; that the quantity and quality of commodities were received as represented and the prices were in accord with purchase agreement. In the question of receipts, he should have sufficient evidences, as the transactions occur, that amounts owing the state are promptly received, collected and deposited to its credit as provided by law.

One Purchaser.

"All purchases should be under control of one official who should do the buying for the state and who should be in the controller's office and the controller should approve all purchases to see that the appropriations are not burdened with debt. Our purchase system will have to be changed to secure auditing control, and I know of no business concern buying more than a million dollars of supplies that indiscriminately leaves purchasing to nearly ninety different people.

"The governor should be in fact the executive head of the state governments and with him should meet once a month the administrative heads to discuss problems, all cooperating and thinking of the state as a unit, but with a single desire, and that to improve the state's service to her citizens. The opinion of many as to boards as a head of administrative departments vary. Business almost invariably adopts the one man head. My experience as auditor, with experience gleaned in conference with other state auditors, does not impress me with boards as administrative bodies.

"Theorists advocate them, but in practice they do not promote efficiency. Where quasi judicial functions are to be exercised, boards should be used, but where only administrative functions are employed, one responsible head accountable to the governor and the legislature and taxpayers is more desirable. All administrative officers, not elected by the people and of the responsibility set forth by this plan, should be appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate.

Accounting System.

"In the bureau of accounts and control a complete system of general accounting for the state should be installed. These accounts will displace all accounts now kept except the treasurer's account. A consolidation of these accounts will reduce the number of employees and will give effective accounting control over the state's income and expenditures, which is impossible under present procedure. The controller should approve all disbursements and draw warrants on treasurer, doing away with present procedure. This will give us really comparable figures for a budget. The controller should approve all contracts made by the purchasing agent and records should be kept to prevent the encumbrance of appropriations.

"The state auditor should audit the accounts of the controller and carefully check same.

"The state auditor should not be appointed by the governor, but should be elected by the legislature so that weak spots may be disclosed and that the legislative body have an independent fiscal official. This is necessary in order to provide an independent check upon the financial management of the administration and when this is done no other check is required. The auditor should not be entangled with the administrative work for this reason, should not serve as ex-officio member of any board.

Trustees Total 321.

"In education, we have an unusual situation. The common schools are consolidating, and yet in our higher educational system we have twenty-four educational institutions, 321 trustees, all indepedent, all working outside of general supervision and control, doing, in many instances, splendid work. We spend $2,000,000 a year on these institutions for maintenance. No particular place is assigned to any school in our educational plan; in fact, we have none. Jealousies flourish and institutions compete with each other for funds and pupils.

"This condition will not be changed until we have a small body of men, not over seven, to arrange an educational plan for the state linking each school in its proper place and this body to present the needs of the entire system. We can never hope to get value under the present system.

"The same condition exists in a smaller degree at our institutions. Until they are linked together and experiences are made common property, we will lack in accomplishment; although I do desire to say that the institutions of Georgia have been well managed.

To Provoke Criticism.

"These charts are given the public to provoke constructive criticism and to call the attention of our citizens to the cost of government. If through archaic organization and cumbersome methods the value of our tax dollar is reduced, surely we have intelligence and patriotism enough to correct the evil. I have an abiding faith in the people of Georgia and when the situation is considered; prudently, carefully and wisely, our representatives in the legislature are going to give our citizens that organization of state government through which our governmental activities can most wisely, effectively, efficiently and economically function.

"All I desire is that the government of our state be placed upon a responsible basis clearly understood, that taxations be fair, equitable and just and that proper economy be practiced, that tax money be carefully handled, that administrative expenses be reduced, and that responsibility be definitely fixed, that we have definite plans of building highways, a real system of education, a proper organization for social welfare work and that the dependent wards of the state be properly supported and that public health be maintained and eradicable diseases eradicated.

"The first purpose of any organization is efficiency and the second is economy. In submitting the proposed chart of state government I believe this chart would promote both. From all the figures I have been able to obtain I believe that with saving in interest, no special funds, a centralized department of accounts and control, a budget director, centralized collection of taxes through one department, centralized purchasing, consolidation of activities, elimination of employees we would have a vastly more efficient government and the savings would release $750,000.00 to $1,000,000.00 to be devoted to other functions of state government if needed or would save the taxpayers of the state this amount."

THREE ARE PROMOTED BY POWER COMPANY

Trio of Younger Executives Get More Important Posts With Utility.

Promotion of three of the younger executives of the Georgia Power company is announced by W. E. Mitchell, vice president and general manager of the company. The promotions, which go to C. B. McManus, Jack J. McDonough and R. T. Porter, become effective immediately.

Mr. McManus, who has held the position of superintendent of district operations since July, 1927, becomes assistant operating manager under J. M. Oliver, who, as operating manager, has supervision over the electrical department of the company. Mr. McManus will be in charge of all electrical physical properties.

Mr. McManus is a graduate of Alabama Polytechnic institute at Auburn. Following his graduation in 1916, he took a student engineering course with the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company and then associated himself with the Alabama Power company. He remained with that company until his transfer to the Georgia Power company in 1927.

Mr. McDonough, formerly a famous quarterback at Georgia Tech, becomes district manager at Dublin for the company. After leaving Tech he became an instructor at the Savannah High school and about two years ago associated himself with the Georgia Power company, formerly being stationed at Brunswick. In his new position Mr. McDonough will have supervision over the company's service in the Dublin, McRae and Vidalia districts.

R. T. Porter, who becomes assistant manager of the new Macon division of the company under B. R. Chestney, division manager, also is a graduate of Alabama Polytechnic institute. Following his graduation he went to work for the Alabama Power company and served in various capacities until a year ago when he was transferred to the Georgia Power company as division superintendent of operations in the Dublin division.

JOINT MEETING FOR BOULEVARD BODIES ON MONDAY

A joint meeting will be held at 8 o'clock Monday evening, in the Virginia Avenue Baptist church, by the North Boulevard Park Civic league and the North Boulevard Park Woman's club, it was announced Saturday.

This is the annual meeting of the league and officers for the year will be elected. A musical program has been arranged by the Woman's club, under direction of Mrs. C. S. Connell. Included in this program will be the Elks' quartet and the Bell Telephone string orchestra.

TURKISH STUDENT AT TECH WRITES OF OWN COUNTRY

Tevfik Fikret, Turkish student at Georgia Tech, is anxious that Americans generally forget some erroneous impressions they have about his country and learn the true status of affairs in the land of the young Turk.

"My only desire," says Fikret, in a recent article, "is to see a better understanding and a closer relation between Turkey and this country. In this respect I know I represent the desire of my people. I sincerely urge American people and American youth, especially, to study modern Turkey. We wish American people to look at Turkey and its people not with the eyes of half a century ago, but with the eyes of today. We young Turks are deeply interested in the strong, sound morality of American youth and in your wonderful civilization. More than fifteen Turkish boys and girls came to America this year to attend your universities. This number is sure to increase in future years."

Fikret was inspired to write his impressions of America and its relation to modern Turkey, after attending a banquet of the cosmopolitan clubs of Tech and Emory, at which fifty students representing more than a dozen nations were present.

The Turkish student says he selected Georgia Tech for his American alma mater because of the delightful Atlanta climate.

"Today's Turkey," he says, "is not the old Turkish empire. Many important reforms, social, political, judicial and economic, have been made in the past few years. Now, the young Turkish republic has a constitution which give real sovereignty to the people.

"There is no more polygamy or the old, easy divorce. Our president, Gazi Moustafa Kemal Pasha, has said, "Our women ought to be the equals of the men in their education and activities."

"The young republic of Turkey," he says further, "has a big commercial relation of the United States of America. Many Americans are now living in the larger Turkish cities and there are four big American educational institutions over there.

"We have adopted the Latin characters in writing, instead of Arabic and this one reform alone has opened untold avenues of learning and culture barred to our older generations."

Fikret came to America about two months ago. He is a graduate of the International college at Smyrna, an American institution. He is studying electrical engineering.

DECATUR CHURCH TO HEAR RECITAL BY DR. SHELDON

The new parish house of Holy Trinity Episcopal church, on East Ponce de Leon avenue, Decatur, having been recently completed and the new pipe organ installed, the fellowship club of that church is sponsoring an organ recital to be given by Dr. Charles Sheldon in the church auditorium at 8 o'clock Monday evening. Tickets are on sale at the Cable Piano company, Atlanta: Elkins Drug store, Decatur, and will be on sale at the church on the night of the recital.

Dr. Sheldon has prepared an unusually full and interesting program of 12 numbers of particular interest among them being the grand march from Aida, Schubert's Unfinish Symphony and Beethoven's Minuet in C.

The program follows:

Processional Hymn by the choir—Dedication of the organ.
1. Laudate Dominum (A Song of Praise)—Sheldon.
2. Largo—from "Xerxes"—Handel.
3. Grand March from "Aida"—Verdi.
4. A Japanese Sunset—Jessie Deppen.
5. Prelude, in C-sharp Minor (new)—Anton Vodorinskl.
6. Nocturne—Sheldon.
7. Symphony in B Minor (The Unfinished)—Schubert.
(First movement).
8. Largo from "New World Symphony"—Dvorak.
9. Song of the Boatman of the River Volga—Russian Folk.
10. Tocaccita from "Fifth Symphony"—Widor.
11. Minuet in G—Beethoven.
Recessional hymn by the choir.

YALE CLUB SINGS HERE ON CHRISTMAS EVENING

Glee Club To Present Varied Program at Atlanta Concert on Holiday.

The Yale Glee club will appear in the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium on Christmas evening, an occasion marking a re-engagement here on this date. A group of eight Atlanta Yale men are sponsoring the concert.

This year will be the sixty-third anniversary of the Glee club, and their concert here will be one of the leading musical and social events of the season.

The itinerary leading up to the Atlanta performance will include Plainfield, Washington, Pinehurst, Memphis and Little Rock, then continue on to Louisville, Dayton and Pittsburgh. The most significant accomplishment of the club in its entire history has been the overwhelming success of the European trip last summer. Invading the music centers of six European countries and England, the club performed with the approbation of the most critical audiences of the world.

The Glee club, is now composed of 44 members who will present at the concert here, December 25, a varied type of program that will appeal through its versatility to every temperament. The program will consist of serious songs, semi-serious, college songs and will be concluded with "Bright College Years," the Yale anthem.

This year the club is under the direction of Morris Watkins, Columbia, 1924, who has taken over temporarily the position of Marshall M. Bartholomew, 1907, who has been the musical director of the club and the salient factor in the remarkable development and improvement of the singing, for the last seven years. Mr. Bartholomew, during his sabatical year, is studying in Europe and has in hand the composition of a song book.

COLLEEN IN COMEDY AT METROPOLITAN

Colleen Moore, Lawrence Gray, Ford Sterling, Claude Gillingwater, Alan Hale and Julanne Johnston make up the brilliant cast that appear in Colleen Moore's latest picture, "Oh Kay," which will be shown this week at the Metropolitan.

All the pep, fun and glee characteristic of Colleen Moore pictures is said to be present in this production, with more added. It is the story of a girl who escaped marriage to a nincompoop in England by taking off in a small boat, only to fall in the hands of rum runners and learns that they will take her back to gain the reward offered for her return. She escapes and reaches America with only a bathing suit to wear, no friends to turn to. With her is one of the rum runners who had come ashore to see the handing of the contraband, which is stored in the basement of a Long Island home to await delivery—and then the fun begins. The owner returns and finds the clothesless girl and her friend, who try to pose as cook and cook's wife.

"Oh Kay" is taken from the stage show of the same name, made famous a few years ago by Elsie Janis who, incidentally, adapted it for the screen.

Clara Bow, Glyn, Produce Another 'Flaming Fillum'

"Three Week Ends" will be seen at the Howard this week with Clara Bow in the leading role.

Gladys O'Brien, so the story goes, the cabaret dancer living on East Side and dreaming of wealthy West, vows "When I marry it'll be for 'do-re-me.' But, into the heart of a rich playboy and poverty-stricken salesman she dances. Love refuses to listen to reason. So how does she get the "big-time Romeo" out of the way and win her "small fry!"

"It" startled the world. The word itself became a household descriptive term for personality because it meant pep-push and "you'd be surprised," the total—Clara Bow. Clarence Badger, director of "It" and the second Bow-Glyn opus, "Red Hair," directed "Three Week Ends."

The leading man is Neil Hamilton, as the salesman, while Harrison Ford essays the role of the wealthy "big shot." A "new find," Lucile Powers, and five character actors, are in the supporting cast.

On the Vitaphone is offered Val Harris with Anna Howe in "The Wild Westerner," and Mary Haynes in "The Beauty Shop."

FOUR PICTURES SEEN THIS WEEK AT PONCE DE LEON

Four more stellar pictures are booked for appearance this week on the screen of the Ponce de Leon theater, these to be supplemented Friday night by the usual "amateur night" program, according to announcement Saturday by the Swint & Davis management of the popular community playhouse at Ponce de Leon avenue and Boulevard.

Colleen Moore, the dainty and piquant little star of "Lilac Time" and other screen classics, will take leading honors in Monday's attraction, "We Moderns." She plays the part of a bored English flapper, and Jack Mulhall is a perfect foil for her delightful love scenes.

Richard Barthelmess in "Out of the Ruins," will hold the spotlight Tuesday and Wednesday. This First National feature picture deals with the daring exploits of a French "Blue Devil" and his passionate love for the new star, Marian Nixon, who plays the part of a French girl.

Thursday and Friday bring to the screen Clara Bow in her famous picture, "The Fleet's In," a Paramount sensation that has been hailed everywhere as one of the finest comedies produced in recent years. The picture has as a background a seaport town visited by the American training ships, and Clara gets every smile possible out of the situation growing out of the rivalry of two "gobs" for her affection. The Friday "amateur night" program will see an unusual array of local talent, and a capacity attendance is assured.

Saturday's picture is "Dead Man's Curve," a thriller with the popular young Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in the leading role.

West End.

"The Cossacks" is the screen attraction for West End Monday and Tuesday. John Gilbert with Renee Adoree as the heroine is seen as a Russian soldier. "Roses of Yesterday" will be the added syncro-phone number.

Wednesday, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in "Dead Man's Curve." Sally Blane supports in this auto racing thriller. Thursday Marion Davies in "Quality Street," Barrie's charming comedy of love and war, is now offered in a film with Marion Davies as the comedienne.

Friday "King Vidor's, "The Crowd." Only King Vidor can give us such a drama of American people, how they live, what they do, and the average family transplanted in a screen story that we all can understand. Saturday Milton Sills with Doris Kenyon in "The Hawk's Nest," underworld war with Oriental setting.

The United States takes about 80 per cent of the world's diamond production.

Rogers Manages Girls' School In Keith Film

The new show taking the boards and screen at the Georgia Monday boasts of a vaudeville bill topped by Roscoe Ails, "Broadway's Celebrated Dancing Comedian" and a film play rated by critics as one of the "peaches" of the new season.

"Someone to Love," starring Charles "Buddy" Rogers and Bary Brian, is a comedy-melodrama. The story finds Buddy Rogers in the role of manager of a girls' school, where all the fair subjects have a crush on him. He tries to evade them and reach the age of an old batchelor, but he fumbles, and in fumbling is said to create some very romantic and comic situations.

Another feature of "Someone t Love" is the inclusion of that irresistible comedey-man, William Austin.

UNDERWORLD FILM, SHIEK ROMANCE, NOW AT GRAND

With two notable cinema hits of the present season booked for return engagements at Loew's Grand theater this week the steadily increasing popularity of that theater upder its new policy will receive new impetus when the pictures are such unquestioned successes as "Tenderloin" with Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel and "Fazil" the William Fox production with Charles Farrell and Greta Nissen in leading roles.

"Tenderloin" will be offered at Loew's Grand Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. It is one of the classic stories of night life and gang warfare. It depicts thrilling battles betwen police and bandits, schemes and counter-schemes between crooks seeking to despoil each other, and the love story of a boy and girl struggling to free themselves from the tentacles of criminals.

Quite as stirring in interest but of an entirely different type is "Fazil" the offering for Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Here is pure romance with most of the scenes laid in Paris and in an enchanting Oriental desert nation. It has its sheiks and its dancing girls and many other glamorous Arabian features as well as some remarkable scenes of night life in Paris, the gay fun capital of the world.

Cameo.

A deft and skillful combination of melodrama, pathos, comedy and realism, told in scenes both colorful and thrilling makes "Danger Street," the underworld picture which opens at the Cameo Monday a most entertaining picture. It delves deeply into the previously untouched life of the uppercrust of the underworld, showing the workings of New York's tenderloin district. Warner Baxter has the leading role.

"Beware of Widows," which shows Wednesday and Thursday, is the screen story of a wild and hilarious night on a luxurious houseboat with Laura La Plante. The blonde star heads a cast of superb farceurs in this adaptation from the stage success by Owen Davis. Hoot Gibson and his band of wild-riding buddies are due to burst into town again when "Clearing the Trail," his latest for Universal shows at the Cameo Friday and Saturday.

In the New York Theaters

BY PERCY HAMMOND

New York, December 8.—Miss Barrymore, who since her childhood has patiently endured the enmity of American dramatic critics, at last turns upon them with the thunderbolts of her pen. Having suffered for years the tortures of injustice, she decides that forebearance is the pettiest of the virtues and that it is time for retaliation. Therefore, in the December issue of "The American Sketch," she rips into the reviewers and proves that their assaults upon her and her art have been no less than brutal. Sick with waiting for an American critic to admit that she is a genius, not a mere beauty, she denounces the craft as cruel, ungenerous and unappreciative. More in petulance than in choler, she tells the subscribers to "The American Sketch" that all the encouragement she has ever had has come from foreign parts. She contrasts the hostile "broadsides" of such savages as Percy Hammond and Heywood Broun with the "exciting praises of Max Reinhardt, Edward Bourdet and others. Messrs. Broun and Hammond, Miss Barrymore says, have caused her worry and heartache. They have written, she writes, "that my triumphs are just due to my personality or my appearance or to anything but what I really feel they should say."

Having in my little way, suffered similar agonies of detraction, I sympathize with Miss Barrymore in her revolt. Like the pale martyr in his shirt of fire I, too, have writhed amongst the burning faggots. But still I feel that Miss Barrymore is a trifle supersensitive in the circumstances. In all my scrapbooks I can find no review of her performances that have not been complimentary. From Ashton Stevens, in San Francisco and Chicago, to Bide Dudley, in New York, the reviewers have been eloquently cognizant of her superiority. Miss Barrymore's career from swadding clothes to her present maturity has been accompanied by newspaper panegyrics acclaiming her merits both as a person and an artiste. She has been established as the first actress, a sole and unparalleled contact between human beings and the stage. I have been writing about her for 30 years, man and boy, and I recall no phrase that was not flattering. Flattering, but not, perhaps, flattering enough. When the critics say that she is very great they should say that she is very, very great, lest they hurt her feelings.

Broadway spies fetch me the news that Miss Barrymore's indignation is so fervent that she has made a long list of obnoxious persons to whom admission will be refused at the dedication of the Ethel Barrymore theater. I am told that she has issued instructions to the Messrs. Shubert that the gates shall be barred against all American critics except me and Mr. Broun, whom she regards as her direst adversaries. That grave gesture indicates her courage if not her vindictiveness; and in case she lets me in I promise with reservation to bend my knees as usual.

Miss Jane Cowl, one of Miss Barrymore's sisterly rivals, does not allow herself to be vexed by the inabilities of the newspaper critics. She smiles at the inefficiencies and is content to let them disparage her and her performances without protest. Her present play represents her in a mood of contrition.

After a period of evil association as the lustful matron of "The Road to Rome" she turns idyllic in "The Jealous Moon" and is quite the most fragrant of the heroines now diffusing sweetness in the Time Square orchards. Although as a modest man I disapproved of Miss Cowl's impudence in Mr. Sherwood's naughty prank, I found her less engrossing last week as a die-away ingenue, languishing in the molasses of a story-book honeycomb. "The Jealous Moon" was almost too sweet to be let live and the brows of the first nighters were furrowed with perplexity as they wondered whether to kiss it or kill it. They were inclined to kiss it.

I confess a disinterest in dramas about showfolks, excepting, of course, such epics as "The Royal Family." Especially does the insect life of the Pierrots and Columbines inspire me to seek the open air, and the pantaloons and scaramouches add nothing to the glee of my playgoing. Therefore I am incompetent to speak of "The Jealous Moon" with the cold neutrality of an impartial judge. It recites with considerable stickiness the dream-love of Miss Cowl as an adorable Columbine, and Mr. Merivale as a passionate and misunderstanding Pierrot. As co-stars in an Italian marionette troupe they are led to romance by propinquity, but are sadly separated by fate. Pierrot goeos to sleep and dreams of voluptuous occurrences in Venice, with Miss Cowl eating her heart out in regal splendor, and Mr. Merivale, similarly yearnful, appearing as a humble punchinello in one of her palatial revels. They coo to each other from a distance in the dream, and after they wake up in the epilogue they become permanently emparadised in one another's arms. Heart-beat to heart-beat Miss Cowl and Mr. Merivale atone for their rascalities in "The Road to Rome."

Act of Cowardice Influences Lives Of Five People

The manner in which a temporary fit of cowardice on the battle field can affect the lives of five people is revealed in "Man, Woman and Wife," the new Universal production which will be offered this week at Loew's capitol theater with Norman Kerry and Pauline Starke in leading roles supported by a cast which includes Kenneth Harlan and Marian Nixon.

Using the battle front and the underworld of New York as backgrounds, the film narrates a romance centering around five persons. The happiness of each is so wound up in the fate of the others that interest and suspense results. The ending shows fearlessness of movie custom on the part of Director Edward Laemmle; when the picture closes in a climax that that is said to be one of the most unusual ever screened.

"Man, Woman and Wife" is not an ordinary type of picture, according to Laemmle. "I attempted to depict truthfully the story of a man whose every buffet by life reacted on a number of other persons," said the director. "The situations are different from those generally encountered in a motion picture. I tried to make the players respond to them in a way that was suitable to the story. Kerry and Miss Starke both gave me unusual portrayals. As a matter of fact the entire cast did exceptional work."

MYSTERY FILM IS NEW PHOTOPLAY AT RIALTO

The latest mystery opus, "The Haunted House," plays at the Rialto this week.

Spine tingling escapades as a mad doctor kidnaps a beautiful girl, weird effects to the nth degree, menacing shots, every contrivance known to creators of hair-raising masterpieces is said to make "The Haunted House" good entertainment. The story centers about an old house wherein a fortune is supposed to be hidden and in which various claimants experience strange encounters on a dreary, stormy night. Having a dismal, dingy house, a ghost, hearing the cries out into the angry night, shrieks from unknown spaces, "The Haunted House" holds one long thrill from the moment it starts until the final fade-out, it is said.

Beautiful Thelma Todd heads a cast including Chester Conklin, Larry Kent, Montague Love, Eve Southern and others as great.

HIRAM S BROWN NAMED R-K-O HEAD

Hiram S. Brown, newly elected president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum corporation, announced recently by David Sernoff, chairman of the board of directors, is internationally known and respected as a constructive expert in the fields of public utilities, national American finance and industrial reorganization.

He leaves the presidency of the United States Leather company to assume the same position at the head of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum organization. This selection is the result of long consideration by the board of directors of the giant among amusement enterprises.

HIRAM S. BROWN.

President Brown has not been known as a showman. When he was elected president of the United States Leather company, he was not a "leather man." Earlier in his career when he was appointed chief of the finance division of the national air service, he was not an aviator. But his genius for constructive administration and his tireless zeal in these vital activities, permitted, or rather compelled, to make hm successful in each of them.

In his new capacity as president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, Mr. Brown has at his command the almost infinite resources of a great amusement industry with its endless chain of theaters and the hearty cooperation of the officials who have built up the vaudeville structure including Edward F. Albee, foremost factor in vaudeville, who continues as president of Keith-Albee-Orpheum—the theater unit of the vast combination.

Coyotes, wolves, mountain lions and wildcats cost stock raisers in this country about $10,000,000 a year.

The first orchestra baton was used in France about 200 years ago to keep time by banging on the floor.

BERT WALTON, 'CYNIC,' TOPS NEW LOEW BILL

The old favorite "international cynic," Bert Walton, billed as "Le Reconteur Distingue," will appear as the headline attraction on the vaudeville bill which opens Monday at Lowes Capitol theater. This season's vehicle for Walton and his company is entitled "Reciprocity, Radio and Retribution," and is full of the "Waltonisms" originated by Bert, himself.

Braile and Pallo, with their Yugo-Slav Royal orchestra, will present another act on the new program. They are singers and dancers who have appeared in the best shows of the country. The orchestra with Allan Forest featured, plays the accompaniment for the dances of Braile and Pallo and also plays a program of musical numbers.

For a third feature the act of Earle and bell will be found on the new bill. Here are two harmony singers who sing and play a program of the latest hits in an act entitle "Tinkling Topical Tunes."

Much of th ecomedy element on the new program will be found in the turn of Harry B. Toomer and Ester Gay in a skit entitled "A Very Ba." Cold." This is a comedy sketch with Toomer appearings in a number of his original creations in the way of fun-making.

In the opening spot will be offered an act by Carr Brothers and Betty. They include comedy, novelty dancing and feats of hand balancing.

Twenty Nations To Compete In 1929 Oratorical Contest

Black line shows route of tour of South America to be given the seven finalists in the International Oratorical contest for high school students in 1929. The tour will start at Jacksonville and end at New York.

Twenty or more nations of the world will take part in the International Oratorical contest for secondary schools to be held in 1929. This announcement was made by Randolph Leigh, director of the contest, recently, at his office in Washington, D. C.

The tremendous growth of interest in these contests is shown, Mr. Leigh points out, by the rapid increase in the number of nations participating.

The 1929 contest, he states, will be the sixth national contest for the United States, and the fourth since it became international in scope.

The contests of 1926 and 1927 drew representative high school orators from England, France, Canada, Mexico and the United States. In 1928 all these countries took part, with the addition of Germany, Argentina and Cuba. As already stated more than twenty different countries will take part in 1929.

The arrangements for the 1929 contest contemplate the grouping of numbers of the smaller nations, in semi-final group contests. Thus the finalists who will go to Washington in October next year to determine the international high school oratorical championship for the year, will be limited to seven. The prizes offered this year consist of a complete tour of South America for each of the seven finalists.

As in the past, the orations will deal with subjects pertaining to the national constitution of each competing nation. They will be conducted in preliminary elimination contests in individual schools, districts, states and regions. State contests will, as before, be sponsored by leading newspapers of the respective states:

Also, as before, those eligible to compete must be bona fide secondary school pupils under 19 years of age on February 1, 1929. A graduated pupil taking post graduate work, even though under the age limit, is not eligible. In institutions offering collegiate as well as secondary courses, only those pupils in the grades paralleling the public high schools are eligible.

Model of Ship On Seals Owned By Mrs. Coolidge

The Tuberculosis Association of Atlanta has sent out by mail large numbers of the little seals, or stamps, which thoughtful Christmas givers put on their packages, etc., and thus make their contributions to the organization which is devoting its entire energies to warfare against tuberculosis, one of the greatest foes in the form of disease which ever ravaged the human race.

This year, on each seal—they sell for one cent each—is the picture of a model ship, with the tuberculosis double cross on the mainsail. The model from which this picture was made is the property of Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and now rests in the white house.

The model was made by Edward Thatcher, grandson of a man who ran away to sea at the age of nine, as a cabin boy, and whose love of salt water lives in his grandson, who expresses this love by making such wonderful ship models that he is one of the foremost authorities on this subject in the country.

Mr. Thatcher lives in New York He is a member of the faculty of Columbia university.

The ship seen on the Christmas seals is a Roman vessel, with both sail and oars as motive power. The great galley, with its bellying sail and long sweeps makes an impressive picture on the little stamps that carry the story of a modern crusade for health.

Psychology Lecture.

The new and practical psychology will be the subject of the lecture in applied psychology to be given by Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley ohtel.

Roscoe Ails Tops New Variety Bill On Keith Stage

In addition to the Buddy Rogers-Mary Brian picture, "Someone to Love," Keith's Georgia this week offers Roscoe Ails, "Broadway's Celebrated Dancing Comedian," with Shirley Dahl and "Syncopatic 's Hottiest Band." In thes days of democracy royal favor counts for little and so, Ails scoffs at the title "King of Jazz," preferring the opinion that he has been elected by the people to a very high office in syncopation land.

In this array of melody, mirth and dance, there are two others featured, Ralph Fenton and Dorothy Ellsworth. Mr. Ails has been a bill topper in vaudeville, a star in musical comedy, and a potentate in every form of entertainment. The balance of the bill is made up by the Three Eds in "Campus Harmony," and Lester and Irving Trio in "An Athletic Treat."

Alamo No. 2.

"Half a Bride," which will be the attraction at the Alamo theater Monday, was adapted from Arthur Stringer's daring treatment of the companionate marriage theme in "White Hands." Gray Cooper plays opposite Miss Ralston.

Its early sequences picture the fast jazz life of the wealthy younger set; it contains some delightful sea scenes, taken from the deck of the "Sultana," and its latter action is set in the intriguing locale of the deserted island.

'GETTING HOT' IS NEW 81 MIDNIGHT FROLIC

Something different in entertainment is promised white patrons of the 81 Theater who attend this week's "midnight frolic" performance Friday night at 11:30 o'clock.

"Getting Hot" is the name of the attraction scheduled for the appearance by Manager Tom Bailey, and the chief of the Decatur street playhouse, says it's a knockout.

"Getting Hot" boasts of two outstanding colored stars in its big cast. They are Zudora De Gaston, soubrette with a nation-wide reputation for personality and cleverness, and Sadie Crawford, whose talent as a violinist is known to audiences in many states and who is a singer and dancer of rare ability.

In addition to these, "Getting Hot" brings to the 81 funny comedians, excellent voices, fast dancing, snappy lines, tuneful songs and a big chorus of high-steppers.

"I believe this to be one of the finest shows yet booked for appearance before our white audiences," Manager Bailey said Saturday, "it certainly has won a reputation for itself, and I recommend early reservations of seats."

These will be on sale at Jacobs at Five Points and at the theater's box office.

As more constestants submitted the correct answers to the first 30 cartoons than there were awards, all contestants who submitted incorrect solutions were eliminated from further participation in the contest under Rule No. 5 of the Official Rules which requires that as many awards be reserved as there are contestants tied before any prize is awarded for a less correct set of answers, and that a second series of 30 cartoons be submitted to all tying contestants.

The exact wording of Rule 5 as it appeared in the official rules is as follows:

5. In case of ties, as many prizes will be reserved as there are people tied before any prizes are awarded for a less correct solution that is, if two or more people should tie in submitting the correct or nearest correct answers to the 30 cartoons, the first two or more prizes will be reserved for them, and the prizes will be awarded in order of the correctness of the answers of such contestants to a second series of 30 cartoons. If necessary to eliminate further ties as many as a third and fourth series of 30 cartoons each will be presented, after which, should any ties exist for any award each tying contestant will be given a duplicate prize.

The first tie-breaking series of 30 cartoons was submitted to each contestant who had correctly named the titles of the first 30 cartoons under the same rules as governed the submitting of answers to the first 30 cartoons. The exact wording of Rule 3 as it appeared in the official rules is as follows:

3. Entrants in THE MOVIETEST will be required to correctly identify the title of the motion picture represented by each cartoon. The person or persons correctly identifying the 30 cartoons and otherwise conforming to all of the rules as published herein shall be eligible for first prize in whatever Prize List (either 1st, 2d, or 3d) such contestant is competing. The person or persons submitting the next nearest correct solutions to the 30 cartoons shall be eligible to the additional prizes in the order of the correctness of their solutions, providing conformity is made to all of the rules of THE MOVIETEST.

Margaret E. Roberts	894 Virginia Ave.	Atlanta, Ga.	1	13	"	"	" 9, 10 & 11

The above has reference to Prize List No. 1. It shows that Sam S. Dewson, 156 Feld Ave., Decatur, submitted 23 correct answers in the first tie-breaking list, the highest number submitted of any contestant in this group, and is entitled to the first prize, which is the Hudson Super-Six Sedan.

F. M. Seagle, Box 595, Charlotte, N. C., submitted the second largest correct number which was 17, and entitles him to Prize No. 2, George Steck Grand Piano.

Mrs. W. F. Cox, Jr., Moultrie, Ga., and Ted R. Bowman, Atlanta, Ga., submitted the third largest correct solution, which was 16, and therefore tied for Third and Fourth Prizes, and a tie-breaking chart has been mailed to each. The one who submits the greatest number of correct answers in the tie-breaking chart will receive the Third Prize, and the second best solution the Fourth Prize, the Third Prize being a bedroom suite, the Fourth Prize being a dining room suite.

The next nearest correct solution was 15, sent in by Mrs. E. R. Hines, Milledgeville, Ga., and entitles her to the Fifth Prize, which is an Orthophonic Victrola.

The next nearest correct solution submitted was 14. The following three contestants submitted this number: Mrs. S. E. Price, Paul F. Nix and Mrs. G. L. Houck, Atlanta, Ga. These three contestants are tied for Prizes 6, 7 and 8. A tie-breaking chart has been submitted to each, and the one who submits the largest number of correct answers will be entitled to Prize No. 6, Northern Seal Ladies' Fur Coat. The second largest correct list will be entitled to Prize No. 7, Orthophonic Victrola, and the third largest correct list Eighth Prize, which is a Kelvinator Electric Refrigerator.

The next largest number of correct answers submitted in Prize List No. 1 was 13. Five contestants submitted this number: Mrs. C. W. Walton, Fort Valley, Ga.; Rachael Jabaley, Copperhill, Tenn.; Gordon B. Hulme, Kingston, Ga.; Grace Cowart, Dublin, Ga., and Margaret E. Roberts, Atlanta, Ga. Tie breaking charts have been submitted to each of these five contestants. There are only three more prizes, Nos. 9, 10 and 11. Therefore only three of these contestants can win a prize. The contestant submitting the largest number of correct answers to the second tie-breaking chart will be entitled to the Ninth Prize, a Steinite Console Radio. The one submitting the second largest list will be entitled to the Tenth Prize, Steinite Console Radio. The one submitting the third largest list, a Pathex Movie Camera and Projector. The two contestants submitting the least number of correct solutions will be eliminated, under the rules governing the contest.

F. M. Seagle	P. O. Box 595	Charlotte, N. C.	2	12	"	"	" 7, 8, 9 & 10

In Prize Group No. 2 there are ten prizes offered. Throughout the entire contest it was made clear to all contestants that while no contestant could win more than one prize in any one group of prizes, it was possible for a contestant to win a prize in each group. Mr. Sam S. Dewson, of Decatur, Ga., having sent in the largest number of correct answers on the first tie-breaking chart in Group No. 2, is entitled to the first prize in this group, which is an Essex Super-Six Sedan.

The next highest solution received in this group was 13. There were five who tied on 13, viz., Mrs. W. P. Harker, 378 Eighth St., N. E., Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. Ethel Merrill, Smyrna, Ga.; Mrs. J. L. Wallace, Ball Ground, Ga.; Mrs. W. F. Cox, Jr., Moultrie, Ga.; Mrs. J. H. Higgins, 9-C Av. Chicopee, Gainesville, Ga. Under the rules five prizes, viz., from 2 to 6 inclusive, are set aside for these tying contestants, and a tie-breaking chart has been submitted, and these five prizes will be awarded in accordance with the rules, as follows: The contestant submitting the greatest number of correct answers will receive second prize, a living room suite; the second best, third prize, Kelvinator refrigerator; the third best, fourth prize, Orthophonic Victrola; the fourth best, fifth prize, Steinite Table Model Radio; the fifth best, sixth prize, Steinite Console Radio.

The next best solutions in Group 2 were 12 correct answers, and there were five who tied on this number, viz., Mrs. Irene Pearson, 504 Pulliam St., S. W., Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. E. J. Reid, 1606 Emory Rd., Atlanta, Ga.; James Holmes, 201 McDonald St., Marietta, Ga.; Floyd Nix, Copperhill, Tenn.; Hugh T. Shockley, Spartanburg, S. C., and F. M. Seagle, Charlotte, N. C.

Only five of these six contestants will win a prize. The contestant who submits the largest number of correct answers will win Prize No. 8, Pathex Movie Camera and Projector; and the second largest number of correct answers will win eighth prize, Pathex Movie Camera and Projector; the third largest, ninth prize, Steinite Radio; the fourth largest, Steinite Radio, and the fifth and sixth or lowest numbers submitted of the six, will be eliminated under the rules governing the contest.

F. H. Lexow	1639 East 8th St.	Jacksonville, Florida	3	11	"	"	" 7, 8, 9 & 10

There were offered ten prizes in the third group. Mrs. W. P. Harker, 378 Eighth St., N. E., Atlanta, Ga., submitted the largest number of correct answers, which was 13, and which entitles her to the first prize in Group No. 3, an Essex Super-Six Coach.

The next largest correct number of answers submitted in this group was 12. Five contestants submitted this number. Under the rules five prizes must be set aside for these five tying contestants. Tie-breaking charts have been submitted to the five, whose names are Mrs. Talley Moncrief, LaGrange, Ga.; Mary E. Beacham, 402 Oates Bldg., Asheville, N. C.; T. E. Johnson, Norcross, Ga.; Helen O. Thomas, LaGrange, Ga.; Mrs. C. H. Kimball, 1643 Jonesboro Rd., S. E., Atlanta, Ga. The contestant who submits the largest number of correct answers in the second tie-breaking chart, which has been mailed each, would receive second prize, which is $50.00 cash, second number third prize, $25.00 cash, the third largest number, which is fourth prize, $15.00, the fourth largest number fifth prize, which is $10.00 cash; the fifth largest number, which is sixth prize, $10.00 cash.

The next largest number of correct answers submitted in this group was 11, and the following parties tied for the remainder of the prizes: Mrs. A. B. Kerns, 305 Linden Ave., Macon, Ga.; Miss Geneva Hayes, 121 N. Orange Ave., DeLand, Fla.; Mrs. Paul Stephens, 685 Vernon Ave., Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. W. F. Cox, Jr., Box 563, Moultrie, Ga.; Mrs. G. F. Liles, R-5, Lumpkin, Ga.; Floyd Nix, Mrs. J. P. Womble, 39 Maddox Drive, Atlanta, Ga.; F. H. Lexow, 1639 E. 8th St., Jacksonville, Fla. Of this tying group the contestant who submits the largest number of correct answers to the second tie-breaking chart will be entitled to prize No. 7, which is $10.00, and the remainder, regardless as to the number submitted, will be entitled to $5.00 each.

A MESSAGE TO ALL CONTESTANTS FROM THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

Anybody can be a good winner.

It is hard to be a good loser.

Nobody likes to lose, and it is only human to refight the battle, to wish that more time had been spent on the contest, or to think and feel any number of ways about what might have been yours and what was lost to someone else by possibly a few seconds of thought.

The disappointment in failing to win is far more poignant than the joy of actually winning, and it is to those who have lost that The Atlanta Constitution is primarily directing these words.

The Atlanta Constitution sincerely wishes that it were practical for every person in the contest to win at least one of the automobiles, and while we are wishing, we might as well include all three cars.

As for those who did win, or by virtue of their tying standing are likely to win, The Atlanta Constitution wants to say just this:

The Atlanta Constitution has no interest or connection, either direct, indirect, implied or otherwise with any person who has won a prize or who by virtue of the excellence of his or her answers is tied at present for a prize.

The judging of answers involved merely the mathematical determining of the number of correct answers submitted by every contestant. Neatness was not considered. The degree of accuracy in naming the movie titles was the sole determining factor.

It is to be regretted that there were not enough prizes to be distributed among all of the thousands of contestants, as obviously, practically every person who enters a contest anticipates the winning of a prize. With 31 prizes and several thousand contestants it is only too plain that every one cannot win a prize.

The contestants who won prizes, or who, by virtue of their present tying status are virtually certain of prizes, are to be congratulated. The Movietest called for the liveliest kind of mental activity, intensive study and serious concentration.

In passing it must be said that the mistake made by many contestants was in trying to find too difficult a meaning for the various cartoons. Feeling that the titles could not be as plain as the picture indicated, the majority of contestants labored to unearth complicated titles, whereas in almost every case the obvious answer was the correct answer.

Contestants whose names are given in this notice as being tied for prizes have been supplied with the second tie-breaking series of 30 cartoons, and full details will be published as to the order in which the remaining prizes are won.

The Atlanta Constitution had no interest in any individual or set of individuals winning a prize. This was a contest among contestants, and those who failed to win a prize just failed to submit an answer of sufficient merit to be among the prize winners. The fault is their alone, and cannot in any way be attributed to anyone else.

Downing-Olsson Engagement Told at Mrs. Marks' Tea

Mrs. Jessie S. Marks was hostess Saturday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock in one of the private dining rooms at 1050 Ponce de Leon apartments at a seated tea. The exquisitely appointed tea table was arranged for the twenty-four guests, and attractive place cards directed the guests to their places, while adorning the center of the tea table was an immense Jack Horner pie, from which ribbon streamers in the delicate rainbow shades terminated at each guest's place. At a word from the hostess these streamers were pulled revealing the announcement of the engagement of Miss Bessie Winston Downing to Albert W. Olsson. Mrs. Marks presented the honoree with a pair of exquisite imported linen towels.

Mrs. Marks presented cards and pencils to the guests to engage in a very interesting and novel contest. Miss Emma Scott received an imported compact for having made the highest number of points.

The guests included Misses Bessie Downing, Alice Downing, Anne Downing, Martha Kothe, Anna Kothe, Sara Matthews, Helen Battle, Margaret Battle, Emma Scott, Alice Cooper, Bell Coooer, Mesdames S. T. Georgia Garden Club Requests Vote Taken on National Flower

The Garden Club of Georgia requests flower lovers of the state to vote a choice for the selection of a national flower to become a symbol of the nation and be enthroned in love and affection by the side of the American eagle. Mrs. Fritz Jones, publicity chairman for the Garden Club of Georgia, gives the following information concerning the vote:

"While every state in the union except Pennsylvania has adopted a state flower, the United States has made no selection for a national flower. Nature Magazine, published in Washington, D. C., is now conducting a wide campaign through the American Nature association, Nature magazine and other organizations to get out a really decisive vote on which to base selection for a national choice. There is no prepared list from which to choose, but the campaign editor of Nature Magazine suggests that as far as possible the king of American flowers should have the following qualifications: 'It must bloom in all parts of the United States. It must be available at all times of the year. It must be popular with all and symbolic of the nation. It must be suitable for emblems and designs. It must radiate tradition and history through its past associations with the creators and developers of the land. When the vote of the people for the national flower has been recorded, congress will be asked to make official the results of the referendum. There have been several attempts to select a national flower, but nothing definite has ever been accomplished. Every one interested is invited to send his vote to Nature Magazine, 1214 Sixteenth street, N. W., Washington, D. C. School children, Boy and Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls, Garden clubs and organizations are urged to vote. First, second and third choice is asked, and clubs voting record the number of votes for each choice.'

Some of the leading candidates for the honor have this to say in bulletins issued from "campaign headquarters" in the editorial rooms of Nature Magazine. Dogwood: "What flower could hope to represent the American people as well as I? As a roadside decoration, I represent the plus ultra in beauty. I grace the indoors as well, and speaking of floral designs, what couldn't the imagination do with my four and five-petalled blossoms? As for my history—I am the state flower of Virginia." Mountain Laurel: "There is deep significance to my star-like flowers. The pioneers loved me. I grow in the thirteen original states. I am the state flower of Connecticut. None could surpass the beauty of the designs I could make. While I must stay east of the father of waters, I have a cousin, a Mountain Laurel, that might represent me in the mountains of the west." Phlox: "If elected by these voters in the United States, I will promise to continue to grow in the national colors, red, white and blue. I will continue to be hardy and faithful in reproduction, so that my line will always rule." Wild Rose: "I stand on my record. I make wonderful decorative designs. I am an aristocrat—my ancestors came from Babylon, Persia and Nineveh. I have many names, such as Liberty, Columbia, General Pershing and President Wilson, that gives me national standing. Who can point with pride any better than I?" Columbine: "I am the people's candidate. I stand for unlimited looking at my flowers, and for moderate picking. You must see my thirteen-leaf lobes, and notice that when reversed, my spurs resemble the talons of the American eagle. I bloom on three national holidays—Decoration day, Florida day and the Fourth of July. My name is derived from Columbia, meaning dove, and associated with Columbus, who found this land of peace and plenty. As for mass effects and for symbolic emblems, I can say with all modesty—I stand on the brink of perfection; there is none to surpass me." Goldenrod: "I am still the king. Any other is a usurper. I cannot be exterminated, I am too strong. My waving sheaf of gold is known everywhere, and gives beautiful mass effects. Though a violent whispering campaign to the effect that I cause hay fever has long worked against me, the intelligent electorate knows that the ragweed is to blame. Five states have proved their wisdom by choosing me—why not forty-eight?"

There are other favorite sons in the field. The Cincinnati Enquirer, Ohio, has nominated the morning-glory trumpets. The Enquirer says of the morning-glory: "Their color tones are in harmony with the hues incorporate in the national banner. They salute us in whispers of red, white and blue. Their corollas are shaped like the stars in the flag's clear field of azure. This modest flower kisses the breath of our colder climes and laughs with the warmth of the southland's welcome. Votes will doubtless be cast for the wild aster, poppy, lily, sunflower, daisy, pansy, violet, dandelion, larkspur and so on through the floral list.

Governing Board To Fill Vacancies.

The governing board of the woman's division of the chamber of commerce meets Monday afternoon, December 10, at 5:15 o'clock. As a result of the primary for the selection of the 1929 governing board of the division, nominations for the six vacant positions on the board are as follows: Mrs. Rae S. Addis, Miss Regina Corrigan, Mrs. Lillian A. Dove, Mrs. Nellie Nix Edwards, Miss Kate Hammerschmidt, Miss Irene Harris, Miss Mabel B. Kendrick, Miss Eula M. Lang, Mrs. Willis McCrary, Miss Mae McGinty, Miss Ruth Morris, Mrs. Mildred Seydell. Final balloting is to take place December 13, the members voting by mail or in person by secret ballot.

The general plan of the election is similar to that of the Senior chamber of commerce. Ballots accompanied by the membership roster are mailed to the members, who may designate as many nominees as there are directors to be elected. From the candidates receiving the highest number of votes in the primary, twice the number of the directors to be elected are declared nominated and their names placed on the official ballot. At the final election candidates receiving the highest number of votes to the number of vacancies are declared elected.

Xmas Party To Be Staged at 'Y' For Family Welfare Children

The girl reserves and the "Hi-Y" boys of the Decatur High school will have a banquet Monday evening, December 10, at 6:30 o'clock, in the dining room of the First Baptist church, of Decatur. The Girl Reserves will be in uniform and will have their recognition service after the banquet.

Girl Reserves, of the Amicus club, girls of both Girls' and Commercial High schools, are to adopt family welfare children for the Christmas season. The girls will bring the children to the Y. W. C. A. to parties where a real Santa will take dolls, toys, fruits and candies from a Christmas tree. Games are being planned for these needy children and refreshments will be served. Many children who would not have any Christmas joy will be reached through the Girl Reserve department of the Y. The inter-club of the Girl Reserves will be held Friday evening, December 14, at 5:30 o'clock at the Y. Supper will be served.

The Girl Reserve committee of the Y. meets Friday morning, December 14, at 10 o'clock, 37 Auburn avenue, with Mrs. Galvin Prescott, chairman, and James Speas, co-chairman.

Miss Clara Nolen, general secretary of the Y. W. C. A., will entertain the members of the Atlanta Association of the University Women at a tea Wednesday afternoon, December 12, at 3:15 o'clock, 37 Auburn avenue. A program of Christmas music will be rendered after a short business meeting. Miss Elizabeth Jackson is president of the A. A. U. W.

The following girls reside in the Y. residence: Misses Betty Hall, Sue Ivester, Pearl Lamb, Deloris Redmond, Magil Smith, Frances Thomas, Mariane Strakey, Bott Lina Paula and Lottie Scott. Mrs. S. C. Kytle, matron of the Y. residence, reports that 84 transients have been accommodated since November 1.

Miss Leola Walker, swimming instructor, has announced the opening of a junior life saving class to begin Wednesday afternoon, December 12, at 3:30 o'clock, 37 Auburn avenue. Twelve girls have already enrolled for work in the class.

The girls of the Tuesday Evening and Thursday Evening clubs will have a joint meeting Thursday evening, December 13, at 6 o'clock. All departments of the Y. will be represented at this meeting. The meeting is planned that closer contacts with other departments may be made.

The board of directors of the Y. W. C. A. meets Monday morning, December 10, at 10:30 o'clock, 27 Auburn avenue. Mrs. S. F. Boykin, president, in the chair.

The committee in charge includes Joe W. Ray, chairman; Luther B. Turner, vice chairman; Gus A. Glander, Chatty Sullivan, M. W. Middleton, Roy Freeman, Henry Turner, George B. Yancey, Jesse Webb, Jim Goddin, E. M. Strubinger, Frank Hill and Harry McDonald.

Lennox Robinson To Lecture To Atlanta Drama League

Lennox Robinson, famous dramatist, will lecture to the Atlanta Drama league Thursday evening, December 13, at 8:15 o'clock at the High Museum of Art. He is an associate of George Russell in his work of the Irish Renaissance and Mr. Russell, who visited America last year, recommends very highly to the American people his associate as a lecturer and dramatist. Mr. Robinson is one of the most distinguished and active leaders of that small group of dramatists and poets who have, almost unaided, realized their dreams of restoring the cultural glories of Ireland. At the beginning of the creation of an Irish national theater, W. B. Yeats announced that its purpose was to secure an audience for "the half dozen minds who are likely to be the dramatic imagination of Ireland for this generation." Lennox Robinson's plays have placed him among the foremost of that national theater, and have made possible the achievement of the others.

This eminent author was inspired to write his early plays by the first performance of the Irish players in the turbulent days when the genius of Synge was shocking Ireland and creating its national folk-drama. "The Clancy Name" marked him as one of the most promising of the Abbey playwrights and from that time on his plays were greeted by enthusiastic audiences.

His dramatic talents ripened with "The Cross Roads" in 1909 and "Harvest" in 1910. "Patriots" proved him a master of his craft. All the indomitable spirit of 300 years of rebellion is contained in this portrait of an old warrior in the fight for Irish independence, who returns after years of imprisonment, to discover that the old order of violence has been succeeded by the parliamentary methods of the home rule party and that the struggles and sufferings of himself and his generation have been forgotten or condemned as useless. Other successful plays, some having been played in New York, as well as London, are "The Dreamers," "The Whiteheaded Boy," "The Lost Leader," "The Round Table," "Crabbed Youth and Age," and "Never the Time or the Place," and his new play, "The Big House."

Following the civil and European wars in 1918, after the Abbey Theater company had become disorganized, Mr. Robinson again became its manager and completely rehabilitated it. bers of the board of directors, he has devoted his efforts to directing the Abbey theater and fostering the best work of native Irish playwrights. Mrs. P. H. Jeter, president of the Atlanta Drama league, announces that Mr. Robinson was with the Irish Players on their first visit to this county, but this is his first lecture tour, and he is known as a most picturesque speaker. Drama lovers are Since then, with W. B. Yeats, Lady Gregory and Walter Starkie as meminvited to attend and join the Drama league. The Atlanta Art association members will be guests of the Drama league at the lecture. Tickets may be secured by calling the president, Mrs. Jeter, at Dearborn 1844, or the treasurer, Miss Ellen Palmer, 1041 West Peachtree.

Reports of Chapter Meetings Interest Readers of D.A.R. Page

The following reports of D. A. R. chapter meetings will be of interest to readers of the D. A. R. page.

Mrs. Hal Lawson was hostess to the Peter Coffee chapter, D. A. R., at Abbeville chapter Friday afternoon. The president, Mrs. Foote, presided.

Regular routine of business was conducted and the meeting was turned over to Miss Addie Bass, program chairman. The program included: "Whistling Rufus" was played on the Edison; first Thanksgiving in America and in Georgia, by Miss Julia Bass; President Washington's first Thanksgiving proclamation, by Mrs. R. P. Brown. An original poem, "Greeting," by Mrs. Sheldon; Home Life in Early Colonial and Ante-Bellum Days in the South, Mrs. E. P. Dunnaway; a talk on national defense, the new menace of the south, by Miss Addie Bass.

Mrs. Lawson was assisted by her sisters, Miss Addie Bass and Miss Julia Bass.

Valdosta Chapter.

The General James Jackson chapter of the D. A. R. met at the Woman's building Wednesday, November 21, at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. H. Y. Tillman, regent, was in the chair.

The registrar, Mrs. F. S. Harrell, announced two new members, Mrs. Orrie White and Mrs. G. W. Garbutt. Mrs. Remer Y. Jones, chairman of the library committee, announced a new book on the D. A. R. shelf at the Carnegie library. This book is Mrs. Wilson's "Annals of Georgia."

Letters from Mrs. Myrtis Wood and Mrs. Julius Talmadge in regard to subscriptions to the D. A. R. magazine were read. The following statement from Mrs. Talmadge's letter was emphasized by Mrs. Tillman: "The December number of the D. A. R. magazine will be an enlarged special issue. It will be called 'The Constitution Hall Souvenir Edition,' and will carry full details of the laying of the cornerstone of Constitution hall, which occurred October 30. Doubtless every member of our society will wish a copy of this very valuable edition to hand down to posterity."

Mrs. William Wisenbaker, chairman of the conservation and thrift committee, asked that an effort be made to secure for Lowndes county one of the forestry educational trucks that are being sent over the state by the state forestry commission. The chapter indorsed the idea and asked the committee to work out plans for doing so. Mrs. Wisenbaker also had her conservation and thrift scrap book to show the chapter. Mrs. Ewell Brown, historian, asked the members to aid her in collecting genealogical data from the old Bibles of Lowndes county. Mrs. Brown further stated the finding of the grave of a revolutionary soldier in Lanier county and asked that the chapter mark the grave as a historical spot. This the chapter approved of doing. Mrs. Grace, who represented Mrs. R. A. Peeples, who was absent, reported for the committee on the national defense and Americanization. A motion was made and carried to indorse the candidacy of Mrs. Julius Talmadge for national regent.

At the close of the business meeting Mrs. C. L. Smith presented the program. Mrs. Smith introduced Miss Elizabeth Coates of the high school department of English, who gave a talk on "Samuel Adams, the Man of the Town Meeting." Miss Natalie Strickland gave Newland's Valse Caprice as a piano solo The hostesses were Mrs. Remer Y. Jones, Mrs. J. Q. Dorris, Mrs. J. W. Eyster and Mrs. H. W. Lawson.

Augusta Chapter.

The postponed meeting of the Augusta chapter was held on the afternoon of November 22, at Meadow Garden with the regent, Mrs. M. M. MacFerrin, presiding. Honoring Schubert week, Miss Bessie Daniel, a pupil of Mrs. MacFerrin, sang Schubert's "Ave Maria," accompanied by Mrs. D. M. Berry. A letter of George Walton's and a brief sketch of his life, by Madam Octavia Le Vert, his granddaughter, was read by Mrs. Robert Walton. The chapter voted to purchase these valuable documents for Meadow Garden.

The 23rd, being the day decided upon for the chapter to cooperate with the service league in work for Grace Wood school, a motion was made and carried that $5 should be used to purchase candy for the school. Committees were appointed for Red Cross roll call. The regent asked for volunteers to sell Christmas seals on Saturday, December 8 at the postoffice and to decorate Lenwood hospital December 20, also in cooperation with the service league.

Mrs. Sanford Gardner, state historian, gave a splendid report of the state executive board meeting which was held in Dublin November 8. The corresponding secretary was instructed to write a letter of thanks to Robert Watson, who tunes the piano of Meadow Garden free of charge. The chapter also expressed its appreciation to Mrs. William M. Andrews for the gift of an antique china bowl and a goblet, which matches a goblet already in the possession of Meadow Garden, and to Mrs. J. T. Lazier for a lovely water color of Sulgrave manor.

The paper of Mrs. Kellogg on the second year of the war of the revolution, from the time that Washington compels the British to evacuate Boston until he captures the Hessians at Trenton, N. J., was most interesting.

Good reports were heard from the officers and chairmen of standing committees, after which Mrs. W. H. Holman and Mrs. Warren Lanham, hostesses, served tea. The chapter accepted the invitation of Mrs. Robert Walton to be her guest at the meeting in December.

Toccoa Chapter.

The Toccoa chapter met Wednesday afternoon, November 21, at the beautiful country home of Dr. and Mrs. Jeff Davis, "Whispering Pines," with Miss Dan Davis and Mrs. R. W. Neely hostesses. The program was prepared by Mrs. T. R. Kendal, and in her absence was in charge of Mrs. J. W. Marks. Interesting readings were given by Mrs. Marks and Mrs. E. F. Chaffin, followed with music by Mrs. Allen.

After the meeting adjourned, the members of the chapter and a number of visitors assembled on a hillside overlooking the highway to unveil a marker denoting revolutionary se[illegible] which was placed on the grave of John Stonecypher, born 1756 and died 1850.

The program was as follows: Prayer, Dr. A. F. Cline; talk, Mrs. Cox; talk, Dr. Jeff Davis; address, Dr. Cline; unveiling the marker, Miss Dan Davis; placing the garland, Miss Daisy Hayes.

Mrs. Coddington Makes Appeal For Georgia Bell at Valley Forge

Mrs. E. B. Coddington, state chairman of the Georgia bell, at Valley Forge, makes an earnest appeal to chapters of the D. A. R. through the following letter addressed to chapter regents:

"Before attending the state executive board meeting, I wrote to Dr. Burk at Valley Forge and asked him to give us a message on the Georgia bell. His reply was so beautiful and so fitting that I am sending it out to the regents and ask that you will be so kind as to read it to your chapters.

"I wish that we could dedicate our Georgia bell in the carillon there at the same time the Georgia state flag is presented to the Washington Memorial chapel, on the Sunday before the national D. A. R. congress. Dr. Burk states that he has on hand $447 toward the bell, and as the required amount is $2,000, we will have to double our efforts to accomplish this end, as the bell must be paid for in full before it can be dedicated. Let us do the best we can with this in view. Please send your check to the state treasurer, Mrs. B. C. Ward, 952 Peachtree street, Atlanta, Ga., and be so kind as to notify me of the amount sent. Wouldn't it be splendid if some of your chapter members would give volunteer subscriptions? Last year one interested member of the Atlanta chapter gave $100, besides the hundred which was contributed by the chapter."

Dr. Burk's Letter.

Dr. Burk's letter is as follows:

"A few months ago I heard the Georgia bell playing its part in the music of Valley Forge, the music of religion and patriotism. I will always remember your generosity and your delightful cooperation in helping me to realize my dream for Valley Forge. The Georgia bell has sounded many times this year as the patriotic pilgrims from Georgia have come to Valley Forge, and have asked to hear their bell sounding out over the parade ground of Washington's heroic army. The erection of the Georgia bell in the cloister of the colonies was one of the greatest events in the modern history of Valley Forge. It marked the culmination of patriotic endeavor and heroic sacrifice.

"I wish every daughter of the American Revolution in the state of Georgia could spend a day at Valley Forge, and could see the throngs of American patriots, waiting breathlessly to hear the music of the bells. Every hour of the day, all through the day, those bells ring out over the graves of the silent heroes, and for miles the message of Valley Forge is carried home to the travelers from many lands. At noon "America" is always played, and at sunset the National Anthem is played as the flag is lowered. It is a wonderful thing to see the people stand in reverence and in awe at this moment of the closing day. Every one who has a part in giving these bells is doing much to foster the spirit of patriotism and to enrich the love of country. Throughout the summer every Sunday night there was a recital when from to hear the singing bells of Valley Forge. Through the courtesy of Ralph Heritage there was hardly a night in the week in which the bells were silent.

"I am sure that every Georgia daughter will be happy to know that she has had a part in adding to the joy of the many brides, who have come to Valley Forge, this year for the marriage service. The wedding march is played most beautifully upon the bells, and when you realize that this has been played as many as 12 times in a single day this year, and that so far 271 happy brides have left the Washington Memorial chapel to begin their life of love and service, it makes one happy to know that they have had a part in this wonderful work.

"This year the state of Ohio appropriated $6,500 that the Ohio state bell might have its place at Valley Forge. This great bell weighs three tons, and is beautifully rich in tone. How proud the people from Ohio are to see and hear their bell. We are hoping that next year every state bell will be in place, and we will be able to play everything upon the bells of Valley Forge, but meanwhile the bell music of Valley Forge is having its part in the inspiration of hundreds of thousands of people year after year."

State Regent Gives Rules For Publicity Contest

Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, Georgia State regent, asks that all chapters wishing to enter the contest for the prize of $100, offered by Mrs. Amos Fries, national chairman of the publicity committee, for the best published account of chapter meetings, sent report to state editor, Mrs. John W. Daniel, 102 East Henry street, so that the reports may be published in The Atlanta Constitution, the official organ of the Georgia D. A. R.

Following are the points to be observed.

1. The "what, when, where," will be expected to appear in the first paragraph.
2. The account should contain about 300 words.
3. It should report activities of three committees that are represented by national committees.
4. It should have one quotation. This may be from a report, from the address of a speaker, from correspondence from headquarters, or from the message of the president general, if this is read at the meeting.
5. The account must contain the names of three active members of the society. Giving the names of those who sing or pour tea as a courtesy, but encouraging the real worker is more profitable.
6. The article should have sufficient interest to attract the non-member. This is the final test. To catch the attention of the ousider and show what our organization stands for and the splendid work it is doing is the great reason for our publicity.

Each chapter should send its three best accounts to the state chairman of publicity. The state chairman will submit all to proper judges and will forward the best three to the national committee by April, 1929. The winning chapter will be awarded the prize at the 38th continental congress.

D. A. R. Chairman Has Been Ill.

Due to illness Mrs. R. J. Travis, state chairman of marking historic spots, has been unable to carry on her work but asks that the chapters go forward with the work and she hopes soon to again be able to cooperate with them.

Film Chairman Issues Movie Guide.

Richard Hooper's Grave Marked.

Thursday afternoon, November 22, a party went from Toccoa to the old Miller homestead in Banks county, to mark the grave of a revolutionary soldier, Richard B. Hooper. Mrs. E. E. Mitchell, chairman of committee on marking soldiers' graves of the Toccoa chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and Mrs. H. J. Cox, regent of the chapter, presented the program.

There had also assembled a number of the people of the community, some of whom were relatives of Richard B. Hooper. The devotional was led by Rev. T. R. Kendall, Jr. Splendid talks were made by C. M. McClure and George Allen. The marker was unveiled by Mitchell Allen and the garland was placed by Ruth Yow, of Martin, both direct descendants of this revolutionary soldier. Other descendants were Mrs. LeRoy Yow Martin, George G. Allen, J. T. Hooper and his son, H. G. Hooper, who lives near the old family cemetery.

State Editor Sends Message.

The D. A. R. state editor, Mrs. John W. Daniel, of 102 East Henry street, Savannah, issues the following message to all chapter regents:

"The state editor urges the cooperation of your chapter in her effort to make a success of the D. A. R. column in The Atlanta Constitution. Please instruct your reporter to send all accounts of chapter meetings typewritten, not later than Tuesdays of each week. Only through your interest will the column be a success."

National Chairman Of Constitution Hall Issues Message

Mrs. Thomas Coke Mell, Georgia state chairman of Constitution Hall Finance committee, presents the following message of the national chairman, Mrs. Russell W. Magna, to the members of the D. A. R.

The cornerstone of Constitution hall has been laid. Constitution hall will be dedicated at the coming congress, provided we can make the entire membership conscious of the fact that the contractors, who are working night and day to make this possible, must be paid large sums of money the first of each month. This means that all pledges are now due. The million in cash by congress is essential. This means the enthusiastic cooperation of every officer and member in the society.

Please have your members carry out the Christmas gift idea for Constitution hall again this year—that is each member paying in to each chapter the sum of $3.50 as a Christmas gift. Much money can be realized in this way, and certainly we can include Constitution hall on our Christmas list as a friend. Please push the penny-a-day idea.

Because of the assurance that we will have the expected quota of chairs, and because of the transfer of auditorium chairs to platform chairs, there are more auditorium chairs to be sold. Please dispose of these as early as possible and get money paid in through the chapter treasurer, the state and national as soon as you can. The February board meeting will be an important one, and the chairs should be gone by that time.

Covington Chapter To Mark Grave.

In recognition of the desire to honor all soldiers of the American revolution the Sergeant-Newton chapter has taken steps to have the grave of Robert Pullen suitably marked. The grave is located in the old cemetery at Covington and bears this simple inscription: Robert Pullen, born July 6, 1756; died January 12, 1854. This hero of the revolution thus came within two years of completing a century of his eventful life.

Kle Club Ladies To Honor Husbands.

The ladies of the Kle club will entertain their husbands at a Dutch supper Tuesday evening, December 11, at the Elks' home, corner Peachtree and Fourth street. This is the second of a series of suppers planned with Mrs. L. J. Boley and Mrs. George C. James in charge of arrangements.

College Park Club To Present Play.

"The Old Maids' Convention," new version of an amusing play, will be presented by the College Park Woman's club at the club auditorium Friday, December 14. Miss Jessie Collier, successful coach, will be in charge of the presentation.

Mrs. Katherine Weathersbee has announced interesting plans for the municipal living Christmas tree. Mrs. W. W. Bateman announces that the College Park Music club chorus, augmented by men singers and members of the Y. P. S. L. of the St. John's Episcopal church, will sing Christmas carols on Christmas eve at 8 o'clock when this gorgeous tree is lighted.

Mrs. Grant Honors Miss Mildred Ash.

An interesting affair of the week was the bridge-tea and miscellaneous shower given Saturday by Mrs. Wade Grant at her home on Park avenue honoring Miss Mildred Ash, whose marriage to J. W. Stribling will occur in December.

The guests included Misses Thelma McWhite, Marjorie Hogan, Mildred Ash, Ruth Martin, Kathleen Ash. Mesdames Herbert Squires, Charles Sumner, G. E. McWhite, Charles Vernoy, William H. Swanson, Edwin Fincher, Albert Armstrong, Wade Grant and M. G. Ash.

A. A. Sisterhood Plans Annual Chanukah Ball.

The Sisterhood of the Ahavath Achim synagogue will sponsor the 39th annual Chanukah ball Tuesday, December 11, at 9 o'clock at the Jewish Women's club on Washington street. This affair will be in the nature of a carnival and country fair. Dancing will also be featured. Admission will be 50 cents and the public is invited. All proceeds are to be used in the maintenance of the Sunday and Hebrew school at the synagogue.

Junior Music Club Gives Tea December 15.

The Atlanta Junior Music club entertains at tea Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Rich's tea room. James de La Fuente will be heard in violin numbers. Mary Rea and Annie Clyde Edgar will give costume dances. Bernice Martin, pianist, and Elinor Wilkerson, harpist, will give solos. The chorus, Miss Mary McCoy conducting, will sing the Christmas carols. Virginia Shultz and Ruth Sellers in solo parts.

Officers in charge are: Miss Lenus Daniell, counsellor; Jo Beth Apperson, assistant; Gladstone Pursley, president; Eugenia Snow, juvenile president; Alvin Nissenbaum, membership chairman; Ruth Sellers and Helen Kaplan, hostesses. Harry Pursley, Alfred Bartlett and Willingham Smith, ushers. Mrs. Leonard Sewell, treasurer, will be at the door to receive cards and guest fee. Adults 25c and children 10c.

Un Mot Ici, Est Bien

Mrs. J. J. Harris, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

It is not given to many to pass on to a nobler sphere, and leave fragrant memories, loyal hearts and undying devotion to perpetuate a life of fruitfulness; but a woman of Athens, beloved of all the southland lives still, thus enshrined in the hearts of those who knew her best. Nor does her gentle power wane. Even with her useful hands now quietly folded in rest, the influence of her example, the truths of her history and her inimitable work still blazon the way to higher efforts, and serve as incentive for all good endeavors.

The Georgia division, wishing to give every honor to this noble woman, passed resolutions at the last state convention in Atlanta that a library museum building be erected on the campus of the University of Georgia, Athens, whose sons in every field unfold the cause of the Confederacy. This building is to be called the Mildred Rutherford Historical museum, in honor of the illustrious and beloved leader who recently passed to her reward. The resolution also stated that the attention of Miss Rutherford's friends be called to this opportunity thus presented to make gifts to this fund with which the building is to be erected.

Necessary Information.

It was also carried that a committee consisting of the president of the Georgia division acting as chairman and four others be directed to make a study of the type of building to be erected, with an approximate cost thereof, and to report same at the executive board meeting in January, in order that that body may have the necessary information for launching the campaign to raise the funds for the completion of the project. It is in this way that the Georgia division, U. D. C., wishes to show for all time its utmost appreciation of the years of fruitful labor expended by Miss Rutherford for the benefit of the organization—a memorial which situated upon the cultural heights of Athens, a name ever significant with education and development, will reflect in a measure at least, the love and reverence in which the memory of our dear Miss Millie is enshrined.

And, not only does the Georgia U. D. C. wish to prove its devotion to the memory of its beloved late historian, but the faculty of the university expresses its warm appreciation of the action of the division as follows:

Unalloyed Appreciation.

The university faculty welcomes with unalloyed appreciation the unanimous decision, made by the Georgia division of the United Daughter of the Confederacy at their annual meeting in October, to undertake the patriotic task of securing funds and erecting upon the university campus a capacious, fireproof and beautiful building to house permanently at this seat of southern patriotism and learning, a museum of historic mementos of the heroes and heroines of the Confederacy and records of that period together with other records bearing upon southern history made and in the making.

The graciousness of their purpose and plans is emphasized by the fact that the structure will bear the name of the Mildred Rutherford Historical museum. It will thus memorialize the untiring and distinguished work of one of the most devoted daughters of the Confederacy—a work begun immediately after the close of the struggle in 1865 and continued with unabated zeal until her lamented death in 1928.

This faculty desires to record, however inadequately, the admiration and reverence which it feels for the character and efforts of this splendid woman who labored so long in defense of the historic position of the Confederate cause, and who accomplished so much in collecting and preserving the records which underlie the true history of the south in those "days that tried men's souls." She occupied for many years the position of historian to the Daughters of the Confederacy. Fruitful with her pen and eloquent in her many addresses for this cause, dear to her and the south, the proposed memorial fittingly honors her as an outstanding type of southern womanhood who embodied completely the sentiment, the courage, and the graces of the civilization in which her girlhood began, and who has kept alive its rare aroma and ideals during more than six decades since Appommattox closed the story of the old south.

The faculty feels that the Georgia division has done the university a signal honor by selecting its campus as the home for this memorial. Mindful of the record of its alumni in the army and counsels of the Confederacy, it recalls Howell Cobb as president of the provisional congress which organized the southern Confederacy; Thomas R. R. Cobb, who wrote its constitution, the original draft of which reposes in the university library; Robert Toombs, its secretary of state; Benjamin H. Hill, Confederate senator, the intimate friend and adviser of President Davis; General John B. Gordon and General Francis S. Bartow whose gallant bravery shone so brightly among the smoke of many battles; and an unbroken roster of patriotic alumni who offered life and all they possessed in the service of this cause. It recalls, in the years which followed Appommattox, Henry W. Grady, whose generous spirit and healing eloquence made him the great peacemaker between the north and the south.

These memories are invoked as abiding evidence of the atmosphere of historic tradition and loyalty to the Confederacy which surrounds the university and makes sure its permanent sympathy in the performance of the trust which the Daughters of the Confederacy seek to place in its care. The faculty wishes sincerely to thank the Georgia division for its action and would assure them of the deep sense of responsibility and privilege with which the university will welcome and undertake to administer so sacred a trust.

Good Works Follow.

Thus we see that good works and untiring effort follow on through the years. A woman with a torch held her shining light aloft to guide all followers of the truths of southern history into the illumined paths of knowledge. And now the disciples look forward to the perpetuation of her memory—a memorial which will benefit the entire south and which will resound to her glory for all time to come.

We hope humbly that the constructive efforts of this committee on plans will be guided by leadership from above, so that the memorial will be built quickly, beautifully to honor for forever one whose works for the south have no parallel.

And may we as United Daughters of the Confederacy clasp hands over this project and go forward, united, a band of sisterhood for the completion of this benevolent undertaking.

A signal honor has come to one of our very own, Mrs. Lamar Rutherford Lipscomb has been appointed by Mrs. A. McD. Wilson historian-general of the Southern Confederated Memorial association. Mrs. Lipscomb is well fitted to follow in the footsteps of her illustrious aunt, Miss Mildred Rutherford, and the division feels that Mrs. Wilson has bestowed on it a special privelege that one of its own is to serve in this capacity. Mrs. Walter L. Hodges, Hartwell, sends a report of the Winnie Davis Memorial hall. Mrs. Hodges has been quite ill, hence the delay in the report.

Winnie Davis Hall Chairman Gives Report.

Mrs. W. L. Hodges, of Hartwell, chairman Winnie Davis Hall, sends report. She says:

"Below is given a list of chapters contributing to the Winnie Davis Hall, State Teachers college, in Athens. Chapters are requested to contribute toward the maintenance of this great work of Georgia daughters begun, and continued by them as an everlasting memorial to that real daughter of Confederacy, Winnie Davis, daughter of Jefferson Davis. In making donations please do so in the early part of the year, that reports may be completed at proper time."

The following chapters contributing were: Fort Valley, $20; Washington $1; Sylvania, $5; Newnan, $2; Griffin, $1; Dublin, $5; College Park, $5; Thomasville, $2; McRae, $2; Atlanta chapter, $1; Lexington, $5; Albany, $3; Dawson, $2.50; Covington, $5; Tifton, $1; West Point, $1; Ashburn, $2; Hartwell, $2; Eatonton, $5; Agusta, $2; Valdosta, $3; Barnesville, $2; Camilla, $1; Jackson, $2; LaFayette, $2; Decatur, $1; Roberta, $1; Athens, $3; Macon (Sidney Lanier), $5; Richland, $1; Commerce, $1; Madison, $2; Hepsbyboh, $1; Fort Gaines, $2; Montezuma, $1; Shellman, $1; Tallapoosa, $2; Effie D. Tuggle, $3; Fitzgerald, $5; Florella, $1; Clarksville, $1; Social Circle, $3; Sparta, $1.

Monroe sent $1 to treasurer for this fund, and Fairburn also sent treasuser $1.

Chapter Meetings Held in Georgia.

Campbell County chapter, U. D. C., of Fairburn, last met at the home of Miss Nancy Swanson, with Miss Giralda Brooks presiding. Mrs. J. J. Harris, of Sandersville, was unanimously indorsed for state president of the Georgia division, U. D. C. Mrs. J. Clinton Reese was program chairman. Subject: "Our World War Boys." Mrs. R. L. Proctor and Mrs. J. F. Heard were distinguished guests from the Robert E. Lee chapter, College Park. Mrs. Proctor gave a fitting tribute to the beloved war president, Woodrow Wilson, and Mrs. Heard spoke of the passing away of many great men and their last words. Others taking part were Mrs. T. B. Wooddall, Mrs. C. M. Edge, Miss Carolyn McNeil, Miss Ednah Swanson, Mrs. I. O. Swanson and Mrs. Richard McClarin were hostesses.

The Varina Davis chapter, C. of C., of Marietta, met at the home of Miss Ani Murray, and it was decided that a goal for the year's work be chosen and a chapter house was selected for this effort. Within two weeks there will be a rummage sale and a market to start the treasury. It was also decided that old southern songs be sung at each meeting until the members learn them so that they could become a part of the regular program. The next meeting will be a Christmas meeting and a "Kid and Swap Party." Instead of the usual Christmas tree each member will carry a present and exchange them until satisfied. A program was given on Vicksburg and Galveston.

BULLOCH COUNTY U. D. C. MET WITH MRS. LANE.

The Bulloch County chapter, U. D. C., of Statesboro, met with Mrs. J. C. Lane as hostess. Reports were given of the convention which met in Atlanta in October by Mrs. Lane and Mrs. J. P. Foy, who were delegates. Mrs. Lane paid a tribute to Dr. Frank Crane, a noted author, who died in France recently. She read a poem written by him during the world war, "A Woman's Prayer for the Boys Over There." Mrs. E. L. Smith, chairman of the program committee, presided, and the program was patriotic and in keeping with the Armistice season. Mrs. W. G. Neville gave a paper on Woodrow Wilson, the war president. Miss Carrie Law Clay gave a talk on relief work of women during the world war. A vocal solo, "God Be With Our Boys," was sung by Mrs. Roger Holland, accompanied by Mrs. G. E. Bean. A letter from Kenneth G. Seibet was read by Miss Marguerite Turner. Mrs. Smith read a poem, "Recessional," by Kipling. Baskets of poppies were sent to each of the churches on Sunday by the organization and a small check was enclosed to the Baptist church as a contribution to Honor.

IDA EVANS EVE CHAPTER MET WITH MRS. LOKEY.

Ida Evans Eve chapter, of Thomson, me with Mrs. Earl Lokey Tuesday afternoon with forty-five Daughters present. Mrs. Clyde Hunt presided over the business program. Mrs Hubert, the treasurer, reported $144.92 netted from the lunch booth at the fair and the "queen's" prize. The chapter decided to place a coping around the soldier's square in the Thomson cemetery.

Mrs. J. J. Harris, of Sandersville, was heartily indorsed for president of the Georgia division of the U. D. C., to be elected at the next convention. Mrs. H. T. Clary gave a most splendid report of the U. D. C. convention held in Atlanta in October. Martha Louise Dillard gave "America's Reply." Mrs. Arnold Ansley rendered several piano solos.

LAURA RUTHERFORD U. D. C. MET WITH MRS. SEXTON.

Laura Rutherford chapter, U. D. C., of Athens, met with Mrs. J. L. Sexton, and the large Confederate flag waved at the entrance, another one draped on the wall over the antique square piano in the drawing room reflected the days of the sixties. The president's table was decorated with miniature flags. A letter with resolutions, which were adopted in that chapter, were received from the Mary Curtis Lee chapter in Los Angeles, Calif. Among other tributes in the letter, this was said: "The Mary Curtis Lee chapter realizes the great loss sustained by the whole organization, not only because we shall miss Miss Millie Rutherford's marvelous historical messages, but more shall we miss her gracious friendship and inspiration and her defense of her beloved south."

Mrs. Mildred V. Rhodes, representative to the state convention in Atlanta, and Mrs. T. W. Reed, state educational chairman, in bringing in their reports from the convention expressed their appreciation of the honor accorded Miss Millie, and were proud to be recognized as members of her chapter. The Laura Rutherford chapter won the distinction of being, among others, a star chapter, bringing back a banner. Mrs. R. H. Rickersstaff was elected registrar. Mrs. T. W. Reed has held this office for a great number of years, and proved a most efficient and faithful officer.

Shoes Requested For Needy

Mrs. J. E. Jackson, Jr., chairman of family welfare for the Atlanta P.-T. A. council, requests members of the Parent-Teacher associations who have shoes of any sizes for men, women and children to send them to the nearest school in their vicinity for distribution to the needy.

Mrs. George Stovall Mayne is the new historian and is well fitted for that place.

Millen Chapter, U. D. C., Indorses Mrs. Harris.

The Wayside Home chapter, U. D. C., of Millen, indorsed at its November meeting Mrs. J. J. Harris, of Sandersville, for state president of the Georgia division, U. D. C. The Georgia division is indebted to Miss Minnie Holland, secretary of the Millen chapter, for the W. O. Heart medal which was presented to Georgia at the Houston convention.

Louise Heard C. of C. Gives Offering.

Louise Heard chapter, Children of the Confederacy, of Elberton, Ga., sent a Thanksgiving box of canned fruit to the Confederate Veterans' home in Atlanta. The chapter has been doing this for a number of years. The chapter gave Joseph Mattox, of the Scottish Rite hospital in Atlanta, who is a member of the chapter, a post card shower on Thanksgiving.

League of Women Voters Head Urges Fuller Vote in Elections

Mrs. Alfred Bailey, president of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, calls to the attention of league members the small number of persons voting in the city election, ratifying the primary held last June, and urges the league as a voting organization to take example from this election. "According to press reports," said Mrs. Bailey in a recent interview "the number of Atlantans voting in the city election December 5 was smaller than it has been in some years. Although the election was only a ratification of the city primary, nevertheless it afforded voters an opportunity to observe the working of our election laws, and should have been seen as a privilege for that reason if for no other. Too often important issues arise between the time of a city primary and a city election, and the people are required to make a decision in the election which did not come before them in the primary. Mrs. Bailey commented upon the marked contrast in the interest of voters as represented by the number of ballots cast in the city election and the number cast by Atlantans in the presidential election. "Every election is vital," she stated, "and the purpose of the league is to keep this thought continuously before the minds of its members and the general public."

Activities of Chairmen.

Reports from Atlanta league chairmen at the meeting of its executive board last week reflected interesting work being done in connection with these offices. Mrs. Emile Breitenbucher, chairman of education, gave an account of the proceedings of a meeting of the board of education, which she recently attended in the interests of the league. She also presented side lights on the educational systems in vogue over the country.

Mrs. R. L. Turman, director of the third region for the National League of Women Voters, gave an account of the council of regional directors held recently in Washington, which she attended. She showed the interrelation of local leagues with the state and the national league, and urged concentration of activity towards carrying out similar programs.

Membership Drive.

The special drive for members during November, put on by the chairman of membership, Mrs. Harvey Payne, gained the league a total of fifty-one members for the month. About this same number must be secured before the membership quota of one thousand is completed. Mrs. Payne has requested active league workers to aid her in enrolling this number during the first part of December. Mrs. R. E. Rollins, of the second ward, and Mrs. Wilbur Hunnicutt, of the twelfth ward, have each pledged members from their wards. Others who will be asked to assist in this work includes Mesdames Thomas Mount, W. C. Robinson, O. A. Harbin, Sinclair Jacobs, L. H. Williams, R. C. Irwin and N. V. Perry.

Mrs. Burghard Gives Resume Of W.C.T.U. National Meet

BY M. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHEAD,
State Editor.

"The devotional service Thursday morning, in King's Chapel, led by Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Georgia, was a veritable safety-valve for the delegates," said the Union Signal about the praise and prayer service which preceeded the opening of the fifty-fourth annual convention of the National W. C. T. U., in Boston, Mass., recently. The account continued: Pent-up gratitude and emotions of joy found expression in jubilant testimony and prayer. If one wanted to look down into the hearts of the women who wear the white ribbon, here was the opportunity as they poured out their inmost desires and longings. It was a benediction to sit in old historic King's chapel, of hallowed memories, with its stained glass windows, its quaint pulpit and pews, and listen to the testimonies of world's and national leaders, and the rank and fire from every state in the union, as they gave voice to their thankfulness for divine leadership. After the reading of the words of the psalmist by Mrs. Armor "Bless the Lord, O, my soul and all that is within me, bless His holy Name," the singing of triumphant hymns, led by Mrs. Frances W. Graham, of New York, and a prayer by Mrs. Florence Richards, of Ohio, the Georgia convention speaker in Gainesville, president of the Crusade state, there came a quick succession of petitions and testimonies from the women. "Their utterances were not mere words; they were the deepest emotions of their hearts translated into consecrated, incarnated in devoted lives. Mrs. Armor reminded them that a year ago they had promised "Wherever He leads us we will follow.' Such are the "Christian women banded together" in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Formal Opening.

It may be interesting to those who have never had the privilege of attending a National W. C. T. U. convention to learn of the ceremony of its opening. The Union Signal describes it as: "The convention formally opened Thursday evening. The floor and galleries of Tremont Temple, with a seating capacity of 2,500 were filled with an expectant audience when a procession of world's and national W. C. T. U. officers, the president of Massachusetts State W. C. T. U., the governor of the state and the mayor of Boston marched down the aisle to the platform, to the music of the 'Hall of Fame March,' played by the Gloria Trumpeters, who led the way. It was a beautiful picture, the four young women trumpeters in white silk Grecian robes, embroidered in gold, all the W. C. T. U. officers in white, the only touch of color being the uniforms of the boy and girl scouts who acted as escorts, and the somberhuedl suits of the two men. At the tap of the gavel in the hand of Mrs. Ella A. Boole, national president, everybody stood at attention and saluted the flag, repeating in unison the pledge of allegiance. Inspiring music by the Gloria Trumpeters seemed to interpret in rich harmonies the emotions of gratitude of the great company gathered from all parts of the nation. Hearts were lifted to the divine leader in adoration in the invocation led by Miss Anna Adams Gordon, world president."

Hard On the Platform.

"I find myself indignant with extremists who do nothing in the way of educating public opinion and impressing citizens with their obligation to enforce the law but are satisfied merely to criticize the police for their inability to cope with the difficulties of enforcement," was one of the statements of Governor Alvan T. Fuller, with which many in this state will agree. Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols, of Boston, a nephew of the president of the state W. C. T. U. president, testified that he was the son of a Portland, Maine, white ribbon mother, and recalled that he sang in a chorus of children at a birthday celebration of Colonel Neal Dow. The mayor showed his familiarity with W. C. T. U. history and extended a hearty welcome to the delegates. "In our preparation for your coming," said Mrs. Alice G. Ropes, convention hostess, "we did our best to have Massachusetts Hooverize. You know the result, but our Old Bay state did not go entirely to Smithereens, for we did elect a dry governor and lieutenant-governor, as well as dry senators and representatives. Another referendum, non-mandatory and futile, appeared on our ballot. Only two districts outside of Boston gave the necessary 50 per cent of the vote to make it legal. The drys waged no campaign, and I personally did not vote on it, although it was on the ballot in my district. It is easy to bring greetings from the churches to the W. C. T. U. because the principles of the churches have been practiced by the women of this particular organization," began Rev. George L. Paine, executive secretary of the Boston Federation of Churches. He ended his address with, "I greet you and wish Godspeed to your loyal, truth-searching, principle-following organization."

"An eight-year-old law is like an eight-year-old boy, he needs a good mother; he needs the example of a good father, and he needs a good deal of discipline, but by the time he is 21 we will have forgotten that he ever was a bad boy," said Mrs. Henry W. Pealody, in extending greetings from the Woman's National Law Enforcement committee. "You spoke and stood for this great cause of prohibition first, and today we all stand with you. Toda two-thirds or three-fourths of the women of the nation stand for these principles.

"We look to you for leadership in this great fight. As I think of Frances Villard and Anna Gordon, one line comes to my mind. Our Lord was going to His death. One of His disciples had betrayed Him, and another had denied Him, while the other slept. Early in the morning while it was yet dark the women came to the tomb and found not a dead but a living Christ. That was the glory of woman, to bring light while it was yet dark. The W. C. T. U. while it was yet dark brought the light of truth."

Georgia Wins Banner.

The Georgia Loyal Temperance Legion, Mrs. R. H. McDougall, Jr., state secretary, won the national banner for the greatest gain in members. The L. T. L. is the children's branch of the W. C. T. U. and this state has made steady gains each year since Mrs. McDougall has been the leader, her success and the national award is a credit to her efficiency and an honor to the state, and a blessing to Georgia childhood. Around the choir loft and gallery of Tremont Temple were festooned L. T. L. chains of red, white and blue. The red bore the names of Hold Fast, or old members, the blue those secured the past year, and the white ribbon fastened them together. They made a chain two miles in length. Dr. and Mrs. McDougall are being congratulated upon the arrival of a new Loyal Temperance Legioner in their family, little Miss Modena McDougall, the youngest in the state, is scarcely two weeks of age.

Patriotic Roll.

A spectacular feature of the young people's program in Boston was the showing of the patriotic roll, visualizing two miles of total abstinence signatures of young Americans, prepared for and displayed at the recent world's W. C. T. U. convention in Switzerland. About 12,000 of the 361,500 signatures were placed there by Georgia young men and young women, collected and sent by Miss Mary Fanny Harris, of Hogansville, the state secretary of the Georgia Young People's branch. Georgia's young people's encampment at Toccoa last summer received special mention. Through the volunteer captain plan 58,992 new members were gained last year. With Mrs. Dudley Smith, of Eastman, as membership director, Georgia enrolled 1,246 of these. Georgia W. C. T. U. poet laureate, Mrs. Annie Durham Methvin, recently moved to Decatur, has frequently had her poems appear in the national and many state W. C. T. U. papers. This year, as well as last, the song used at the elaborate Union Signal demonstration was written by Mrs. Methvin, both times by request.

In the Union Signal account of platform night at the national convention it is stated, "And Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, the last speaker, what did she not speak of? In a perfect torrent of eloquent words she carried her audience from ecstasy to hilarity, from mirth to seriousness, and left them overwhelmed in their attempt to grasp, assimilate and digest the wealth of information and inspiration she poured upon them. Which reminds one of the complaint of one of her men hearers some years ago, that he couldn't take in what she was saying, she spoke so rapidly. To which Mrs. Armor replied with her usual graciousness, but with the rapidity of chain lightning, 'If I can think fast enough to get the words out you ought to be able to think fast enough to get their meaning in.'"

Riley-Stephenson Wedding Takes Place at St. Luke's

Mrs. Morris Holt Stephenson, who was, before her marriage, Miss Martha Doane Riley. Photograph by Elliott's Peachtree studio.

Marked by quiet dignity and simplicity was the wedding of Miss Martha Doane Riley to Morris Holt Stephenson, which took place Saturday at 3:30 o'clock. The ceremony was performed at St. Luke's Episcopal church, in the presence of a few intimate friends of the bride and groom, with Rev. N. R. High Moor officating.

The bride, who was lovely in an afternoon gown of blue velvet and lace, and a silver toque trimmed with blue velvet, entered with the groom and Dr. Moor. The organ was played throughout the ceremony by Hugh Hodgson. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Riley, of Atlanta, and is an alumnae of Agnes Scott college, from which she graduated last June. Mr. Stephenson, a son of S. E. Stephenson, has been for several years connected with the Citizens & Southern bank in Atlanta. Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson will make their home in Atlanta, following a motor trip through Florida.

D. A. R.'s Plan Xmas. Program and Tea.

The Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., meets Saturday, December 15, at Craigie house. Following a very short business session a Christmas program will be presented by the regent, Mrs. John William Smith.

A one-act Christmas play, "Reverie," will be given by Miss Mara Stanford. A beautiful program of Christmas music will include several vocal selections by Misses Doris and Ruth O'Steen with violin obligato by Miss Ruth Dabney Smith. Following the program the regent will be hostess at a Christmas tea and every member of the chapter is given a special invitation to attend.

Dr. Shelton Lectures Monday At the Atlanta Woman's Club

Dr. W. A. Shelton, professor of Semitic languages and literature at Emory university, lectures on "Recent Archaeological Discoveries In the Near East" at the meeting of the Atlanta Woman's club Monday afternoon, December 10, at 3 o'clock, over which the president, Mrs. Charles Goodman, presides. He will give a sketch of excavations made at King Tu-tank-a-men's tomb, 3000 B. C., at Luxor, Egypt. This will be followed by a resume of recent discoveries made during the last two or three years. The lecture will be illustrated by stereopticon views showing the places where these recent discoveries have been made. He will also discuss the archaeological discoveries which have been made at Babylonia where a queen's tomb is being excavated. The trinkets and ornaments found in this tomb are said to be representative of the civilization of 3300 B. C. Pictures of relics taken from this tomb are not yet available as some of the discoveries were only made last summer. Pictures of relics and the tomb of King Tu-tank-a-men will be included in the slides which Dr. Shelton will show, as well as views of the places where the recent excavations are being made. He is a member of the Royal Geographic society, a professor of Hebrew and the Old Testament literature, and has spent much time in the Near East in extensive research work.

The following musical program will be given by members of Draughon Entertainers, a club of young people of Draughon's Business college, who play, sing, and act, under the direction of Miss Mary K. Jerome: Violin solo, "Meditation" from "Thais," Massenet, Carlos Agostini; whistling solo, "Glow Worm," Lincke, Miss Elizabeth Goodwin; male quartet, "Lullaby Moon," William Brown, Messrs. Edwards, Chappelle, Dukes, Shaw; whistling solo, "Night of Meditation," Lewis, Miss Elizabeth Goodwin; trio, "Ave Maria," Bach-Gounod, violin, Mr. Agostini; voice, Miss Mary K. Jerome; piano, Miss Mary Roberts.

Benefit Bridge.

For a number of years the Atlanta Woman's club has contributed to the happiness and Christmas joy of several hundred unfortunate little children in the city of Atlanta, by distributing gifts and brightly colored bags of fruit, nuts and candies. This year there are over seven hundred children looking forward to being remembered by the club. Mrs. T. J. Ripley, chairman of the child welfare department of the Atlanta Woman's club, is in charge of this service this Christmas and a benefit bridge, Friday afternoon, December 14, at 2:30 o'clock, is being sponsored by her committee to assist in making this beautiful custom possible this Christmas. Tickets wil sell for 50c each, or $2 a table. Tea and cinnamon toast will be served during the game. Table prizes and drawing prizes will be given, a list of which will be announced later in the week. Mrs. Ripley and the child welfare department will be assisted by members of the public welfare department and of the American home department of the club. Mrs. J. A. Carlisle and Mrs. George Ripley will have charge of the home-made candy table. Reservations can be made by calling the club office or Mrs. T. J. Ripley.

Club Calendar.

The Service Star legion meets at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, December 11. Tuesday morning, December 11, the garden committee will hold a meeting at 10:30. Mr. Seeley, of the etomology department of the state capitol will lecture. Wednesday, December 12, the Babies' club will give a tea dance in the banquet hall. Wednesday evening Tech High school will give a play in the auditorium, followed by a dance in the banquet hall. Thursday, December 13, a subscription dance will be given in the banquet hall. Friday, December 14, the Atlanta chapter DeMolay will give a dance in the banquet hall. Friday, December 14, the child welfare department, Mrs. T. J. Ripley, chairman, will sponser a benefit bridge, which will commence at 2:30 o'clock. Saturday evening, December 15, a subscription dance will be given in the banquet hall.

LaGrange College News of Interest.

LaGrange, Ga., December 8.—"Christian Holidays" was the subject of the program of the Philomatian club, which met Wednesday afternoon in Hardwick Hall. Miss Julia Teasley, of Bowman, gave a general summary of the subject, and Miss Janie Mae Quillian, of LaFayette, told the story of the "First Thanksgiving." Miss Carolyn Hairston, of LaGrange, gave a Thanksgiving selection as a reading. Miss Sara Barrett, of Augusta, told of "Christmas Celebration In Different Countries," and Miss Neenah Woods gave a vocal solo.

Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Lindenmayer gave a shower to the International Relations club, at their home on the college hill, Saturday afternoon. Each member came dressed to represent some country, and brought gifts to furnish the clubroom.

W. E. Thompson, president of the college, is presiding over the meeting of the Southern Association of Woman's Colleges, which is being held in Fort Worth, Texas. He will also attend the meeting of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the southern states which is also being held in Fort Worth from December 3 to 10.

Wednesday afternoon the following program on peace was given at the International Relations club: Geneva Protocol, Miss Margaret Dallis, of LaGrange; Locarno pact, Miss Evelyn Powell, of LaGrange; Kellogg treaty, text, Miss Fannie Lou Smith, of Buford; Kellogg treaty, history, Miss Eloise White, of Chipley.

Miss Mildred Stipe, of Decatur, was the only L. C. girl who went home for Thanksgiving, since the day was a full one at the college. At 9 o'clock Hubert Quillian, of LaGrange, delivered the main address at a Thanksgiving service held in Hardwick hall. At 10 o'clock the freshmen played against the upper classmen in a basketball game, and won with a score of 29 to 12. The freshman team was composed of Misses Alleyn Boyle, of East Point; Elizabeth Dunbar, of Macon; Evelyn Galloway, of Waverly Hall; Winnie Clark, of Ellenwood, and the captain, Miss Juanita Jones, of Eastman. The upperclassmen who played were: Misses Rosalie Kamper, of Decatur; Madeline Walters, of Atlanta; Agnes Richardson, of Fairmount; Katie McLaughlin, of Senoja; Inez Bartley, of LaGrange; Mattie Jo Pullin, of Locust Grove, and Mary Walker, of Stone Mountain. A wiener roast on the campus took the place of regular lunch. At 1 o'clock the Curtain Raisers presented the "First Thanksgiving Dinner" in the auditorium at 1 o'clock. The cast of characters included: Misses Elwyn Wallace, of LaFayette, as Governor Bradford; Elizabeth Moss, of Waleska, as Elder Brewster; Agnes Richardson, of Fairmount, as Miles Standish; Gordo Davis, of LaGrange, as John Alden; Dorothy Abercrombie, of Douglasville, as Herbert Winslow; Inez Bartley, of LaGrange, as Massasoit; Evelyn Powell, of LaGrange, as Dame Brewster; Carolyn Hairston, of LaGrange, as Priscilla; Aldyne Jordan, of Royston, as Betty Brewster; Winnie Clark, of Ellenwood, as Dame Howe; Alice Cohen, of Jesup, as Patience Horner, and Matilee Dunn, of Warm Springs, as Giles Horner. The play was directed by Miss Mary Margaret Chester. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon a formal banquet was given in the dining hall. Miss Sara King, of Rome, was toastmistress.

The faculty members who arranged the program were Miss Helen Harriet Salls, Miss Maude Helen Dunnan and Miss Jeannett Alexander. The decorating committee was Miss George Wardlaw, Miss LuLu Jones and Miss Neenah Woods, assisted by members of the sophomore class.

Mrs. Sharp Urges Chairmen To Make Tree-Planting Plans

Mrs. Norman Sharp, Georgia president of the National Dixie Highway Road of Remembrance association, calls attention of all chairmen of this organization to the advisability of at once outlining their tree-planting plans for the season. December and January are the two best planting months of the year and a large planting program is desired for the south by the national association officers, in order that Georgia and the southern states keep abreast of the work being done in other sections.

Chairmen in the different sections of Georgia are requested to see that trees are planted that are typical of their respective localities, as the entire planting program from Florida to Cincinnati is intended to portray the type of tree that is typical of each section.

The pecan, magnolia, peach trees of south Georgia are recommended for the southern part of the state, while shade trees interspersed with dogwood and crepe myrtle are suggested for the northern parts of the state. The national association will supply, free of charge, to each chapter on handsome bronze memorial marker to be used in the dedication of a tree or avenue of trees dedicated to the memory of the unknown soldier.

Chairmen may obtain further information regarding the memorial markers from Mrs. Orren Massey, 255 Hardeman avenue, Macon, Ga., a past president of the national association. Chairmen are requested to outline planting plans as soon as possible, and gain the cooperation of their chapter members in bringing about the most extensive planting program this season than has ever before been accomplished in the state.

Social News From U. of Ga.

Athens, Ga., December 8.—Dr. Charles A. Sheldon, of Atlanta, was guest artist at an organ recital in the University of Georgia chapel Tuesday evening, which was sponsored by the music department of which Hugh Hodgson, of Atlanta, and Athens is head.

Sponsored by the Athen's Art association, an exhibition of famous works of arts is being held this week in War Memorial hall on the university campus.

Dr. R. P. Stephens, dean of the graduate school of the university, has returned from Atlanta, where he attended the annual meeting of the deans of southern colleges and universities.

M. E. Brinson, Jr., and F. C. Terrell, members of the local chapter of the Sigma Nu fraternity, will attend the annual gathering of that organization in Savannah December 28-29.

Pierre S. Porohovshikov, former high official of Russia, who was lecturer at the institute on international relations and public affairs at the university summer school, and who is now making his home in Atlanta, was a visitor to the university this week.

Two women's riding classes, under the instruction of Maj. F. W. Whitney, of the university R. O. T. C., will begin just after the Christmas holidays as a part of the work in physical education.

Wynn Burton, Atlanta, senior in the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism, has returned from Evanston, Ill., where he attended the annual convention of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalistic fraternity, as a representative of the university chapter. Mr. Burton and three other members of the local chapter will install a chapter of the fraternity at the University of South Carolina just after the Christmas recess.

W. F. Caldwell, news editor of the southern division offices of the Associated Press in Atlanta, addressed students in the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism Thursday morning.

Chancellor Charles M. Snelling and Dean S. V. Sanford went to Atlanta Friday, where they were the principal speakers at an alumni banquet at the Biltmore hotel Friday evening.

Dr. R. E. Park, head of the English department of the university, and Murray Soule, editor of the State College of Agriculture, who were in an automobile accident near Cordele Saturday, are recovering rapidly.

The local chapter of the Kappa Delta sorority entertained with a dance and reception at their home Saturday to which were invited members of the college social set as well as the local patronesses of the organization.

Mrs. C. G. Anderson Honors Mother With Bridge-Tea

Mrs. C. Gordon Anderson entertained Friday afternoon at her home on Bolling road with a bridge-tea in honor of her mother, Mrs. Mazie Lyles, of Gainesville, Fla. Guests present included Mrs. Robert H. Scott, Mrs. Eunice May, Mrs. John K. Davenport, Mrs. Paul H. Franke, Mrs. Edgar Busbee, Mrs. Frank L. Stanton, Jr., Miss Katherine Voyle, Mrs. Claude Shelton, Mrs. James J. Doran, Miss Jane Senton, of Raleigh, N. C., and Mrs. Mazie Lyles, honoree. Mrs. May won first prize for high score and received a modernistic make-up box. Mrs. Lyles received a guest prize of a dainty piece of lingerie.

P.-T. A. Plans for Distribution Of Clothing to Needy

The following proposed plan was presented by Mrs. J. E. Jackson, chairman of welfare for the Atlanta P.-T. A. council for the distributing of clothing and shoes furnished by the P.-T. A. to the needy:

First: The chairman of the welfare committee of each P.-T. A. will have charge of the collection of such shoes, clothing and funds as her members may contribute. If she and her principal decide that these shall be used only for caring for cases in their own community they may handle them as they deem best, that is, the principal may provide space in the school where the shoes and clothing may be stored and from which she may draw to provide children in need. She and the principal may keep such record of expenditures in this manner as they and the P.-T. A. think best but it is suggested that each be reported to the attendance department in order that it may cooperate more completely with the Community Chest.

Second: If the local P.-T. A. in cooperation with the principal of the school decides that shoes, clothing and funds contributed by the P.-T. A. shall be sent to the central office, such shoes, clothing and funds may be properly wrapped, marked and sent to the school by the child of the mother making the contribution. The principal in turn may forward this package to the central office attendance office, by school mail. The attendance department will receive these and receipt for them.

Third: The attendance department will have provided a central storage space where these may be collected and cared for until distributed. The atendance department assumes accountability for these and undertakes to handle their distribution according to the following plan:

1. The attendance officer will upon finding a need or answering a request make what investigation she deems necessary in order to determine the immediate needs of the child. It is understood that this relief is limited to school children. The primary considerations will be:

A. To get the child in school.

B.—To protect the child and the community against parents who are able but dilatory in providing for their family. If the attendance officer decides that no relief is necessary, she will order the child to school, making a court case if necessary. If the attendance officer decides that emergency relief is needed she will endeavor to ascertain first if the family is receiving help from other source; second, if any immediate relative in the city is able and willing to help. If it seems necessary for the attendance officer to provide relief she will (a) if the family lives in a school district whose P.-T. A. is handing its own relief, get in touch with the principal and chairman of the welfare committee and that of the chairman of the welfare committee of that P.-T. A. If they are unable to help, the attendance officer will then provide help from the central P.-T. A. funds; (b) if the family is in a district that contributes to the central office chest, she will supply the need direct from the central office.

Fourth: The attendance department undertakes to keep an accurate record of both the investigation and the relief furnished. The attendance department will also register the case with the exchange service of the Community Chest. It is understood that the relief undertaken by the P.-T. A. in this way is of and emergency and temporary nature. If it is found that the family needs service of a more or less permanent nature the department may furnish temporary relief but will refer the case to the proper agency of the chest, furnishing this agency with whatever information the office has concerning the case.

Fifth: If it is found that the family is receiving aid from an agency of the chest the attendance officer will consult with that agency in rendering aid.

Sixth: The attendance department, provided the P.-T. A. approves the policy, will undertake to provide relief in the form of shoes and clothing to clients of the agencies of the Community Chest in the same way as the school department now takes care of streetcar fare, fees, supplies, etc.

Seventh: The attendance department will endeavor to furnish the P.-T. A. with such reports as may be desired.

SPECIAL SERVICES

Wesley Memorial To Show Slides From Movie.

Art slides in color from the noted moving picture, "The King of Kings," will feature special religious services at the Wesley Memorial church at 7:30 o'clock tonight. The slides will be used to ilustrate the Rev. L. Wilkie Collins' sermon on "The True Portrait of Jesus."

Music for the occasion will be furnished by Solon Drukenmiller, guest soloist, assisted by the church choir.

AS FOUR WOMEN HEAR IT

A NATURAL PILLAR-LIKE FORMATION of Basaltic rock covers a section of the north coast of Antrim, Ireland. The masses are hexagonal, each fitting precisely with convex and concave surfaces into the masses adjoining. Some of these phenominal formations have crumbled away; others stretch with uncanny exactness into an extended roadway on which tradition claims the giants crossed to the opposite side of Scotland, where the same rocks are seen; and as strange as it may seem still others have found their way to the back yard of Mrs. Shepherd Bryan, on Peachtree street.

Many years ago Chief Justice Joseph Henry Lumpkin, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Bryan, upon a return trip from the coast of Ireland, brought three of the blocks from this rock mass, which is universally known as "The Giant's Causeway," forming a balast in his ship and at the same time bringing to his home in Virginia a souvenir of his Irish trip. Since that time these blocks, which are of peculiar historic interest, have traveled with the Lumpkin and Cobb families until they finally nestled into the greensward in the rear of Mrs. Bryan's home.

From Wilkes county, where the Lumpkin family later moved, the stones found a place in the home of Mrs. T. R. R. Cobb, of Athens, the grandmother of Mrs. Bryan; afterward being the property of Mrs. Sallie Cobb Jackson and Captain Henry Jackson, parents of Mrs. Bryan, at their home on Rawson street and later at the old homestead on Capitol square. Three years ago they took up their abode at the home of Judge and Mrs. Bryan at Twelfth and Peachtree streets.

Not until one has a glimpse of the under surfaces of these rocks is it plain that they are unique. The convex surface of the lower block fits neatly into the concave face of the basalt hexagon above it. Aside from its historic significance the children of Mrs. Bryan's family have found it most convenient as a "jumping block," about which a series of childhood games might be played. Mrs. Bryan's children, Marion, Florence and Mary; those of Mrs. Quill Orme, Mrs. Bryan's sister, Quill Orme, Jr., and Mrs. Sara Orme Huger, as well as Wilmer Moore, Jr., and Cornelia Moore, children of Mrs. Wilmer Moore, the sister of Mrs. Bryan, have made them the center of their sports and games.

The blocks which compose the "Giant's Causeway" differ from several inches to many feet across, the rock formation averaging from 20 to 30 blocks in breadth. This natural phenomenon became of such universal interest in 1883 that an electric railway, the first in the united kingdom, was opened for traffic, connecting the causeway with Portrush and Brushmills, on the coast of Scotland. In some places the causeway extends 100 yards over the water where it sinks into the sea.

PERHAPS THE NAME of the Right Reverend Ernest M. Stires, Protestant Episcopal bishop of Long Island, failed to register as an erstwhile Georgian with readers perusing the Associated Press account last Sunday of the marriage of Miss Estelle Manville and Count Folke Bernadotte, nephew of King Gustav V. of Sweden, and descendant of Napoleon's marshal, the great Bernadotte, afterward king of Sweden. It was Bishop Stires, who, after the choir of St. John's Episcopal church in Pleasantville, N. Y., had sung the bridal hymn, gave the marriage charge to the bride, daughter of an American millionaire, and Count Bernadotte, belonging to the royal family of Sweden. The ceremony glittered with the splendor of wealth and social position, and made a beautiful American girl the niece of the King of Sweden, bringing her nearer to any royal house and a reigning throne than any other American.

Bishop Stires met and married Miss Sarah Hardwick, of Augusta, while he was rector of the church of the Good Shepherd on The Hill, and his oratorical achievements so impressed some of the millionaires wintering at the Bon Air-Vanderbilt, that he was called to the fashionable St. Thomas church on Fifth avenue, where he was rector for 25 or 30 years. Mrs. Stires is a sister of Mrs. Robert Wood, the former Miss Mary Hardwick, whose husband, General Wood, is president of Sears-Roebuck, and their first cousin is Mrs. Erwin Perry, who resides on Virginia avenue, and was Miss Lallie Davis, a member of one of the most aristocratic families in Eatonton, Ga.

MRS JOSEPH ALBERT OSWALD certainly put one over on society, and proved conclusively that a woman keeps a secret if she wants to, for not a soul had an inkling of the impending marriage of the former Miss Lucy Elizabeth Harper to Mr. Oswald, which was quietly solemnized last Wednesday evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph N. Harper on East Fifteenth street. The promenade deck of a palatial trans-Atlantic steamer furnished the picturesque setting for the beginning of the romance, as this charming Georgian and the handsome Ohioan met on board the liner and immediately fell victim to one another's charms.

The newlywed Mrs. Oswald was en route to Europe with a party of friends to finish her education through travel and contact with old-world customs and people, while Mr. Oswald had a very important business deal calling him to London. After reaching England, he was so captivated by time paying ardent attention to the girl of his dreams, and planning sight-seeing trips entirely for her pleasure, until his business venture was all but placed in the discard. They met in the latter part of the summer of 1926, and up to the date of their marriage in 1928, Cupid lured Mr. Oswald from Dayton, Ohio, to the Gate City of the south no less than 12 or 15 times.

Then they were married, as fairy tales always end and lived happily ever after. Following the waning of the honeymoon, spent in New York city, Mr. and Mrs. Oswald will journey to Dayton, and the trousseau and bridal presents will be unpacked in the elegantly furnished apartment which Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Oswald, parents of the groom, prepared for their love nest, and where the bride and groom will rule in new and charming world of their own.

THE PROPER SOCIAL ambition demands that one aspire to be sponsor of the Georgia-Tech game. Five young Atlantans between the ages of 10 and 12 have already realized this enviable height.

At the Alabama-Tech football game Thanksgiving day, down by the Tech players' bench, where enthusiasm runs high, and jersey-coated men root hard for success, were seen five charming members of the very young set: Misses Elizabeth Scott, Marie Louise Scott Juanita Gresham, Eloise Gresham and Claire Hunnicutt. Gay little heads tossed, hands at intervals clapped excitedly, eyes sparkled as this Tech player and that made his mark. Very seldom is a prettier picture than these five lassies with their chrysanthemum bouquets seen at any Tech game. They are the sponsors of Coach "Alex," intrebid leader of the Tech players. Besides them was Al Doonan, well known Atlantan, who for the past four Thanksgiving games has escorted these little sponsor-belles to the Thanksgiving game.

The football fan enjoys the game. But his delight is nothing compared to that of these little champions of the cause of Tech. Their spirits run high. Their joy at the semblance of victory is keen. And their appreciation of the friendship of their respective fathers and Coach Alexander which has placed them each year with bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums down by the Tech players' bench, is evident indeed.

MRS CHARLES T. NUNNALLY converses most entertainingly upon her visits to the theater on her recent trip to New York city, declaring "The Strange Interlude" to have been her most interesting theatrical experience, with Richard Bennett's "Jarnegan" running a close second. The profane, swaggering hero of the story written by Jim Tully was admirably suited to the gifted Mr. Bennett, one of the most eminent actors on the American stage. When "Jarnegan" was published three years ago it immediately became the target of the moral critics, and a greater part of the reading world thought the novel unpleasant and immoral, although powerful and impressive. But the critics contended that life was not thus in Holleywood, and, if it were, the facts should be suppressed.

The drama, so Mrs. Nunnally states, is exactly like the novel, and the play, running at the Longacre theater, shows just how well Mr. Bennett can act, as he gives a magnificent performance in "Jarnegan." Almost the whole of the first half of the second act takes place out of sight of the audience. Mr. Bennett's pleasing voice is heard as he directs the manufacture of a moving picture, and to make it realistic, the audience hears noises made by the players in this picture, but sees little or nothing of what is happening. The action of the play is novel and unusual and gives Richard Bennett of "The Barker," and "Beyond the Horizon" fame ample opportunity to display his remarkable talents.

ECHOES FROM Armistice day tell of a little group, composed of Governor Hardman, Mrs. Hardman and the faithful gardener employed at the executive mansion, engaged in planting a tiny oak seedling on the sloping lawn in front of the governor's mansion. Some day a huge oak tree will flourish in the now unsheltered spot and like its parent, the great Athens tree which owns itself, it will form an inspiration for centuries to come, proving worthy of the great world war hero, Colonel John McCrae, author of that unforgettable classic "In Flanders Field," in whose memory it was planted.

On the same day, two other tiny trees were planted, one on the campus at McGill university, Montreal, Canada, in the country where the young warrior first saw the light of day, and the other in the soil of the campus of the State Normal school at Athens. All three grew from acorns gathered from the famous tree, the only one in existence which owns itself and the soil upon which it stands, the land having been donated to the giant oak by Colonel William Jackson early in the nineteenth century. The lovely thought of propagating the stock of this noble tree was that of Miss Moina Michael, of Athens, known throughout the land as the "Poppy Lady." She it was who conceived the idea of planting the three acorns in a box of soil. They grew to be oaks, and arriving at the tender age of three, Miss Michael decided they were strong enough and worthy of the mission to which they were consecrated. Though no ceremony marked the planting of the tree on the mansion lawn, it was with a mind and a heart perfectly attuned to the noble mission that the First Lady of Georgia committed to the soil the tree in embryo.

SNAPSHOTS OF ATLANTANS collected at random: Mrs. Harry English departing from Brookwood station on the Crescent Limited for New York city wrapped in a gorgeous sable coat, worn over a stylish brown crepe gown, her felt hat and suede pumps being of harmonizing tones of brown. Mrs. Warner Martin costumed in all-brown, and Mrs. Y. Frank Freeman wearing an all-wine colored outfit, promenading out Peachtree street, en route to St. Mark's church to attend a missionary meeting. Mrs. Henry Jackson, of New York, gowned in black satin embroidered in blue, topped by a black felt hat, and Mrs. Oscar Newton wearing black velvet combined with white, and a becoming black velvet hat, at Mrs. Edward McCerren's luncheon to Mrs. Henry Wilson, New York city, given at the Georgian Terrace last Tuesday. Mrs. Marion Harper "Santa Clausing" at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose, so laden down with packages that her face was almost entirely hidden from view. Mrs. Corra Harris moving majestically through the lobby of the Georgian Terrace, having come down from Rydal to spend a week at the Terrace. Mrs. Annie Adair Foster, the noted authority on bridge, made an excellent point in her talk before the players attending the de luxe bridge party last Tuesday at the Atlanta Woman's club, declaring the attitude toward bidding in auction bridge and contract is so different, that many persons playing contract, are really bidding auction, and playing contract. Mrs. Samuel C. McIntyre in a stunning chiffon velvet afternoon dress at the bridge-tea given by Mrs. John R. Dinsmore at Fort McPherson. Mrs. Roy Turrentine surrounded by trunks and hat boxes in a flurry of packing in anticipation of an early leave-taking for the Philippines. Mrs. Del Comfort, the charming wife of Lieutenant Comfort, dancing at Fort McPherson in a black taffeta evening dress made with a tight bodice and bouffant skirt and trimmed with a huge crimson bow. Petite Miss Harriet Ramsey in a charming little dress of pale blue taffeta trimmed with two pink rosebuds acting as flower girl at the wedding of Miss Louise Young and Lieutenant Malcolm Kaumerer at St. Paul's Episcopal church at Columbus, Ga. That's all today. More next Sunday.

Poetry Forum Meets With Mrs. Allemong.

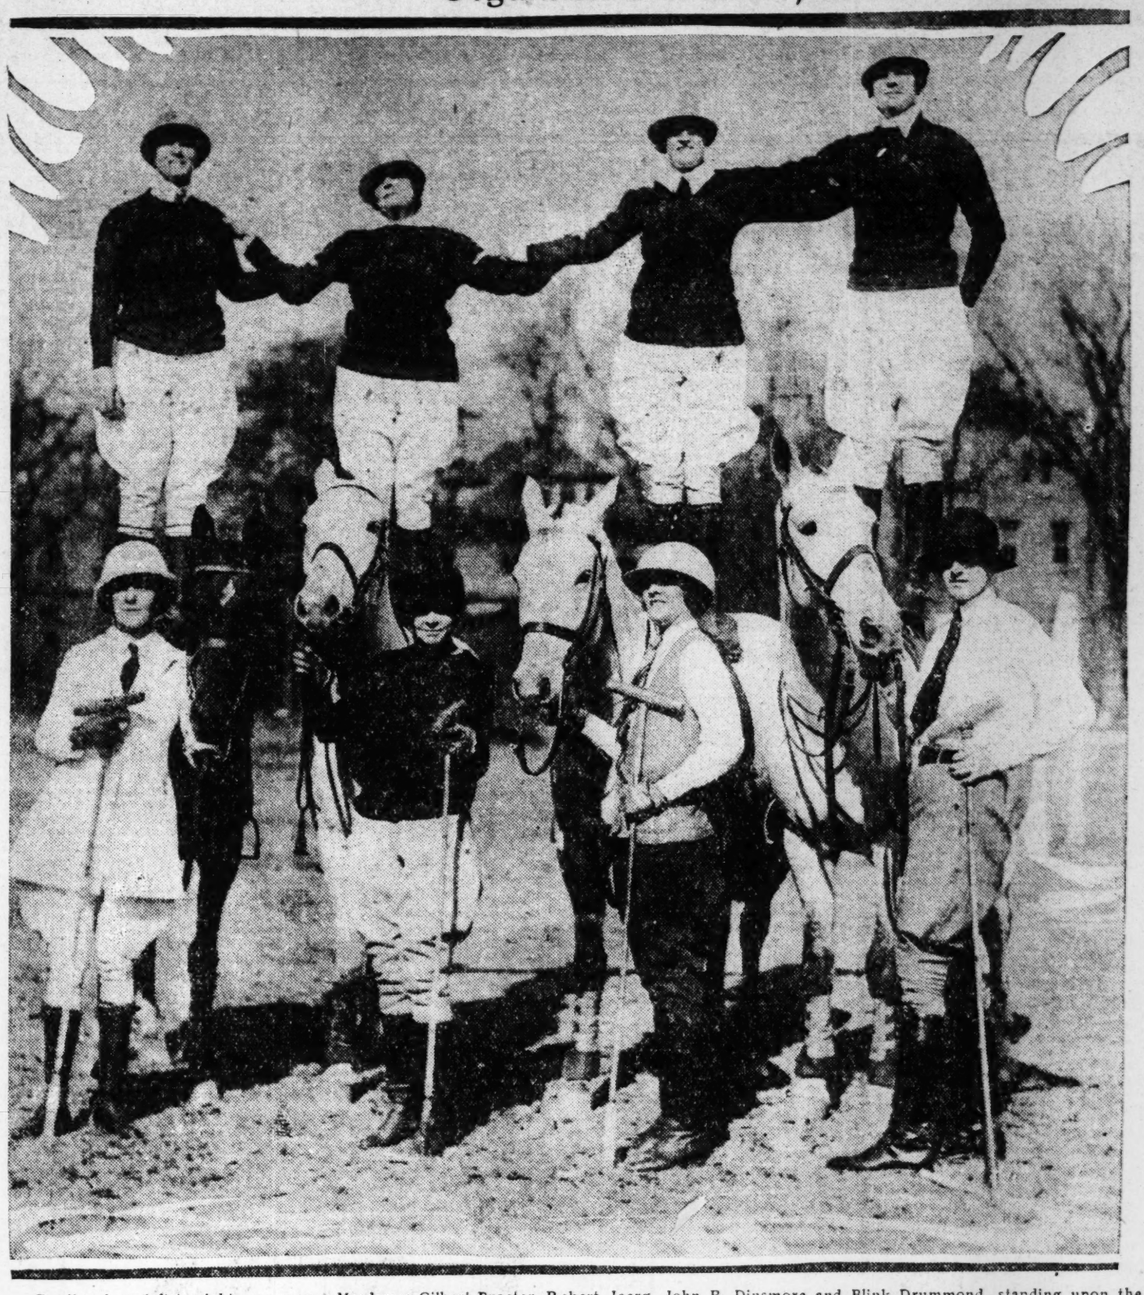
The Poetry Forum of the Atlanta Writers' club will hold its regular meeting on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. J. E. Allemong, 41 Fourth street, N. E. This will be the last meeting before Christmas and members of the Writers' club and all interested in poetry are cordially invited to be present.

The reading from his new volume of poems by Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, which was planned for this meeting, has been unavoidably postponed, but Dr. Jacobs has promised to give the forum this deferred pleasure early in the new year. In Dr. Jacobs' absence other features have been arranged for the program. Agnes Kendrick Gray, chairman, will preside. The Christmas poem contest will close Monday, December 10, and many excellent contributions have been received.

Grant Park Camp Fire Girls Organize Groups.

A new group of Camp Fire Girls has recently been organized at the Grant Park school, and the first project will be a candy pulling at 2:30 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon, December 12, at the school. Tickets may be obtained for 10 cents each from any member of this group, or at Camp Fire headquarters, 161 Spring street. The proceeds will be used for dues and other group expense. Another interesting project which is being promoted by this group is the painting of novelty boxes, to be used as Christmas gifts, in which Miss Lillian Johnson and Miss Virginia Pair, of the Owakica group of Girls' High school, are assisting with this group.

Fort McPherson Woman's Polo Team Is First Organization South of Mason-Dixon Line



Reading from left to right, upper row, Mesdames Gilbert Procter, Robert Joerg, John R. Dinsmore and Blink Drummond, standing upon the mounts being held by Mesdames Thomas Mayo, H. R. W. Herwig, Harold Evans and Miss Pam Johnson, the group of players forming the Fort McPherson women's polo team, the first organization of its kind to be formed south of the Mason and Dixon line. These clever and adept feminine polo players are being trained by Lieutenant Gilbert Procter, aide-de-camp to Major General Richmond P. Davis. Photograph by Kenneth Rogers, staff photographer.

BY MRS. IDA FRANCES WING,
Staff Correspondent.

Fort McPherson, Ga., December 8.—Canada may boast its woman's polo team, which journeyed into the United States in October to meet a selected American woman's team at Long Island, but the south points with great pride today to its own woman's polo squad of Fort McPherson. This team is believed to be the first of its kind organized south of the historical Mason-Dixon line, and to Lieutenant Gilbert Procter belongs the honor and deserved credit for its organization and success. Lieutenant Procter, who is aide de camp to Major General Richmond P. Davis, and an outstanding rider and polo player of distinction, has been instructing the squad for three training periods each week. Much time has been spent by the team in the pen mounted on the wooden horse, hours have been consumed in "riding 'em off," and the command of "Hands aloft! canter without stirrups" has become a familiar one.

Utter the Word.

Just utter the word polo at a bridge tea, hop, or dinner in the presence of a member of the squad and one will unleash a stream of conversation interspersed with "I'm developing my near side forward," "Black Diamond is handling better," "I haven't been policed yet," and "Bourbon appears timid at the side boards." Although the fair equestriennes have become such enthusiastic polo players the feminine attributes have not given way before the expert horsemanship for in the tonneaus of the various cars driven by members of the team are found dainty compacts hobnobbing with polo mallets, with helmets and balls, making the acquaintance of milady's favorite lipstick.

On account of their infinite patience, light hands, and instinctive tact in the use of the aids the girls of the post personnel have long been in demand by the post polo team as trainers of the Fort McPherson polo string. Their patient work with the ponies in the past having acquainted them with the individual characteristics and temperaments of the various mounts enables them to devote their time to stick work and team play rather than to the schooling of the horse.

The polo squad is quite cosmopolitan in its personnel for seven states are represented by the eight members of the team. Mrs. Gilbert Procter, who was captain of the Uplifters Ladies Polo Team of California for nearly two years, when Lieutenant and Mrs. Procter were stationed on the west coast, is a clever player and horsewoman from Texas, while Mrs. Thomas Mayo is a native of Massachusetts; Mrs. Robert Joerg, Jr., claims Alabama as her native state; Mrs. Hans R. W. Herwig represents Arkansas; Miss Pamela Johnston and Mrs. Harold Evans are from Georgia, and Mrs. John R. Densmore is from Tennessee. Mrs. Blink Drummond and Miss Helen Thomas are "army children," the daughters of Colonel and Mrs. Charles O. Thomas and may be said to represent all the states since Miss Thomas was born in the far away Philippines and Mrs. Drummond was born on Angel Island, off the California coast and they moved with their parents to various cavalry stations throughout the mainland and its insular possessions. Mrs. Drummond is quite an addition to the McPherson team for she has played with the North Shore Girls' Polo team of Chicago, and both Mrs. Drummond and Mrs. Procter are experienced players and constitute a nucleus around which the team is formed.

Ere the opening of the next polo season in the early spring Lieutenant Procter is planning to have his team in condition for a series of games and late April will find the girls team in battle array.

Miss Shirley Gaskins Weds Dr. Thomison.

Dayton, Tenn., December 9.—The marriage of Miss Shirley Gaskins and Dr. Walter Agnew Thomison, Monday evening, December 3, at the home of the Rev. Rhea Cartwright, pastor of the Methodist Church south, came as a surprise to the many friends of the contracting couple in Tennessee and Georgia. Mrs. Thomison is the daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Newton Gaskins, of Hazelhurst, Ga., and is a graduate of the Georgia State Woman's college, receiving the normal diploma, and A. B. degree, and also of the University of Georgia, where she received her certificate in oratory. She is a descendant of prominent French and English families. The Gastins family came from the province of Gascony in France. She is a member of one of the best-known families of south Georgia. Her father is a prominent attorney of the Brunswick circuit.

Dr. Thomison is the only son of Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Thomison, and was educated at the University of Virginia, and Vanderbilt, where he received his medical degree. He did research work and took a post-graduate course in surgery at Mayo's, at Rochester, Minn. He is also a member of Kappa Sigma and Phi Chi fraternities, and also did intern work at Newell's, in Chattanooga. The Thomisons are one of the most prominent families of Rhea county. For years they have been physicians for Dayton, and this section. Dr. Thomison's mother was a member of the Darwin family, prominent in Rhea county circles.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomison will reside in Dayton, where Dr. Thomison is head surgeon at Thomison's hospital.

Pilot Club Is Formed By Business Women

Atlanta's Pilot club was formed at a meeting of business women held at the Henry Grady hotel Saturday evening. The international president, Miss Anne Council, of Sheffield, Ala., presided, assisted by Miss Lillian Grissey, chairman of the extension committee, and Miss Mabel Hall, president of the Macon Pilot leub.

The Pilot club is an organization for business women, closely following the outlines of Rotary, Kiwanis, Civitan and similar organizations now existing among business men. Membership is by invitation only, members being selected by reason of ability and attainment in their profession.

The Pilot club is a service club; its programs are varied, it lends its aid in putting over any civic movement for the good of its community; it sponsors such movements as Girl Scout work, maintains scholarships in business schools for worthy young girls, encourages all movements for better schools, it encourages a very high standard of efficiency and responsibility among its members; besides, affording much recreational amusement for its busy members and much good food for serious thought along lines of interest to the business woman.

State President Writes Article On Southeastern Council Meet

BY MRS. A. H. BRENNER,
President of Georgia Feleration.

Constructive discussion, brilliant addresses and charming social events made memorable the annual southern council of Federated Clubwomen, held at Grove Park Inn, Asheville, N. C., on Monday and Tuesday, November 26 and 27. Under the able direction of the president, Mrs. E. L. McKee, of Sylva, N. C., a splendid program was carried out, the sessions on Monday afternoon and Tuesday being held at the inn, and the two evening sessions at the beautiful auditorium of the Asheville clubhouse for women. Mrs. Thomas O'Berry, president of the North Carolina Federation, and Mrs. Herbert Martin, president, with Mrs. Charles A. Webb, general chairman of the Asheville club, acting as joint hostesses.

Mrs. Brantley's Resolution.

Seven of the eight states belonging to the council were well represented, a resolution sent by Mrs. A. P. Brantley, director from Georgia, was passed inviting Maryland to join the group. Mrs. John F. Sippel, president of the General Federation, was present and delivered an address on Monday night and conducted a round-table discussion in the afternoon. Mrs. Sippel expressed the hope that Maryland would join the council which she considered a great power for effectual service, not only to the south but to the whole General Federation.

Among the subject discussed were "Public Health," by Mrs. A. C. Avery, of Asheville, winner of the $5,000 General Federation health award; "Club Institutes," Miss Liela Russell Winthrop College, S. C.; "Scholarships," Mrs. Thomas F. Cleaver, treasurer of the Kentucky Federation; "Conservation," Mrs. M. L. Stanley, president of Florida Federation. The biennial convention and how to strengthen the relations between the state and general federation was given by Mrs. A. H. Brenner, president of Georgia. "Adult Illiteracy," by Elizabeth Morris, illiteracy chairman for North Carolina, was followed by a series of demonstrations showing how to interest adult illiterates in the night schools and the work of teaching. Eight women, young and old, entered heartily in the impromptu exhibition showing how to interest scholars, the teaching, singing, cooking and hand work as done in the city and county by Mrs. Morris, Mrs. Etheredge and their assistants. A chart was displayed giving the per cent of illiteracy in the states of the council. Totals, white and black: Kentucky, 8.4 per cent whites, 6.9 per cent black; Tennessee, 9 per cent white, 7.3 per cent black; Virginia, 11.2 per cent white, 6 per cent black; North Carolina, 11.2 per cent white, 8.2 per cent black; Georgia, 15.3 per cent white, 5.4 per cent black; Alabama, 16.7 per cent white, 6 per cent black; Florida, 6 per cent white, 2.9 per cent black. She also told of a plan for two years of intensive work to be proposed to the authorities of North Carolina, same to be done by congressional districts, stressing the county as a unit. She also told of excellent work already accomplished. By selling candy, cakes and hand-work, the scholars in the Asheville night schools have not only made considerable money for personal needs, but last year saved enough to go an an excursion to Raleigh to visit the capitol and call on the governor. This year they plan to charter cars and go 500 strong to Washington. It will cost $25 each and will be saved at the rate of about 50 cents per week. Mrs. Sippel extended an urgent invitation to them to attend a reception at General Federation headquarters, where she will receive them in person.

Publicity Discussed.

Newspapers and publicity was discussed by Miss Margaret Gibson, past president of the North Carolina Federation, and Mrs. Edith Susong president of Tennessee. Much interest was stirred by Mrs. Flora Gillentine, past president of Kentucky, by her eloquent address on America's attitude in law, justice and crime.

On Tuesday evening Dr. Edgar Knight, University of North Carolina, spoke on "The Area's Needs in Education." "Culturally, the advancing south still lags," he said. "The present low rank in libraries and in education defames the south. The southern states are no longer poor, the alibi of poverty cannot be established: 71 per cent of our people are without library facilities against 43 per cent for the entire United States. The entire southern states have only 50 counties with library service. New Hampshire has a book store for every 6,421; in North Carolina there is one for every 40,611, and in Alabama one for every 71,000 people." The speaker said southern people did not even buy books. The "Life and Letters of Walter Page" sold in the United States amounted to 97,000 copies, but North Carolina only bought 500 copies.

The speaker said he should guage our schools and colleges by national standards, and that a special survey made English composition had shown that the average college freshman was only capable doing second-year high school work. The average school term is 11-2 months less than in the advanced sections." His appeal was to meet national standards in education, barriers are broken down, the children of the south are going to have to compete with the nation, sectional lines are gone. Among the social events of the council, in addition to dinners and luncheons at the inn, which were attended by local clubwomen, was a reception at the clubhouse; a tea at the Biltmore Forest clubhouse, and a drive through the Biltmore estate.

Meets in Brunswick.

An invitation to meet at Brunswick, Ga., in 1929, was accepted if satisfactory date could be arranged. Time set for future meetings was between September 20 and October 7. A resolution was passed expressing appreciation of the work done by Secretary of War Kellogg in behalf of world peace and the stand taken by President Coolidge on the subject. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Flora Gilleentine, of Tennessee; vice president, Mrs. A. Y. Malone, of Alabama; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. W. D. Maginis, of South Carolina. Among the many courtesies extended was the gift of material for costumes from the famous woolens on display at Grove Park Inn to Mrs. Sippel, Mrs. McKee and Mrs. O'Berry. Hooked rugs were also presented to the two representatives coming the greatest distance. These fell to Mrs. Sippel and Mrs. Neilson, of Alabama.

Clubs Demonstrate Interest in Treaty.

Mrs. David Machman, of Augusta, chairman of international relations for Georgia Federation says:

"Much interest is being shown in the state in the Kellogg-Briand treaty, and many clubs have sent in petitions urging the senate to ratify this treaty without delay. Gratifying reports are coming in from all other states as well, and should this treaty be ratified, the women of the country will have played no small part in having brought this about. Following is a complete list of all clubs in Georgia that have sent in resolutions: Atlanta Woman's club, College Park Woman's club, Molena Civic club, Milner Woman's Improvement club, Locust Grove Woman's club, Atlanta Alpha Omega chapter of the Delphian society, West End Woman's club, Atlanta; Zebulon Woman's club, Red Bone Woman's club, of Barnesville; Meansville Woman's club, Executive Meeting Civic club of West End, Atlanta; Executive Board Meeting Lithonia Woman's club, Forsyth Woman's club, Atlanta chapter Randolph-Macon Woman's College alumnus, Emory Woman's club, Jackson Woman's club, Tenth District convention, City Federation of Women's clubs of Augusta, Harlem Woman's club, Augusta Woman's club, League of Women and Voters of Augusta, Barnesville Woman's club, Cobb County Federation, Carrie Dyer Reading club of Acworth, Kirkwood Civic league, Augusta Section Council of Jewish Women, Executive Board Meeting of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs."

Augusta Woman's Club Makes Xmas Appeal.

The August Woman's club is making its annual appeal for a "safe and sane" observance of Christmas, without fireworks. For some years past clubwomen have been successful in their efforts in preventing the sale and shooting of fireworks at Christmas. They consider that fireworks are dangerous to the life and safety of the children of the city, and to the public at large from the danger of fires caused by its use. Augusta clubwomen have expressed themselves each season as thinking that fireworks are not appropriate on the celebration of the Prince of Peace and at season that is holy in its significance. Each December a committee from the club appears before council to ask that the use of fireworks be forbidden, and they will follow their usual custom this December.

The conservation department, with Mrs. Charles Bowen, chairman, had charge of the program at the club luncheon last Tuesday and presented Dr. McHatton, of the State Agricultural college in Athens, who will talk on "Beautifying the Highways." Dr. McHatton is a man of delightful personality and an interesting speaker, and he will be heard with much interest by the clubwomen.

Mrs. Albert Edwards had charge of the menu and Mrs. Marion Symms of the decoration. The executive board meets at 12:30 o'clock and the luncheon will be served at 2 o'clock. Dr. and Mrs. McHatton were honor guests at the luncheon, of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Jack.

Covington Club Discusses Plan To Divide Work

Covington Woman's club of Covington met December 4, at 3:30 o'clock at the library with Mrs. O. W. Porter, the newly elected president, in the chair. Mrs. C. A. Sockwell was appointed to serve as corresponding secretary; Mrs. G. B. Nixon having resigned. Mrs. Luke Robinson, treasurer, gave a very good report of the finances of the club. Mrs. Porter, the president, discussed the dividing of the club into four departments, namely the department of American homes, with Mrs. C. C. King, chairman; department of education, Mrs. E. E. Callaway, chairman; department of fine arts, chairman to be appointed, and the department of public welfare, Mrs. J. E. Philips, chairman. The members were asked to write their choice of departments and answers will be placed accordingly.

Mrs. R. Fields Taylor, assistant corresponding secretary, reported invitations sent to newly elected members and ad a note of love and encouragement from Mrs. W. C. Clark. Mrs. Charles H. White, Mrs. Lester Lee and Mrs. Linton Smith were appointed as a new finance committee and Mrs. E. E. Callaway and Mrs. Emmett Rogers library committee. The club was asked to make a donation to the fund for needy cases at Christmas time and the amount was left in the hands of the executive committee. A membership drive is to be put on, Mrs. Charles White and Mrs. C. A. Sockwell, captains, choosing their sides. The drive ends Tuesday night, December 11, and the losing side is to entertain with a banquet in January.

Mrs. Linton Smith had charge of a most interesting program. Honorable R. P. Lester was the principal speaker of the afternoon, his subject. "Public Welfare," was handled in his eloquent manner. Several musical numbers and readings were enjoyed as follows: Violin solo, Miss Louise Hooten, accompanied by Miss Emily Elliott; musical reading, Miss Betty Reid, accompanied by Miss Emily Elliott reading, "The Newly Weds," Miss Mary Wood Gaither; reading, Master Linton Smith, Jr.

Mrs. Hodgson Issues Important Music Rules

Mrs. Hugh Hodgson, of Atlanta, chairman of division of music in the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs, gives rules for music in clubs and in the home. The present awakening of the American people to good music is giving music a place in home, club and municipal life, and the rules are as follows:

1.—Make assembly singing a part of every club program. Have at least one music program during the club year. Correlate music with general program topics. Use General Federation song book.

2.—If there is a special music department in the club, open occasional meetings to all members. Also give selections from special programs to schools and community institutes.

3.—Cooperate with all interests in music memory contects, hymn contests, National Music week, Christmas carol singing and special events of community observances.

4.—Give local artists "paid engagements" and encourage them in every way. Should artists not be available, give programs with player-piano or phonograph.

5.—Insist upon artists, whether local or imported, singing at least part of all programs in English and placing some American compositions on their programs.

6.—Establish a monthly music forum in neighborly sections, using private homes for a music hour.

7.—Consult with your motion picture managers and urge them to form choruses for the children of their communities which are allowed to participate in the Saturday performances. This will result in a more orderly audience, will serve as a means of uplift to the children and will prove a benefit to the community in general. Take an interest in the music of your motion picture theater, trying to better it in every way possible.

8.—Place books on music in school and public libraries. Consult with your school music supervisor in regard to the improvement of music in the schools, music memory contests and the placing of music in a more important place in the school curriculum.

9.—Make yearly collections of fine records for institutions and consult with the heads of these institutions as to the best means of carrying the cheer of good music to the inmates. One splendid community work is the installing of radios in hospitals with ear-phones for each bedside.

10.—Make good music popular and popular music good, demanding clean, uncordid words for all American songs.

Rules for music in the home include:

1.—Make the music instruments in your home a part of the home circle for the enjoyment and education of your family. Do not regard these instruments as furniture only. See that they are tuned and in perfect condition.

2.—Surround your children with music of the same character that you feel is right for them to have in pictures and books.

3.—On a player-piano or a phonograph. These self-playing instruments if rightly used, will do more to stimulate an interest in good music and to cultivate a musical taste than any other medium.

4.—Begin the definite study of music when your child has learned to love good musical selections. Choose the best teacher—not the cheapest.

5.—See that the pratcice hours are made interesting rather than tedious. Change your question from "How many minutes did you practice today?" to "Have you learned your music lesson?" Have your children taught to love music as well as to play on an instrument.

6.—Let your children realize that the study of music is of equal importance with the other studies of the school. Bring into the home circle the musical selections which can be correlated with the study of geography and history.

7.—Know yourself the life history of the great composers and the story of their great compositions so that you can tell your children. There are a number of helpful books published. Place them in your library.

Seventh District Club News Features Interesting Activities

The seventh district clubs of Georgia Federation, of which Mrs. Herbert Hague, of Marietta, is president, have been most active and many important measures have been featured. Mrs. Hague visited Chatsworth club, going from Dalton, where she visited Mrs. W. C. Martin and the Lesche club, and was guest of the club at luncheon at the Chatsworth hotel. Mrs. E. P. Adams, who presided over the meeting in the absence of the president, Mrs. J. Roy McGinfy, introduced Mrs. Hague, who gave one of the most instructive talks it has been the pleasure of the club to hear. She told how even small town clubs can do some work in every line. Mrs. Hague complimented the local club very highly, and was especially enthusiastic over the junior organization. A happy thought, presented by Mrs. Hague, was the planting of iris along the highways, this beautiful flower requiring no cultivation, thriving even on top of the soil.

The report of the recent flower show sponsored by the club proved interesting to Mrs. Hague, and she urged that the club be represented at the Garden Club convention, to be held in Marietta some time in the spring.

Mrs. M. P. Hammond was hostess to the Chatsworth Woman's club, and an appropriate poem of thanksgiving, by Edgar Guest, was read by Mrs. Fanny Nichols, and Mrs. W. A. West read an interesting article on a popular present-day writer. A contest was enjoyed, Mrs. D. A. Gregory winning the prize, a towel.

Kingston Club.

Mrs. Bertram Branson was hostess to the Kingston History club at its November meeting. Chrysanthemums and white roses filled vases and bowls and a unique decoration masked the stairs—a sheaf of corn stalks with golden ears lay up the steps, flanked on either side at the top with jars of canned fruits, and descending were pumpkins, kershaws and other winter vegetables, while along the bottom were rows of scarlet and green peppers, ruddy apples, and on the lower step bags of scalybarks and walnuts, a veritable live-at-home display. Mrs. Branson also exhibited a number of handsome blankets received from the mill, blue and white plaid, pink and white, and plain pink, and a heavy dark auto robe, all made from wool clipped from her own sheep. Twenty-three guests motored out to the home of the hostess in a school truck driven by Irwin Gaines, a courtesy extended by Mrs. J. P. Gaines.

Mrs. Claude Irby, the president, was in the chair to conduct the business session, and roll call was answered to by naming presidents of the seventh district, and the treasurer reported the club in a solvent condition. It was voted to hold a Christmas bazaar in the library December 12, under direction of the young matrons' committee. Misses Avis Martin and Virginia Moore were given the candy booths.

Mrs. Nell Rollins rendered several piano selections, one being the Elise Waltz, composed by Mrs. Elbert Shaw, of Cartersville. "Old Cities of the South" being the topic for the day, the program was in the hands of Mrs. F. N. Hargis, who called on Mrs. Sheats for a description of Charleston, who illustrated the text with pictures from Country Life and the Geographic Magazine. Mrs. C. L. Ellis told of a recent trip to Nashville, showing photographs of points of interest within the city. Mrs. P. R. Moore and Miss Virginia Moore assisted Mrs. Branson. One feature was the drawing of names by club members, each of whom will give a Christmas gift to the drawee next month when the Christmas tree is set up in the home of Mrs. J. N. McKelvey. The History club is the only one in the state to adopt this pleasant custom.

Feltoman Club.

The Feltoman club, of Taylorsville, met with Mrs. Fred Jolly, with Mrs. J. H. Jolly, the president reading the club litany. Mrs. A. R. Davis, club treasurer, reported $79.36 on deposit, plus the $100 on time deposit. Sums from dinners have since been reported, also a check for $2 was accepted by the club from a Mr. Leary, a distant relative of Mrs. Felton, who saw in the Atlanta Constitution of the club's desire for a clubhouse, and he away off in Pennsylvania, sent the above mentioned check which was greatly appreciated. Mrs. Fred Jolly reported from the ways and means committee, and suggested that the club serve an oyster dinner on election day the funds accruing therefrom to be added to clubhouse fund.

Mrs. Jolly called for the dimes to be turned in, having presented each of the 10 members with one dime about eight months ago, and asking that the dimes be multiplied as many times as possible, and $23 and reported. The clubhouse committee will invite Robert Sproull, a very reputable contractor, to submit plans for the building of the clubhouse. The club voted to invite the Bartow federation to hold its next year's meeting here and ask the other organizations of the town to be joint hostesses to same.

A report from the nominating committee to select officers for the new year was unanimously adopted and is as follows: President, Mrs. A. R. Davis; vice president, Mrs. M. J. Hitchcock; recording secretary, Mrs. J. R. Harling; corresponding secretary and publicity chairman, Mrs. E. O. Davis; treasurer, Mrs. J. H. Jolly.

Mrs. J. A. Walker was welcomed as a new member and the club was invited to meet at her home in Stilesboro for the November meeting, the program to be on "Library Extension." The hostess, assisted by her sister, Miss Harriett Edwards, and Mrs. Paul McKelvey, served refreshments. The following out-of-town guests enjoyed this delightful occasion: Mrs. Herbert Morgan and Mrs. Claude Simpson, of Rockmart; Mrs. J. S. and Mrs. Ned Beazley, of Stilesboro.

Dalton Club.

Mrs. M. E. Judd presided over Dalton Woman's club meeting at which donations were made to replenish the loan chest, and Mrs. Judd reported that needed repairs had been made on the house and the grounds cleaned.

The Christmas bazar was held November 30, and December 1, at Sterchi Brothers Furniture store. The program was in charge of Mrs. R. D. Bazemore, chairman of dramatic arts, who presented the program. The opening number was a welcome song, "Our Latch String Hangs Out for You," by Miss Elizabeth Wood, accompanied by Mrs. Howard Manly. Little Mary Sue Townsend, dressed in a costume of pink satin and tulle, gave a dance. A duet, "I'll Never Play With You Again," by Sara Jean Roberts and Sara Alice Love, featured a charming bit of coquettry between the little boy, Sara Jean, and his little playmate, Sara Alice, while Sara Jean, as "Overall Jim," and Frances Wynn, as "Sunbonnet Sally," sang a duet, which brought much applause from the hearers. Miss Nellie Neeley read "Sis Hopkins and Her Beau—Bilions."

Her costume was that of a mountain girl and she told of the courtship of Bilions who was "fat and lovin'." A piano solo was given by Sara Jean Roberts, "Minuet in G."

Lesche Club.

Mrs. Clarence Fraker presided over the Lesche Woman's club meeting held at Central clubhouse, and Mrs. W. M. Jones gave an account of the district federation meeting in Cartersville October 19. Mesdames Mary Routh Buchanan, Janice Kreischer and Miss Marie Kirk were unanimously elected to membership.

Miss Blanche Gardner, chairman of the division of art, took charge of the program. Mrs. Lee McWilliams gave an interesting talk about the water colors, oil paintings and etchings which have been on display at the clubhouse for the past week. The pictures are loaned by the Southern States Art league and are the work of southern artists. Miss Lucy Kirby spoke of the popularity of antique collecting. Miss Kate Hamilton told of her visit during the past summer in New England and parts of Canada, and of the prevalence of antique shops. She told also of her visit to Wayside Inn and of the valuable collection.

The Lesche Woman's club met Monday evening at the Central club with Mrs. Hubert E. Hague, president of the seventh district federated clubs honor guest, who reviewed briefly the year book of the Georgia clubs, speaking especially of women's ideals and attainment. She mentioned the conservation of trees, and the planting of trees and flowers. She spoke here of the widely known work of Mrs. M. E. Judd in this respect. Mrs. Hague urged the planting of iris throughout the seventh district. Mrs. Fraker introduced Mrs. Walter Jones, who outlined the program for the evening, explaining briefly each number. The program was in charge of the division of music of which Mrs. C. L. Hamilton and Mrs. Judson Manly are co-chairmen. Members of this division are Mrs. Walter Jones, Mrs. S. J. Head, Miss Margaret Gavitt, Miss Laura Harris and Miss Ethel Sapp. "Wynken, Blynken and Nod," the poem by Eugene Field and music by Ethelbert Nevin, was sung by Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Hamilton, Miss Margaret Gavitt, Miss Irene Gavitt and Miss Sapp, with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Manly and Miss Harris. Miss Margaret Gavitt gave two solos, "Do Not Go My Love," by Richard Hageman, the poem being by Tagore and "The Last Hour," by Kramer. Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Hamilton and Miss Gavitt sang "Bells of St. Mary's" by Emmett Adams. "A Mountain Madrigal," by Thurlow Lieurance, was given by the quartet. Mrs. Hamilton sang a group of songs, "Ah! My Beloved," by William Stickles; "Life," by Pearl Curran, and "Oh Sweet Mystery of Love," by Victor Herbert. The Gentain," by W. Berwald, and "Persian Serenade," by H. A. Matthews, were rendered by Mrs. Hamilton, Miss Gavitt, Miss Sapp and Mrs. Jones. As a courtesy to the honor guest, Mrs Herron presented a bath mat, handmade, to Mrs. Hague.

Lumpkin County Club Closes Splendid Year.

The Home and School Improvement club of Lumpkin county finished a most successful year. Two scholarships at the N. G. A. college were tendered to members of the graduating class of the Dahlonega high school. A young girl, a pupil of the high school, is being furnished with books and clothing. Children's book week was observed. The Stephenson library, belonging to the club, has been opened every Friday to the public. Many new books were added to the library during the year. The works of the most noted of our Georgia authors were studied, and the librarian is now endeavoring to make a collection of all books of note produced by Georgia writers. Spirited and original citizenship programs have been carried out. A garden club was sponsored. The club room was offered to, and used by the county demonstration agent for her work. Three benefit bridge games were sponsored and quite a nice sum, which will be used for civic improvements, was realized.

Twentieth Century Club Wins First Prize in Contest

The contest for the best menus served on Georgia Hospitality day, November 20, resulted in the first prize of $50 going to the Twentieth Century Library club, of Tifton; second prize of $25 to the Clayton Woman's club, of Clayton, and a special prize of $10 to the Statesboro Woman's club and Georgia Normal school domestic science department, of Statesboro. The awards were announced by the Georgia State Automobile association, which sponsored the event.

The competition resulted in a number of appealing programs being arranged by communities throughout the state, according to A. W. McKeand, executive director of the Georgia State Automobile association. Menus were submitted in the contest and the decision of the board of judges was reached only after a lengthy conference.

The prize winning dinner at Tifton was in the form of a roadside barbecue. Souvenirs in the form of pecans, peanuts and bottles of Georgia syrup were passed out. While only two prizes had been announced, the contest between Clayton and Statesboro was so keen that the donor of the prizes, who was a member of the judges' committee, awarded a special prize, so that Statesboro might receive a reward in recognition of a most unusual menu and entertainment program. Other points submitting menus which ranked high were Cordele, Commerce, Fitzgerald, Cornelia, Brunswick and Dallas. About 60 dinners were served to tourists on Georgia Hospitality day, which will be an annual event hereafter.

Barnesville Club Observed Arbor Day Last Week

Arbor day was observed with a program at the Barnesville Woman's club at the meeting Wednesday afternoon, with Mrs. L. A. Collier, president, and the meetings was held at the clubhouse. Mrs. A. H. English chairman of the educational committee, announced that funds had been raised for the completion of the scholastic year for the scholarship pupil at the sixth district A. & M. This local club sends a girl to this school each year. A donation was taken up for Christmas money as a gift to the girl. The club voted to take part in the Model Farm Home contest, and all of the local members were urged to present their plans of model homes. A pie and cake contest were discussed, and Miss Frances Gresham appointed to make arrangements to put this on after Christmas. She will be assisted in judging by Mrs. Franklin Sibley, home demonstration agent of Spalding county. Mrs. L. A. Collier called a meeting of the clubhouse commission to make arrangements for the building, remodeling, or buying a clubhouse in the near future. The Woman's club has taken the initiative in this movement and committees have been appointed from each club to act on the commission.

A number of Christmas boxes were brought to the club to be sent by the chairman, Mrs. L. C. Tyus to the state sanitarium. Mrs. Collier appointed Mrs. Jackson Bush, Mrs. L. C. Tyus, and Mrs. Ed Fish, to cooperate with the other clubs in the highway beautification work. The county is putting on a tree-planting program in cooperation with the National Road of Remembrance and the Lamar County Federation, and markers for the World War Veterans will be placed by the trees.

Mrs. J. M. Rogers, chairman of the garden committee, asked the club for 150 tulips to be bought and placed on the school grounds. The school children will care for them, and it was suggested that tulips be bought and planted. Heretofore the club has planted spring flowers and the school children were not in session when the flowers bloomed. A number of the ladies gave other tulips, and narcissi bulbs from their gardens. The hostesses were Mesdames Z. T. Maxwell, Joe Adams, C. H. Morris, J. M. Rogers, J. W. Brown, A. O. Bennett and J. M. Anderson, chairman, and fifty members were present.

Mr. Steele Wires Mrs. Nicholes Hospital 48 Will Be Retained

Washington, D. C., November 20, 1928.—General Frank T. Hines, director of United States Veterans' bureau has advised me that present site of Hospital No. 48 will be retained, and contract let for enlargement of hospital quarters early in 1929.

L. J. STEELE, M. C.

The above telegram addressed to Mrs. H. M. Nicholes, chairman of soldier relief, gave the valuable information to the fifth district convention held November 23 at the East Point Woman's club, and proved conclusively the powerful influence and important part Georgia clubwomen have played in helping to retain Hospital No. 48, located on Peachtree road in Atlanta. Mrs. Nicholes has achieved marked success and given faithful service in doing soldier relief work, and through her efforts much of the suffering has been relieved among the patients at the hospital.

Mrs. Nicholes' Report.

Mrs. Nicholes in offering her report says:

"The above telegram addressed to your chairman, marked the close of a year of earnest and faithful work by the clubwomen of Georgia for increased hospital facilities for disabled veterans at United States Hospital No. 48, on Peachtree road. At a meeting of the Fifth District Federation last November resolutions were adopted setting forth the urgent need for an adequate and modernly equipped hospital for this section and the southeastern states. Copies of the resolutions were sent to Senators Harris, George, Congressman Steele and United States Director of Veterans Bureau Frank T. Hines. Copies of the resolutions were also sent to each district federation of the state, urging the support of the congressman from each district. In this way, the movement received the active cooperation of the federated clubwomen and the congressional delegation from Georgia. Faithful and effective service was rendered by Senators Harris and George.

"A bill providing for an appropriation of $15,000,000 was passed for hospitalization throughout the United States and $600,000 allocated for the hospital in Atlanta. After the announcement of this appropriation, it was reported that efforts were being made to remove the hospital to another site. This removal was strongly opposed by the local disabled veterans' associations. At the May meeting of the Fifth District Federation, resolutions were passed urging the retention of the hospital in its present beautiful and convenient location on Peachtree road. Copies of these resolutions were sent to Senators Harris, George, Congressman Steele and Director General Hines.

Letter to Chairman.

"In a letter to your chairman, dated May 12, 1928, Congressman Steele said: 'For some reason or other General Hines wishes to remove the hospital. It struck me as being in a very desirable place, and ought not to be moved, but as I was pressing General Hines to recommend an increased appropriation, and did succeed in getting him to advance his recommendation of $200,000, I did not think it wise at that time to cross him about the location of the hospital. I was fearful we might lose out altogether. The removal of the hospital is within the discretion of General Hines, and when the time comes, if there be much opposition to the removal, we can then press our fight with him along that line.'

"With the approval of Mr. Steele, your chairman requested that letters be written to General Hines by Governor Hardman, Mayor Ragsdale, Postmaster Large and others, urging the retention of the hospital at its present site. The letters so written and the resolutions sent him seemed to have influenced General Hines in making a favorable decision, for he wrote to Postmaster Large on October 1 as follows: 'I note that various organizations are interested in maintaining the location of the present hospital as at present, and that you are in concurrence with this idea. For your information, you are advised that at the present time it is proposed to erect the new buildings for expansion of the Atlanta hospital on the site now occupied on Peachtree road.

"'Yours very truly,
(Signed) 'FRANK T. HINES.'
'Director.'

Decision Verified.

"This decision was verified by the telegram of Congressman Steele on November 20, quoted at the beginning of this report. In recognition of the splendid results achieved by Senators Harris, George and Congressman Steele, the attached resolutions were offered and unanimously passed at the meeting of the Fifth District Federation on November 23.

Mrs. Kate Green Hess, president of fifth district; Mrs. J. D. Evans, department of American citizenship chairman, and Mrs. H. M. Nicholes drew up the resolution of appreciation which was presented before the fifth district convention and unanimously adopted, which read as follows:

"Whereas, it was reported that United States Hospital No. 48 might be removed to another site; and, whereas, the Fifth District Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, by appropriate resolution, expressed the hope that the hospital be retained at its present desirable, convenient and beautiful location on Peachtree road, copies of which resolution were sent to Senators William J. Harris, Walter F. George and Congressman Leslie J. Steele, who cheerfully promised their help; and, whereas, we have recently been informed by Congressman Steele that he had a personal interview with General Frank T. Hines, director of U. S. Veterans' Bureau, and was assured by him that the new buildings for the expansion of this hospital, involving an expenditure of $600,000, would be erected on the site now occupied on Peachtree road, the work to begin in the early spring of 129; therefore, be it Resolved, That the sincere thanks and appreciation of this federation be extended to Senators Harris, George and Congressman Steele, for the faithful and worth-while service they have performed for this cause; and that copies of this resolution be sent to each of them, and also to General Hines, for the friendly interest he had manifested."

Lesche Club Holds Inspirational Meetings at Dalton Clubhouse

The Lesche Woman's club, of Dalton, begun the year's work with several very inspirational meetings, the program being given by the various departments of the club. The first meeting featured presidents' evening, the club being the guests of the newly elected president, Mrs. C. H. Fraker. In addition to her message, several very interesting "travelogues" were given by members who had been abroad this summer, and a social hour followed.

The division of community service at the next meeting presented the local Camp Fire Girls, who gave an evening of camp songs and stunts, the two troops being under their guardians, Misses Martha Lin Manly and Evelyn Langley. An interesting exhibition was sponsored by the division of art, and held for a week at the new clubhouse, pictures loaned by the sixth art loan exhibit of the Southern Art league, with about 50 paintings in the collection. Tea was served each afternoon, and upon the last evening, an art program was featured. In addition to the pictures there was a loan exhibit of antiques.

The fourth program was in the nature of a musical by the division of music, "Contrasts of Time and Tone" being the theme, and a most delightful evening of quartets and solos were rendered by the Leschian's talented musicians. Next week the division of drama will present at the High School auditorium a play, "The Romantic Age," and at Christmas the division of health will have a lighted tree in front of the clubhouse. The meetings of the club have been unusually well attended and the members are enthusiastic about the year's program of work. Mrs. Herbert Hague, president of the seventh district of the Georgia Federation, was a recent guest of the club, and an informal reception was given Mrs. Hague.

Thomason Juniors Visit Tallulah.

The Junior club of Thomson, led by Mrs. H. D. Atkins, as director, made an interesting pilgrimage to the mountain school at Tallulah Falls on December 6, visiting especially the department of handcrafts which had made by the club's advance order fifty attractive salable articles to be used as Xmas gifts. The junior club women of Georgia have always specialized in interest for the federation's school, and the present state chairman of Juniors, Mrs. J. A. Horn, of Boston, is emphasizing this field for service for federated girls' clubs.

Parental Education Chairman's Message.

Mrs. H. C. Stakely, chairman of parental education for fifth district P.-T. A., writes interestingly of the work in the following article:

"The objective of parental education is to form study groups or take up the study of some subject at the monthly meetings of each association. The education of the parent along the new line of child care and training is a very vital part of the Parent-Teacher work this year. It can be taken up in the two following ways: By the use of a book and outlines, or the association choose the subjects they wish studied and discussed, using pamphlets and books on each subject.

"The Child Welfare magazine offers different types of programs and the outlines are very helpful.

"For the pre-school and lower grades it offers the book, 'Your Growing Child,' by H. Addington Bruce, reference books being 'The Nervous Child and His Parents,' by Dr. Richardson, and 'The Everyday Problems of the Everyday Child,' by D. V. Thom.

"A new book just on the market, prepared by the Institute of Child Welfare, University of Minnesota, and costing $1, is a very good textbook for groups who have up to now studied little. It answers a number of problems, both physical, mental and moral, and is written in everyday language, easy to be understood.

"Other books which offer splendid material for study by the groups are Dr. Ernest Grooves, 'The Drifting Home and Social Problems of the Family,' O'Shea has written 'The Child, His Nature and His Needs,' Sidonie Gruenberg, 'Your Child Today and Tomorrow.'

These are just a few suggested books and outlines will be sent when requested.

Safety Chairman Reports Meeting.

Mrs. M. Herzberg, safety and recreation chairman of the Atlanta Parent-Teacher council, held the first meeting of her department recently in Rich's conference room, with 18 schools represented.

George Deibert, of the Atlanta Safety council, made a talk on home safety, illustrating his talk with many tragic examples, and astounded his hearers with figures showing that the "home accident" is ever on the increase.

Mrs. Byron H. Matthews, director of home service department of the fifth district, made a talk on recreation and gave a brief outline of this work, telling the purpose and aims of the recreation committee, of which one of the chief aims is to encourage the wise use of leisure through play and the cultural arts.

Professor Sutton made a talk on general safety and recreation. He also brought out some facts and figures, saying that the United States has had more people killed by some form of accident in the last 10 years since the war than the United States lost in the world war during the time that we were in the war. Speaking of recreation, Mr. Sutton stressed home and community recreation.

In closing the meeting, Mrs. Herzberg addressed the chairmen, and asked her safety chairmen to begin their work with the pre-school and kindergarten mothers and stress home safety at all times. To attend at least one pre-school meeting and call these mother's attention to the danger of open grates, unguarded stairways, burns and scalds, and especially the "unloaded" guns.

The next meeting will be December 19, the place to be announced later. It is hoped that every school will send a representative to these meetings.

State P.-T. A. Program Chairmen Ooutline Plans for Department

The plans of the department of programs and special days, sponsored by the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers, Mrs. Charles A. Hilbun, Rivoli, Macon, chairman, is presented through the state publicity bureau. The success of the Parent-Teacher association depends largely upon the character of its programs, therefore the program committee is one of the most important and it should be appointed at the May meeting, so that there will be ample time to learn something of parent-teacher work, and to carefully consider the people whose needs the committee is trying to meet. The best the state chairman can do is to offer a suggestive program which can be changed and adapted to local needs.

Each monthly program is divided into three parts, including subjects, questions, activities. In trying to cover every phase of parent-teacher work many subjects have been listed, one or two of which may be selected each month to provide the frame work for a meeting. Other features, as devotional, singing, playlets, contests, readings and pageants, may be added as desired. Such subjects should be selected as touch the vital problems of the, members and speakers should be such as will present these subjects in a way to stimulate thought and lead to results.

The subjects may be presented in round-table discussion; as topics for short papers by three or four members; or for study groups outside of regular meetings. Members should be encouraged to join in the discussions. Choose from the projects only as many as may be carried through to a successful conclusion. At least one each for fall, winter and spring is recommended. These will require personal service, and community interest and influence.

December Program.

Slogan: Joy to the World; singing, carols.

Subjects: (1) The spirit of giving; (2) the value of cultivating friendships; (3) recreation for the high school girl and boy; (4) what a well-equipped playground means to a community; (5) the moral influence of teachers; (6) the need of emotional control. Questions. Are you chummy with your boy and girl? How much leisure time do you spend together? Are you teaching your child wholesome standards of conduct? What will his chances be of living peacefully and happily with others when he goes out into the world? What is the problem parent? What is the effect of babying and spoiling a child on his mental health? How do your children spend their recesses and noon hours? Are you teaching responsibilities?

Activities: Promote classes in drama, sewing, art work, basketry, rug-making. Chaperon Christmas parties. Furnish playground and athletic equipment. Secure radio talks along parental educational lines. Encourage natural talent of children in prose and poetic composition.

Pre-School.

Subjects: The relation of parents and children; (2) behavior problems and conflicts of will; (3) the social and moral development of the child; (4) the mental life of the child; (5) emotional difficulties of parents; (6) play and work as education.

Questions: Shall we whip and spank? Have you allowed Christmas to become a burden? How are you going to spend Christmas with your child?

Activities: Sponsor the observation of "Home Play Week." Equip backyard playground.

Moreland P.-T. A. Daddies' Meeting.

Tuesday night was daddies' night at the Moreland P.-T. A., and Mrs. Marvin Woodall, president, presided over the meeting held in the Inman Park Presbyterian church. Mrs. Woodall welcomed the daddies.

The committee appointed to form some plan of counting mothers gave their report and this was accepted. Mrs. Rowe, magazine chairman, read messages from the national and state presidents and suggested that subscriptions to Child Welfare and Georgia Parent-Teacher magazines made acceptable Christmas gifts.

Mrs. R. P. Smith, program chairman, introduced Mrs. L. G. Martin, who sang two numbers, accompanied by Miss Powell, and J. P. Barron, president of the Atlanta Teachers' association. Mr. Barron's subject was "How the Parent May Cooperate With the School From the Teacher's Point of View." His address was very interesting and presented a new viewpoint to the parents.

After the count of mothers Mrs. Woodall told of the meeting next July in Atlanta of the National Education association and of Mr. Sutton's unique plan to entertain the delegates from the various states. Kansas has been assigned to Moreland school and children and parents will begin at once to study about this state.

Rev. Linn Addresses Luckie Street P.-T. A.

Rev. L. B. Linn, pastor of Payne Memorial Methodist church, spoke at a meeting of the Luckie Street school P.-T. A. Tuesday afternoon at the school auditorium on the "Greatest Thing in All the World, the Child." Mrs. M. C. Thomas, principal of the school, reported that the school was practically 100 per cent in dental work and thanked the mothers for their help and co-operation. The count of mothers gave the prizes to Miss Martin's low one grade and Miss Cockerel's low four grade.

During the afternoon a social half hour was spent, and members were given an opportunity to meet Mr. Linn, the newly-appointed pastor of Payne Memorial Methodist church.

Formwalt Pre-School Circle Holds Meeting.

The Pre-School circle of the Formwalt P.-T. A. met Tuesday in the school auditorium with Mrs. F. P. Berrong, chairman, presiding.

An enthusiastic group of mothers listened to her talk on "Heredity and Environment."

Miss Bessie Fant, low kindergarten, spoke interestingly of her work.

Miss Hodges, high kindergarten, read an article from "Child Welfare" on the kind of Christmas toy to give to develop initiative as well as to give pleasure to the small child. There was an informal discussion which seemed to make the messages more helpful.

Child Guidance Clinic Indorsed By P.-T. A. Council

At a meeting of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council, held Thursday morning at the Ansley hotel, the council reaffirmed its indorsement of a child guidance clinic for Atlanta and adopted resolutions asking for the appointment of at least two visiting teachers to do the preliminary work for establishing such clinic. J. P. Barron, member of faculty of Tech High school and president of the Atlanta Public School Teachers' association, spoke of the necessity for such clinic, which would lead to a better understanding of children's needs, those exceptionally bright or unduly nervous or with any deviation from the strictly normal.

Miss Tommie Dora Barker, head librarian of Carnegie library, spoke interestingly on "The Library as Relates to Schools." Among the plans the library furnishes of cooperating with the schools and the Parent-Teacher associations is the P.-T. A. bookshelf established in the Carnegie library, of which Miss Barker and Miss Martha McAlpine are chairmen; the plan of bringing the fifth and sixth grade children to the library four times a year to study how to use books; forming reading groups in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades, of 40 children each; appreciation hour in reading established in the schools; ten books selected and loaned to teachers for four weeks; vacation reading clubs and assisting in selection of books for the P.-T. A. summer reading groups.

Mrs. George Howsmon, state chairman of public welfare, filled the institute period with a talk on "The Aims and Ideals of P.-T. A. Work."

Mrs. Charles W. Brooks, 663 Kennesaw, Ivy 2109-W, chairman of the Child Welfare magazine, announced a rate of five subscriptions for $4 and an attractive poster for display.

Mrs. Smith, pre-school chairman, announced that a talk would be made by a kindergarten teacher on the connection between the pre-school and the kindergarten at the meeting of the group at 10 o'clock on the Ansley roof. Miss McAlpine will conduct the regular study period. The offer of Mrs. Malone of the books for the largest attendance is continued.

The Motion Picture division meets December 10 at 10 a. m. in Rich's school room and presidents and chairmen of motion pictures are requested to be present.

The council met on the Ansley roof with the president, Mrs. H. G. Parks, presiding. The regular luncheon meeting of the President's club, with Mrs. George W. Powell, president, presiding, followed the council meeting.

Fulton County P.-T. A. Organizes Study Class.

A study class, promoted by Fulton County P.-T. A. council was organized in Fulton High School cafeteria Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, with Miss Bunce, home economics director for Fulton and Russell High schools, presiding. The class was composed of representatives from county schools interested in "school lunch rooms." Miss Bunce will be teacher of the class. She was assisted by Miss Henderson, who is in charge of the cafeteria at Fulton high.

Miss Bunce held a round table discussion full of most helpful information on healthful hot lunches, their preparation, etc. She supplied each member with a bulletin from Georgia State College for Women on "The Nutrition of School Children," and leaflets of recipes of things to prepare and serve.

Mrs. Taylor, president of the council, urges every P.-T. A. in her council to take advantage of this splendid opportunity and send its representative to the next meeting, which will be held shortly after the holidays.

Emory P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The Emory P.-T. A. met Wednesday afternoon at the school building with Mrs. Charles H. Morris, the president, presiding.

Mrs. Bell, membership chairman, announced pronounced success in the membership drive, two grades, Miss Cowan of the first grade, and Miss Johnston, second, being 100 per cent.

Mrs. Ann Bates Walsh, chairman of programs, announced that splendid speakers had been obtained for each meeting, so that all attending would be assured of spending a profitable hour and hearing a message that would be well worth while.

On taking the count of mothers present it was found that Mrs. Anderson's room, first grade, had won the attendance prize.

Dr. Harvey Cox, president of Emory university, was the speaker of the afternoon. His subject being "What Our Children Need."

Van Hook Pupils To Entertain.

Pupils of the Van Hook Kindergarten and Primary schools will entertain members of the schools' Mothers' club, their fathers and friends with a Christmas tree December 22 at 7 o'clock at the school. The party will take the place of the December meeting of the Mothers' club.

A large Christmas tree decorated with ornaments and presents made by the children will be a feature of the party. Forty-four students of French department will give a program of songs and stories under direction of Madam Lorette LeNoir, French instructor. The dance pupils, from four to nine years old, will be presented in dances characteristic of their work during the term, by Miss Martha Ridley. Each of the 55 pupils of the school will have a part on the program.

Hostesses for the party will be Mesdames Robert Bruce, H. K. Garges, Eugene Diamond, Paul Ackerly, H. E. Storms, Tom Arnold.

Kirkwood P.-T. A. Daddies' Meeting.

The daddies' meeting of Kirkwood P.-T. A. was held Tuesday evening in the school auditorium with 500 parents present. Dr. J. R. McCain, president of Agnes Scott college, was the speaker. In his speech on "What Part the Daddies Play in Home Training," he urged the daddies to be not only the heads of their families but also to be pals and companions to their children.

A chorus of Kirkwood daddies gave several selections. A musical program for eight hands was given by Kirkwood music students. The daddies were acquainted with a number of outstanding accomplishments of the P.-T. A. Quite a few subscriptions to Child Welfare magazine were secured at this meeting.

The grade count of parents gave the prizes to Miss Florence Deale for the upper grades and Mrs. Lucy Darden for the lower grades.

Eminent World Missionaries To Address Methodist Meet

Among the great speakers to appear on the program of the International Missionary conference of the M. E. church, south, to be held in Memphis, Tenn., January 1-3, are many prominent men of other denominations. Among these are Dr. E. Stanley Jones, the outstanding missionary of the world and author of "Christ of the Indian Road" and "Christ at the Round Table"; Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer, of New York, general secretary of the board of foreign missions of the Methodist Episcopal church; Dr. James Endicott, of Canada, the moderator of the United Church of Canada and general secretary of its board of missions; Dr. William P. Schell, of New York, home base secretary of the board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian church, U. S. A.

The missionary bishops, as well as all the other bishops of the M. E. church, south, will bring great messages. These include Bishop W. A. Candler, in charge of Cuba; Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, in charge of our European fields; Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, in charge of our oriental fields; Bishop James Cannon, Jr., in charge of Africa and Brazil; Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, in charge of Mexico and the Mexican missions; Bishop S. R. Hay, in charge of our western conferences and the California oriental mission; Bishop H. A. Boaz, in charge of the Indian mission.

This conference is given under the auspices of the board of missions of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, and will be the greatest Methodist gathering of this generation.

District Secretaries.

Announcement is made of the appointment of two new district secretaries of the Methodist church to fill vacancies that have occurred. Mrs. Ross Bosworth, of Rome, has been appointed district secretary of the Rome district, to succeed Mrs. L. D. Yeargan, and Mrs. W. E. Grubb, of Buford, has been appointed district secretary of the Gainesville district, to succeed Mrs. J. C. Logan.

Mrs. L. D. Yeargan, district secretary of the Rome district, has resigned her position because of illness. Mrs. Yeargan has served the district as secretary for three years, and is beloved and admired throughout the section in which she has worked so untiringly. She has been ill since early fall, but is improving. The Rome district, under Mrs. Yeargan's direction, was the first district to pay their $100 for their missionary, Mozelle Eubanks, for the Scarritt dormitory.

Mrs. Bosworth has served First Methodist church W. M. S. as first executive a number of times and is well informed on all phases of the work which will go forward under her leadership.

Mrs. J. R. Jackson, of Woodberry, Ga., writes the following article:

The Adult Methodist Missionary society of Woodberry has been counting its blessings as the yearly "gratitude" day, Thanksgiving, gave us the opportunity for we reviewed the conference year and realized it brought us a prosperous year in all departments.

Not a single meeting failed to be held. We have not lost a member by death. All requirements have been met in classes, sending supplies, finances and children's work.

Children's department made the number of points to entitle to a place on the honor roll. They more than tripled the finances paid last year. We have aided constantly in local charities.

For the new year we feel sure of large activity and of interest from the newly-elected officers.

Blackshear Society.

The Methodist Missionary society has had a successful year. Up to this time the society has kept up to the "standard of excellence."

Each department has worked with enthusiasm and sincere interest. The Jubilee Bookshelf has been the means of arousing an interest in reading and study. The jubilee week of prayer was appropriately observed and the society strengthened spiritually.

On Wednesday of that week Miss Mamie Myers, a returned missionary from Korea, met with the society and made an interesting talk. The Mission Study class, which has been keeping up the work throughout the year, met in an all-day session in October with Mrs. E. L. Darling, Sr., for the study and discussion of Miss Howell's book, "Women and the Kingdom." The discussion of the different chapters was led by Mrs. J. C. Brooks, Mrs. T. E. Davenport, Mrs. W. P. Strickland, Mrs. A. J. Strickland and Mrs. Thomas Memory.

This meeting being for all day brought together a large number of the members and in that way a greater number participated in the discussion and study of the book. Any one who has been entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Darling, Sr., knows that the social hour at noon was a successful and enjoyable affair. The ladies were ushered into the dining room where a delicious luncheon was served.

Mrs. Frank Burney Asks Aid For Missionaries' Children

Mrs. Frank Burney, of Waynesboro, superintendent of the Margaret fund of the Baptist W. M. U., South. The Margaret fund provides for the children of foreign missionaries.

By Mrs. Frank Burney, of Waynesboro, superintendent of the Margaret fund of the Baptist W. M. U. South, which provides for missionaries' children.

Just as the S. O. S. ticked and reverberated over the turbulent Atlantic, calling for aid for the ill-fated Vestris, so an S. O. S., "Save Our Students," call comes to the mother hearts of southern Baptist women, as we stand in questioning awe and sorrow over the loss of our missionaries, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Jackson, on the Vestris.

They leave to our love and keeping their three precious children, Virginia, Judson and Stephen, under our Margaret fund. Two older students had just finished under our fund, and as we talked with Mr. and Mrs. Jackson in Chattanooga, and again to Mr. Jackson at Bessie Tift college, they both over and over spoke of the great, constructive, satisfying effective work of the Margaret fund, how, because of its careful, close, prayerful, loving, watch over each student, our missionaries ca leave them with less anxiety and worry, and sail across the deep, calmly and submissively, ready to plant "the light" in the dark countries.

Mr. Jackson's heart yearned to leave Carey behind also, but because he was too young he, too, started back to Brazil and was lost with his parents.

For nights this chairman could scarcely sleep, so great was the burdened heart, but the sorrow, turmoil and anguish, lessened, when I remembered "our Father knows" and understands and in His field are responsive, sympathetic hearts that will strive to continue to bless, cheer, provide for, comfort and pray for these so bereft and helpless.

We thank God for those splendid members of Knoxville church who assured as they will assist us in finishing the education of these three students.

I trust this S. O. S. will so stir our hearts that we will realize anew this tremendous responsibility and privilege that is ours and shall daily be mindful of the 90 students here now under our fund, and shall particularly bless and cheer and comfort the six Margaret fund students in school in Georgia. These are Ida and Alice Shepard, of Brazil, who are at Shorter Reba Lour, of China, and Pearl Dunstan, of Brazil, who is at Bessie Tift college; Jeremiah and Coleman Clarke, of Japan, who are at Mercer university.

S. O. S.—"Save Our Students."

America is a dangerous field for these inexperienced feet. Our own daughters and sons are having a hard fight against the high tides of these hours, but picture, if you can, these away from parental care and admonition, and again purpose in your heart a determination to give more, pray more, love more—sacrifice some during these coming days that we might "Save Our Students," the children of our blessed missionaries.

No missionary was more beloved by Georgia than Mr. Jackson and we believe that Georgia will want a part in nurturing, educating and caring for these so bereft.

Baptist Body Holds 144th Meet At Rehoboth

Mrs. T. L. Lewis, honorary president of the Federated Church Women of Georgia, submits the following article:

"Turn backward, turn backward,
Oh, time, in thy flight,
And make me a child again just for tonight."

So we felt as we listened to the invocation of the oldest Baptist assembly in the state. When the Georgia Baptist association held its 144th annual session recently with Rehobarb church at Metasville, Wilkes county. The keen consciousness of departed friends, the shades of those we loved seemed hovering near. How rapid, oh, time, has been your flight. The schoolmates we left as children are now men and women far past the meridian of life. But they have honored their parents by remembering their precepts and following their examples.

Rehoboth church was organized in 1806. Seven different states claim members coming from old Rehoboth. Though scattered far they hold fast to the faith of their fathers. This church, for 60 years, has had one family line for its pastor. Rev. John Hogan, of beloved memory, led his flock for 33 years and since that time his son, Dr. W. A. Hogan, has continued the work so dear to his father's heart.

The interest in Sunday School Woman's Missionary society and Sunbeam band was quite evident. No section of Georgia surpasses Wilkes for its whole-hearted hospitality, its kindly relations, both in church and civic life.

Passing through Washington down by the historic Bob Toombs oak, we were reminded of the story, "When the federal officers walked in General Toombs' stately home to arrest him during the civil war. The servant politely invited them to have seats in the dining room, while the general quietly passed through the back door, took refuge in the bosom of the old oak, leaving the officers to wait and wonder. That oak is preserved to this day. The deep hollow is carefully protected.

The after thought is that we are living in a better day, a clearer understanding of the rights of others and may the statesman and the preacher teach it, both on the rostum and from the pulpit, "Live upon line and precept upon precept."

Oglethorpe Xmas Festival Takes Place Dec. 15.

The annual Christmas festival, given by Oglethorpe college to the students will be held Saturday evening, December 15 at 7:30 o'clock when the Oglethorpe Orchestra and Glee club under the direction of Mrs. Zummerman and Robert Shaw, will entertain the friends of the university, faculty and students with special Christmas music. This musical occasion will last until 9 o'clock, followed by the Christmas dance in the gymnasium. Music will be furnished by the Oglethorpe orchestra. A big Christmas tree will be lighted and decorated for the occasion.

The Plan of God.

"Life would be intolerable could we not trace in it the plan of a Divine Providence watching over us, and guiding us.

Sorrow would be overwhelming had we to look on it as a chance arrow shot against us at a venture, and not aimed by the hand of one whom we can trust and love. When God sends chastisement, He knows to whom He sends it, and why He sends it, and what He sends."

What beauty is there in the dawning of a bright new day,
What beauty in the hues of the rainbow when the showers have passed away,
What beauty in the bright-colored flowers, as they merrily dance and nod,
If in all we find our Maker, if we see the handiwork of God?

Lutheran Church Holds Impressive Vesper Service

An impressive Thanksgiving service entitled "O Send Out Thy Light and Thy Truth," was presented by the W. M. S. of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer at the vesper service Sunday evening, December 2. Chaplain John Hall and Mrs. William Trautwein, president of W. M. S., presiding. A birdseye view, as it were, of the work in India, China, Japan, Africa, South America and the home field, was portrayed by Mrs. R. R. Repass. A group of children of "The Light Brigade," the missionary organization of the youngest church members, sponsored by the W. M. S., contributed the hymn "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations," while the Katherine Scherer Cronk Missionary society, composed of the young women of the church, presented "Without Spot," a playlet, the theme of which was the method of giving, not grudgingly, nor of necessity, nor to be seen of man, but out of the heart, gratefully, without spot or blemish.

"Three Boxes," representing the candy box with an annual expenditure of $134,796,000; the flower box, costing annually $65,000,000, and the thank offering box, were presented by the W. M. S. The choir gave a beautiful rendition of "Send Out Thy Light," by Jounod.

Baptist News Is of Interest Throughout State of Georgia

The Woman's auxiliary of Georgia Baptist hospital, meets Friday morning, December 14, in the Joe Brown Connelly reception room. Mrs. James L. Key, president of the auxiliary, announces that the nominating committee, Mrs. T. L. Lewis, chairman, will make a ticket of officers for the ensuing year. There will also be a number of recommendations made by the committee which Mrs. Key wishes fully discussed. Preparation for the annual Christmas tree for the hospital nurses will be made, and a committee will be appointed to decorate the nurses' home and the medical and surgical buildings of the hospital for the Christmas holidays.

The Grace McBride Y. W. A., composed of the nurses of the hospital, will celebrate their first anniversary of the organization Thursday evening, December 13, when a number of friends will meet with them at the hospital on this occasion.

Second Baptist.

The following officers for 1929 were elected Monday afternoon by the members of the Women's Missionary and Benevolent society of the Second Baptist church: President, Emerita; Mrs. Frances Brown Chase, president; Mrs. William Walker Brookes, first vice president; Mrs. L. A. Witherspoon, second vice president; Mrs. Davis Fitzgerald, third vice president; Mrs. Spann Milner, fourth vice president; Mrs. Gordon Singleton, recording secretary; Mrs. Thomas H. Jeffries, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. Henry J. Baker, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Lucy L. Olive, treasurer contingent fund; Mrs. W. J. Thebaut, treasurer missions; Mrs. D. P. Darrington, auditor; Mrs. P. C. McDuffie, counsellor for young people; Mrs. Gordon Singleton, Young Women's auxiliary; Mrs. Fred W. Patterson, Intermediate Girls' auxiliary; Mrs. John R. Burress, Junior Girls' auxiliary; Mrs. A. D. Brunson, royal ambassadors; Mrs. J. B Young, Sunbeams; Mrs. H. B. Jones, stewardship; Mrs. John Spalding, mission study chairman; Mrs. John R. Dickey, circle leaders; Business Women's league, Mrs. Frederick J. Paxon; Junior Business Women's Bible class, Mesdames John Spalding, Spann W. Milner, J. V. Davis, B. W. Spinning, M. L. Brittain, H. R. Fischer, H. G. Morgan, R. E. Harvey, Hal F. Hentz, M. E. Geer.

The executive board of the Women's society of the Second Baptist church met Monday in the church. Mrs. John R. Dickey presiding in the absence of the president, Mrs. Furniss Lee. The last meeting of this body for this year will be held in the church Thursday morning, December 27, at 10 o'clock.

The Women's Missionary and Benevolent society met the same afternoon. The women were reminded to bring in the mite boxes and Christmas stockings when the circles meet in the church Monday afternoon, December 17, at 3 o'clock. This meeting of the society was later merged into a prayer service for missions, with circles five and seven in charge. The women observed a week of prayer for missions from three to four each afternoon through Friday with Mrs. John R. Dickey, mission chairman, in charge.

An interesting meeting of the Baptist elementary league, of which Miss Rosa May King, of the Second church, is president, was held in the church this week for the purpose of making plans and programs for Christmas. Miss Clyde Parker, of Ponce de Leon; Miss Lucile Abbey, of the Tabernacle, and others added to the program exceedingly.

At the December meeting of the Business Women's league Sunday afternoon in the Second Baptist church, Judge Garland Watkins, of the juvenile court, delivered an unusual address, affording an opportunity for additional Christian service. Mrs. Charles Howland, of the Peachtree Christian church, rendered several selections, accompanied by Mrs. Victor Clark. The president, Mrs. F. J. Paxon, presided. Circle G., Mrs. G. E. Cooper, chairman, was in charge.

Orphans Home.

Mrs. George Westmoreland, president of the board of managers of Baptist Orphans' Home, make annual report and an appeal for enlarged contributions on "Orphans' Home day," Sunday, December 9.

The annual meeting of the Georgia Baptist Orphans' Home association was held at the home, at Hapeville, November 7, at which time the officers for the year were elected. The general manager's report showed that the children are in good health, the teachers and matrons interested in training the children, and the need of funds with which to feed and clothe 337 children, and finance the home and necessities. Friends have been kind and thoughtful through the associations in the state in sending food stuffs, and it is hoped that on rally day, December 9, the only day on which the direct appeal for the home can be made through the Sunday schools, there will be a most generous offering.

It will be of interest to know how the children are being trained spiritually, through organizations conducted weekly in the home. There are three Sunbeam organizations, led by three of the matrons and one of the boys, Beverly Mills; two girls' auxiliaries, a junior leader, Lillian Duckworth, one of the girls, and the intermediate leader one of the teachers; two Royal Ambassador chapters, a junior leader, John Ross; intermediate leader, James Coleson, two of the boys in the home; two B. Y. P. U.'s, leaders for junior and intermediate, four of the teachers. Two children have membership in the First Baptist church at Hapeville.

CHURCH MEETINGS

The board of supervisors of the Andrew and Frances Stewart good will center meets Monday morning, December 10, at 10:30 o'clock, at 816 Pelham street.

Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist W. M. S., holds a cottage prayer meeting with Mrs. J. W. Wills, 831 Myrtle street, N. E.

Episcopalians Pay Tribute to Memory Of Mrs. Woodruff

Miss Rosa Woodberry and Mrs. Maude Craig Mathews submit respectively the following tributes to the late Mrs. Frank Woodruff, Episcopal editor of the federated church page.

The Woman's Auxiliary of All Saints' church desires to place on record an expression of great sorrow in the loss of a beloved past president, Mrs. Frank Woodruff, who entered into the more abundant life November 16. Her death takes from our midst a coworker of such faith and courage and ceaseless effort in the Master's Kingdom, that we feel bereaved indeed of a source of great inspiration and helpfulness, and the companionship of a beloved friend. Her many years of service were marked by strong leadership and consecrated devotion. She brought to the auxiliary a wide knowledge of the church's program and intense zeal for its promotion.

Mrs. Woodruff lived a life of such vital spiritual union with her Savior and friend that she radiated His power and love and guidance in her many forms of service in His name. Her constructive plans were an expression of fine judgment and faithful prayer. Her source of power was found in the secret of His presence, through His Holy Word, in His Sacrament of the altar and at His foot stool in daily prayer and worship. Through channels of grace did she bring rare blessings in her work among us.

To the church's call for religious education she made a happy response. In church school, study classes and in young people's groups, and notably in the religious press her work was marked by a deep religious culture and wide experience in things pertaining to the Kingdom of God.

We pray that God may abundantly bless her work and have her in His most gracious keeping in His abiding presence.

To Mrs. Woodruff.

In that hallowed room peace was shining with the stars!
On head, on hand, I know and lip and eye—
On folded arms, on still unmoving breast—
On everything rested the pale radiance.
White bending forms stood all around with hearts comforted, and burdens lifted.
By her, whose soul redeemed now wears jewels such as holy angels wear.
For when she passed away, she blotted out no good.
But left behind such wealths of faith, such stores of love!
To us, who linger yet awhile, may it be thus—to die.

Y. W. Secretary Will Address Christian Circle

The Business Women's circle of the First Christian church is looking forward to an address on "Turkey and Turkish Customs," by Miss Clara Nolen, general secretary of the Y. W. C. A. at their next meeting, Wednesday evening, December 12 in the parlor of the church.

Miss Nolen has spent two years in Turkey and her address promises a rare treat. All business women of the church and their friends are invited to attend.

Under the leadership of Miss Emma Lewis, this circle is an active part of the women's council of the church.

Briefly Told

Miss Emma Leachman, field worker of the home mission board, of Southern Baptist convention, addressed the Business Woman's league of the First Baptist church, Wednesday evening, December 5, at 7:30 o'clock.

Mrs. W. J. Neel, president Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia, and Mrs. A. F. McMahon, secretary-treasurer, attended Georgia Baptist convention in Thomasville, December 4-7. Mrs. McMahon returned to speak at the week of prayer services of the W. M. S. of the First Baptist church, Friday, December 7.

Mrs. L. C. Craig, secretary of third district of B. W. M. U., of Atlanta association, and Mrs. J. W. Wills, ruby anniversary chairman, met with the Northside Park W. M. S., Wednesday afternoon, December 5. This society has every expectation of meeting its apportionment for the cooperative program.

Mrs. James D. Rhodes, mission study chairman of the B. W. M. U., of the Atlanta association, taught an all-day mission study class at Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church, Tuesday, December 4, during the season of prayer for foreign missions. Mrs. Rhodes used the text book "On Earth, Peace."

Friends of Mrs. John Kerksis, of the Peachtree Christian church, recording secretary of Federated Church Women of Georgia, sympathize with her in the illness of her husband who is at the Georgia Baptist hospital.

Miss Geneive Lawrence had charge of the program.

'Book of Verse' By Ernest Neal Just Off Press

Announcement of the publication of a new book of poems, entitled "A Book of Verse," was made Saturday by Ernest Neal, of Calhoun, who now holds the honorary post of "Poet Laureate of Georgia" under appointment by former Governor Clifford Walker.

Mr. Neal has been busy for several weeks correcting and revising the proof sheets of the new volume, which is published by J. W. Burke & Co. The book contains nearly 200 pages and is printed in two colors on excellent paper and bound in artcraft cover with gold embossed title. In the books are many of Mr. Neal's best poems, a biographical sketch of the writer with a portrait of the poet.

Many of Mr. Neal's poems have been printed in the leading magazines of the country. He is a regular contributor to The Constitution and some of the poems, which have appeared in this paper, are reprinted in the new book.

While the book came off the press too late for the holiday season, it is advisable for gift purposes from Mr. Neal, himself. In order that it can be sent as a Christmas gift, Mr. Neal has arranged to distribute some autographed copies of the work at the regular price of $2 a volume.

Persons desiring to send this book of verse by a Georgia poet as a gift can write to Mr. Neal at Calhoun and obtain the autographed copies. Containing poems of such high merit and with the poet's autograph, the volume is considered by many an ideal and unique gift.

AUTO ASSOCIATION PLANS TO ATTRACT TOURISTS TO STATE

An active program of tourist promotion for Georgia is to be undertaken during 1929 by a special committee from the Georgia State Automobile association, under the general chairmanship of J. B. Waddill, of Albany, one of the best known hotel men in the state, it was announced Saturday. Mr. Waddill has named a committee of six members from every part of the state to assist in building a constructive plan for attracting more tourists during next year.

This committee consists of T. L. Hackett, of the General Forrest hotel, Rome, for district No. 1; George L. Keen, of the Dempsey, Macon, for district No. 2; Horace Caldwell, of the Daniel Ashley hotel, Valdosta, for district No. 3; Jack Gardner, of the Oglethorpe hotel, Brunswick, for district No. 4; W. P. Martin, of the Richmond hotel, Augusta, for district No. 5; Frank Reynolds, of the Ansley hotel, Atlanta, for district No. 6.

The chairman has called a meeting of this committee in Valdosta on Friday and Saturday of this week, at the same time that the annual meeting of the Georgia Hotel association is to take place. The first action to be taken is the publication of a scenic and historic map of Georgia, showing all principal points of tourist interest, golf courses and similar information. This map has already reached an advanced stage of preparation, and it is expected that it will be ready for distribution to mid-winter tourists.

HEAVY CHAINGANG SENTENCES GIVEN TWO AUTO THIEVES

Pleas of guilty of larceny of automobiles brought stiff chaingang terms Saturday to Harry Lewis and Williams Evans, when the pair faced Judge Virlyn B. Moore, of Fulton superior court.

Lewis was given four to five years, while Evans drew a three to four-year term. Lewis was charged with larceny of an automobile from Miss Annie Chapman, of 345 Gordon street, Kirkwood, while both Lewis and Evans were charged with stealing cars from Mrs. R. W. Todd, of Marietta, C. B. McCullum, of 733 Argonne avenue, and H. J. Cox, of 361 Peachtree street.

Harry Dillard, who was indicted jointly with Lewis and Evans on a charge of larceny of an automobile from Cox, has not yet appeared in court.

"THREE WEEK-ENDS"—

No, I'm not talking about the two more shopping week-ends we have till Christmas, but the show at the Howard—

"Three Week Ends," starring fascinating little Clara Bow, one of our favorites. According to Manager Hicks, Clara is at her most intriguing best in her newest picture and no matter how busy Christmas shopping you are this week you just must take time enough to see it. In fact here's a suggestion I want to offer that will allow you to see the "best show in town" and simplify your shopping problem also.

Christmas shopping, be it ever so pleasant, is tiresome work. Pushing through crowded aisles and thronged streets just "takes it out of us"—so my suggestion is that in order to conserve energy and pep, to rest and relax a bit and relieve the shopping strain, along about 12 o'clock on your busiest day, stop for a piping hot lunch, then at 12:30 o'clock drop in the Howard for an hour and a half, get a good laugh and a period of complete "shopping forgetfulness" in enjoyment of a real good show—then you can return to the business in hand rested, refreshed mentally and physically, full of zest for the afternoon's round of buying. By taking in this morning matinee you see your show for just 25 cents, too, which in Christmas shopping times means quite something.

Just a suggestion as to a timely time to see the show. For of course I know there's none of us who have any intention of not seeing little Clara Bow in her best picture—"Three Week Ends."

FOR YOUR Christmas gifts of silken hosiery—

Go shopping at Hanan & Son, 170 Peachtree. Yes—I've a reason for this suggestion. I happen to know that they are featuring the beautiful Hanan hose at exceptionally attractive prices for this holiday season and from now until December 25th you can get the regular $1.65 quality hose for just $1.25. This comes in both the sheer chiffon "silk to the top" full fashioned hose—beautiful quality and also in the service weight. Good looking, splendid wearing and a wonderful value at $1.25. Other lovely Hanan hose priced from $1.25 to $5.95, every pair beautifully boxed, ready for gift giving. In all the favored street and evening shades the Hanan hose are shown.

Hosiery is always an appreciated gift: a woman can never have too many pair, so 'tis a gift that bears duplication. And gift hosiery bearing the name of Hanan, is doubly appreciated because the name is a guarantee of perfection.

MOTHER, DEAR—

If you haven't done your toy shopping for your kiddies yet—be sure to do it this very week—for in nearly all the toy stores I have been handed the information that toys are going "like hot cakes" and in some the supply is not expected to last until Xmas eve.

Anyway, the Santa Claus shopping ought to be the first you consummated for Christmas is chiefly the kiddies' day and their gifts should be given first consideration.

No matter how dull times are this year—how slender the family purse there's no reason why every kiddie cannot have a full stocking—for never were toys more reasonably priced.

For instance if you go shopping in the Toyland in the basement of the W. T. Grant Store on Whitehall you can buy the kiddies a world of toys yet spend very little money. There are splendid trains, fire trucks, moving vans, auto racers—just the kind the boys will want, priced at just $1. "Sandy Andy" at $1 and Bizzy Andy's at 50 cents. Aeroplanes at a like little price, while for the girls are lovely dollies; doll houses, furniture, trunks, pianos, ukes at 50 cents to $1 with games and other toys galore from 10 cents up to a dollar. Everything you want to fill the little stockings; "fixings" for the Christmas tree 'neverything.

Take the kiddies down to Grants' Toyland one day this week—let them see the splendid gifts Santa left there for them; find out just what they want, and this most important bit of Christmas shopping can seedily be done.

Give Dad something to smoke, a pipe, a box of cigars or his favorite brand of cigarettes. In addition of course to the every present gifts of ties, sox and hankies.

A silken scarf is a gay gift and so good this season. Find them in the shops, bits of dainty colorful loveliness priced from $1.95 up.

Never were negligees so alluring. Saw some peachy ones in soft rose brocade, ostrich - trimmed; some lacey trimmed and ribboned, rather modestly priced for so much beauty.

Just 13 shopping days till Xmas. Lest you forget.

Shop early—in the day and avoid store congestion, car congestion and parking worries.

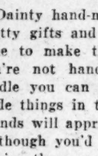
An electrical Seth Thomas clock is something new if you're looking for a "different" gift. Selfwinding, everlasting, regular time keepers they are and not expensive as clocks go.



IF YOU are looking for "gifts that last"—

Let me suggest that the gift that will have intrinsic value longest would be one of those original paintings by an old or modern master that you will find on exhibition at The North London Fine Arts Gallery at 226 Peachtree.

When you buy diamonds—genuine stones—you realize you have made a good investment. Well, when you choose one of these original paintings you may know that you are acquiring — or giving — something that will not only in years to come rank as a valued heirloom but its monetary value will increase year by year until—like the Rembrandts — Gainsboroughs — Vandykes and other famous pictures—it will be priceless.

For instance, in this North London Fine Arts Gallery there are some beautiful small water colors by famous masters of water color art—famous men—Turner, Callow, McWhirter, Birket-Foster, Copley, Fielding and others. These are artistically framed—moderately priced—and as there are only a limited number extant you can rightly know that as the years pass on these particular pictures will increase in value—in importance—so that the owner will prize them much more than at this time of original acquisition. And—not only will they be passed down as valued family heirlooms, but should you ever need to sell you will be able to double—treble—quadruple the price you pay now for them.

First editions of certain authors of even our own times command big prices.

Original musical manuscripts of famous composers are priceless. And the original paintings of certain artists of our modern school will at some not far distant day bring prices like the Rembrandts, Raeburns and Gainsboroughs do today.

So—buy pictures, not only for their artistic value—but as a real investment. Go down this week and ask Mr. King to show you those exquisite small water colors and oil paintings that (even if you are a mere dilletante) will appeal to you for their dainty beauty and lovely color blendings.

Note their prices—from $50 to $500. Then choose as many as you are able to acquire, for remember that YOU DO NOT HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY to secure genuine originals very often, and this exhibit of the North London Fine Arts Gallery of original paintings by old and modern masters is a privilege we should appreciate—an opportunity we should not allow to pass by. Mr. King is an authority on pictures. You can accept and rely upon his judgment and advice absolutely. Remember, too, that all these pictures by modern masters are offered now at half price as a Christmas special.

Pretty little cretonne covered boxes containing quires of fine paper and envelopes are offered as pretty as well as practical gifts for girls. The boxes can do duty after Christmas for gloves, kerchiefs or what not.

Satin mules, brocaded or plain, are very gifty things for feminine friends. Not expensively priced this season either.

Quite a cute conceit and very gifty for a girl's friend is the handkerchief doll fashioned of silk, gingham or cretonne in gay coloring, with a pocket in which to stow dainty kerchiefs. Saw some pretty ones in a certain shop priced for less than you can make them. Ninety-eight cents and up. Look at these.

Dainty hand-made novelties make pretty gifts and if you haven't the time to make these yourself or if you're not handy with the fancy needle you can find lovely hand-made things in the shops that your friends will appreciate just as much as though you'd spent long hours making them yourself.

A 400-day clock—well that's more than "a year and a day"—even more than a year and three days of grace. Talk about lasting gifts—what's the matter with—time?

The lovely colored linen sets—breakfast and dinner damask—are exceptionally gifty; new and so attractive. Saw a set in rose and another in maize that would make breakfast an enjoyable affair even in a grouchy family on a freezing morning.

THERE'S nothing more tiring than Christmas shopping—no matter how interesting and pleasant it may be. Going from shop to shop, jostling and pushing through crowded aisles and elevators, you just naturally get "all tuckered out," and along about the noon hour you feel the real need of rest, relaxation and something hot to eat and drink to fortify the inner man.

Right in the heart of the shopping district, yet far enough up to be quiet, restful, cozy and comfortable, is the attractive new tea room recently opened by Mrs. McRee and Mrs. Fitts at 76 1-2 Forsyth, N. W. Both these charming ladies have had years of experience in conducting tea rooms, Mrs. McRee, as you know, having been several years ago with the Daffodil and Mrs. Fitts formerly associated with the Druid Hills and the Atlanta Woman's clubs. They know just what we love to eat—what we need to eat—know how to attractively serve it, and they have capable chefs to prepare daily different delicious menus in our good old-fashioned southern style; deft maids to serve it quickly—and these are a few of the reasons why already Mrs. McRee and Mrs. Fitts' tea room on Forsyth is the mecca for those who love good service and good food. And, what's equally to the point, the prices are modest also.

For fifty—sixty cents and $1.00 you can get the most delicious meal an epicure could wish—piping hot, tempting, appetizing—an "honest to goodness" meal that will leave you contented, soothed, rested and satisfied.

These busy shopping days all of us lunch downtown. Make it a point this week, each day between 11 and 2:30, to meet husband, sweetheart, daughter or friend at McRee & Fitts Tea Room on Forsyth for lunch or dinner. You'll find this hour of rest, combined with a menu of delicious food, a piping drink, will rest, refresh you so that the afternoon shopping or business round will be a real pleasure. During the holiday season, if you want to entertain guests at luncheon, tea or dinner, remember that Mrs. McRee and Mrs. Fitts cater particularly to parties, planning special menus for you, carrying out the color scheme you wish and doing every little thing to make your party a real success.

HAVE YOU bought your Christmas fruit cake yet?

If not, you'd better go fruit cake shopping this week, while the shopping's good—for fruit cakes are not perishable like other cakes—but improve and mellow as the days go by until by Christmas time they have just the right flavor.

Particularly delicious will you find those wonderful fruit cakes baked in The SunLite Electrik Bake Shop, 19 Broad street, S. W. Far better than those mother used to bake or than you can ever hope to make; just pounds of pure deliciousness, with all the rich fruits and nuts and ingredients that fruit cake must have to make it perfect. Theres' a difference in these fruit cakes of the SunLite Bake Shop—you can tell that at even in a glance I think, and the sight of those so temptingly displayed in the windows make my mouth water every time I pass that way. Some of these all done up in Christmas paper, gayly tied with red ribbon and a spray of sparkling holly, are all ready for Christmas giving—and if you're sending gift cakes "abroad" there are pretty tins available for shipping purposes. These will make delightful gifts for mother—daughter—dad, who loves fruit cake better than any kind, and to put in the Christmas box for the son and daughter away at school.

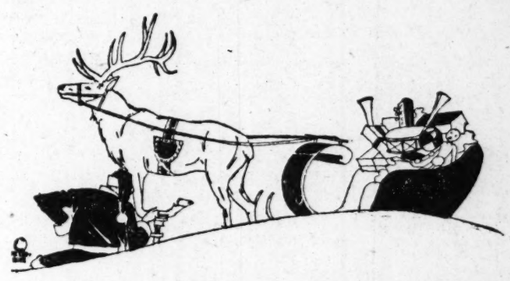
You can get these splendid cakes—both the light and dark fruit cakes, as you prefer, in practically any size you want; or they will bake to your order the cakes you want in an size. And—the reasonable prices will surprise you. But—place your order for your holiday fruit cakes now. Don't wait until the last week when stores are crowded and everyone rushed to death. Just telephone Walnut 2093. Tell them the size and kind you wish—they'll bake it for you—and you won't have a bit of worry, but can rest assured that you will give the family this Christmas the most delicious fruit they've ever tasted. Yes—mail orders are accepted and promptly filled.

AFTER all the ideal gift for Mother—Daughter—Wife or the whole family—is a home. Not only a lasting gift but a happy one that will draw the loved ones closer together—keep the home fires burning and spell financial independence as well.

Time was when the thought of buying a home meant the initial expenditure of a large sum of money so that the average salaried man or person of limited means could not consider such a gift at Christmas time. Today, however, our realtors have perfected plans so that for a very modest cash down payment and the remainder in monthly notes like rent any of us can buy a handsome, comfortable home—easily—conveniently. But of course in buying a home, just as in buying furs or diamonds or used automobiles, you must depend upon the advice of the firm with which you deal. When you buy diamonds you prefer to deal with a specialist in precious stones. So in buying a home you should make it a point to confer with a specialist in homes—a firm that knows this business thoroughly and upon whose advice you can rely.

Such a firm is P. B. Hopkins & Son, builders and owners who build homes that are meant for real homes (not mere rental houses), homes that will give you joy and comfort and convenience that you expect and want in a home. Well planned, well built, well finished are Hopkins homes, yet they cost you no more—really less—than average built homes that are merely houses. Right now you can find a new, lovely Hopkins-built home, in a locality that will suit your preference, and at a price that will suit your pocketbook. Just the size house, too, to meet the needs of your family, and convenient terms can be arranged to make it possible and easy for you to give your wife or family a home for a Christmas gift. Not just an ordinary home—but one that a woman will recognize as master-built, for it will have all the nooks and built-in conveniences, closet space, artistic fixtures and finish that make all the difference in the world to a woman. A Hopkins bungalow, in which is embodied the experience of twenty-five years of study of homes in every section of the country in which is summed up the best designs, best materials, the most convenience that can be expected or embodied in a home.

Visit the offices of P. B. Hopkins & Son in the Palmer Building this week. Talk over this matter of "giving a home for Christmas" with them. Let them show you several of the Hopkins-built homes; find out the easy terms on which you can buy one. And your Christmas gift to the family will be quickly solved—with the most wonderful gift in the world—a home that they and you can enjoy and call your own.



"The Greatest Christmas Store in the South, With as Many Gifts as the Stars."

IF YOU want to feel like Alice in Wonderland, go downtown tomorrow morning, enter the central door to Davison-Paxon's store—close your eyes a moment—open them—and you'll think you are in—fairyland!

But you'll really be in Santa Clausland—in Christmasland—the land of a myriad of gifts.

"The most beautiful store in the South" you hear every one say—but I verily think it must be the most wonderful store in the world—for how could one possibly be more beautiful, more perfect, than this great store of which we are so proud?

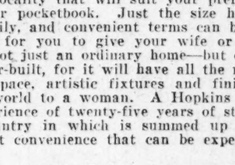
In its Christmas dress, sparkling, gleaming—with a wealth of colorful loveliness adorning every floor, it is the most alluring, fascinating place I've ever seen, and I go there many times each day just to absorb the real Christmas spirit that radiates throughout the store. Every one of the many floors is beautifully adorned for the holiday season—Toyland is the most amazing and fascinating place our Southern kiddies ever dreamed of seeing—but that main floor is a dream of real delight.

From the wreaths of bamboo and scarlet poinsettias festooning the walls to the tiny Christmas trees and wreaths on every column, the decorative effect is—perfect. And right in the heart of this gift palace is a mammoth Christmas tree all aglitter and agleam with sparkling lights, a magnet that draws not only the eyes but the hearts of every one who visits this Christmas store. On the walls lovely English scenes typical of the Yuletide season add a vivid note of color and the open scrolls in various niches of the wall give pertinent little messages of Christmas happiness and cheer.

In the midst of this beautiful fairy palace, making it even more alluring, more enchanting, are myriads of gifts; beautiful novelties and souvenirs and practical presents also assembled from the four corners of the globe; the choicest treasures of every continent are here displayed for our selection and delight. Gifts of great intrinsic value to amaze the connoisseur—and simple lovely things to please more modest taste.

"Gifts as many as the stars" are there—gifts for everyone!

Throughout this Fairyland of gifts there radiates the true Christmas spirit. Smiling service seems to be the motto of the store personnel; each eager shopper seems to absorb this message of good cheer so that this wonderful "store of the Christmas spirit" seems not only a Fairyland, a wonderland, a Christmasland, but a Happyland where "dreams come true as well as hearts' desires."



IF YOU want a very dainty gift for a lovely, dainty girl—

Do choose a pair of those adorable French "mules" that you'll find in the shoe department at Chamberlin's.

There's one particularly precious pair every woman will adore. Fashioned of lustrous black satin, these are, golden lined and with a slender little vamp tipped with gold brocade matching the little Baby Louis heel of gold brocade. The prettiest, daintiest little affair in the way of a boudoir slipper I've seen—and a genuine bargain at $7.50. But—there are many, many pairs of pretty boudoir slippers in this attractive shoe department in Chamberlin's. There are gay little slippers of satin, in black, blue, rose, beautifully lined in harmonizing colorings of chic little Baby Louis heel, giving just the right elevation to be comfy, and as a lovely finish, fluffy ostrich "choux" or pompons. These are priced just $1.95 and come in all wanted sizes.

For those who like their footwear elegantly plain, there are demure little mules of black or blue satin, lined with contrasting shaded satin, a wee heel, no trimming, and offered modestly at $3.50. On the other hand, for the woman who loves color, there's a gay little affair in rainbow satin in brocaded effect that is—well, just darling. 'Twill enchant the college maiden and is specially listed at $6.50. Any of these will make a lovely gift for a feminine friend.

For those who like best the soft comfort of felt mules, there are pretty felt slippers in attractive shades of rose, blue, green, lavender, daintily trimmed and priced from $1 to $3. For the kiddies I saw precious little novelty felt slippers, newly fashioned with velvet "cuffs," warm, comfy, very pretty, just the little bedroom slipper to delight the wee one's heart. These come in sizes 8½ to 2 and are only $1.50.

Quilted satin slippers in black, rose and copen, are just the thing for Mother or Grandmere and are very modestly offered at $2.25.

Oh, yes, Chamberlin has provided comfy gift slippers for the men of the family, too, for very similar to the pretty kid slippers for the ladies are the fine leather house slippers for Dad and brother. These have leather heels and soles, are shown in snakeskin, calf and patent, and are very good-looking. Just $5.00.

There's a dainty boudoir slipper in Chamberlin's Shoe Department for every friend on your Christmas gift list—so

Make it a point to go slipper shopping there tomorrow and check several names off your list, choosing for them the loveliest slippers—gifts you may be sure will thoroughly please.

DAD—

If you're wondering just what to give the wife who seems to have just everything; or daughter who seems restless and out of sorts—

Just know that a West Indies Cruise will prove the gift of gifts.

This lovely trip down to Cuba, Jamaica, Panama or the "Spanish Main" will be ideal just after Christmas and you can arrange for either the short nine-day trip or the longer voyage of 25 days. Rates this year are very attractive so that this "so different" gift need not cost you more than the ring, brooch or jewel you had thought to give in the first place. For information about the West Indies Cruises, a trip around the world, Mediterranean voyages or tours any time, anywhere, just call on or write John M. Born, 1108 Candler Bldg. Mr. Born is the Steamship and Tourist Agent—he knows "tours and trips" rates and routes like we do our "A. B. C.'s" and he will be glad to give you all information—send you illustrated literature, help you select your trip—and then work out all the details from passports to letters of credit.

IF YOU haven't a "radio in your home"—

Why that solves the question of what to give the family—most beautifully doesn't it? For you know—and I know—that there is no one thing that can give to every member of the family more real pleasure—more lasting joy—than a good radio set.

For no matter what the taste of your various loved ones—the radio brings to each one the form of entertainment they love best.

The best in music; sermons—lectures—business talks—politics—football and baseball games; theater programs — current events — just everything of interest or importance that is happening in this work-a-day world is brought to our homes over radio. Not only does it afford us enjoyable entertainment—but it is educational as well and while the grownups are enjoying it for relaxation, the children are getting much of educational value—in a pleasant way.

So—say it sweetly to the entire family this Yuletide with the best gift of all—a radio.

What kind to get? Yes—you want to be sure to get the best radio your pocketbook can afford—and it is entirely possible for you to afford the very best if you do your radio gift shopping at any of our seven Georgia Power company's stores. For they feature the well-known Atwater Kent; Crosley and R. C. A. radios—any one of which will give you the best in tone and service. All the newer models are on display in the Georgia Power company's show rooms and you can choose the size you prefer in a finish to harmonize with your home furnishings. Beautifully finished, they are really decorative bits of furniture, adding attractiveness to any home.

To make it possible for you to have the radio you prefer the Georgia Power company is offering special Christmas terms of only 10 per cent cash and the remainder to be paid in 12 months, small payments each month with your light bill. This is a most convenient buying plan, for you "never miss the money" and can enjoy your radio while paying for it.

But—don't wait until the day before Christmas to choose your radio. Visit either the retail store at 84 Walton or any of the branch stores, make your selection, and your radio will be delivered to your home when it suits your convenience. Radios are greatly favored gifts at this season so I advise you to shop early in order not to be disappointed and to get the model you prefer.

Do your toy shopping—first. Don't neglect the kiddies for Christmas is their day. The shops are full of toys priced from a nickel up so every kiddie can have plenty of Santa Claus this year.

Suggestively enticing "shaker" or liqueur sets, some of our shops are windowshowing. Very gifty for the man who rolls his own.

For the little tots, gay little sweater sets to keep them warm and comfy are practical and pretty presents. You'll find these in the shops priced from $3.50 up.

IN PLAYING cards the saying goes,

"When in doubt lead trumps."

And I say in Christmas shopping, when in doubt just what to get for any friend "lead trumps" by giving books.

A good book is a gift anyone—from the kiddie of the family to the tired business man, will appreciate; 'tis a lasting gift—one that will give pleasure through the years. But—you should exercise a bit of judgment in your book selection.

In The Margaret Waite Book Shop in the Peachtree Arcade you will find a complete selection of books for "grownups" and children. All the best in popular fiction, in poetry, and biography as well as the classics and favored works of all our best-known old and modern authors. The best books for boys and girls chosen by "one who knows." For Margaret Waite knows books not only through years of experience in two book stores, but good literature also through years of experience as a teacher. She will be glad to help you make appropriate gift-book selections and if you out-of-town folks who want to give "books for Christmas" will write The Margaret Waite Book Shop, 121 Peachtree Arcade, they will be glad to send you, free of charge, their lists and catalogues of newest books; you can make your selections from this—and your mail orders will be promptly filled. Prices and all information are given in these lists for your convenience.

My Answer Box

Mrs. R., Blakely, Ga.

So glad you like my selections. Am forwarding the last order tomorrow and hope you will be equally pleased. Write me again if you need any Christmas shopping done that I can do.

Mrs. C. P., Auburn, Ala.

Am sorry the samples were not just right. You failed to state the colors you wanted in your first letter, so I just had to guess about that. Am forwarding other samples today that I hope will fill the bill.

Mrs. L. S., Hinson, Fla.

You forgot to say what color crepe back satin you wished, so I inferred black. You can get nice sox in the shade you want in silk and lisle at 50 cents, all silk from $1.00. I found the Bible—a nice one—for $4.75. Am writing you in regard to the dress.

Mrs. S. T., Hayesville, N. C.

Am forwarding you a dress at the price you gave me today. Hope it will prove satisfactory. It is hard to get a frock to exactly fit without any alteration, but guess you understand that.

Miss A. B., Gainesville, Ga.

Your letter reached me too late to take advantage of that sale; am waiting a day or two, hoping they will repeat the items at the former price. Will send the necklace and beads at the first possible opportunity. I can get them at your price.

Mrs. S., Bladenboro, N. C.

Forwarded the party things to you Thursday. Am sending the vestee today. Hope it pleases.

Cedar chests in every size from wee doll ones to the frock size ones for the girl's boudoir are shown in our shops and priced from "almost nothing" up. Practical and pretty and quite gifty.

Lingerie Bags—very lovely and make exquisite gifts for college girls—newlyweds and "hope chest" prospective brides. Some of the loveliest I've seen are fashioned of soft georgette, lined with crepe de chine and elaborately adorned with dainty laces or ostrich front. Some have "undies" beautifully "embossed" on them, others "Kerchiefs." Some are plain. Modestly priced from $2.50 up and beautifully gifty.

Just 13 More Shopping Days.
Let's Make Them Lucky Days.

So glad I am that so many of you are availing yourselves of my shopping service. During the past week I have received many letters not only from our own Georgia but from sister states, and I have enjoyed very much doing the shopping for these out-of-town friends. Sometimes I may not seem as prompt as you may expect me to be in answering, but I always search about for the best values for you and sometimes I wait for a sale event that I have foreknowledge about.

In writing me for dresses, coats or hats always remember to describe your type as well as giving me your size and approximate age so that I can shop intelligently and select for you becoming things. And in enclosing money orders make allowances for postage and bank exchange if you send checks.

That's all, I believe. There are just a few more shopping days now till Christmas but I am ready to serve you "until the bitter end"—or let's say the merry, happy end. A phone or wire will reach me if you procrastinate until real late, and I'll promise you prompt service.

Very busily yours,
"CONNIE."

December Brides and Debutantes Center Attention

The beautiful young bride pictured at the upper left of today's feature page is Mrs. Charles Howard Candler, Jr., as seen at her wedding which was a fashionable social event solemnized last Monday evening at St. Luke's Episcopal church. Mrs. Candler was, before her marriage, Miss Ruth Ozburn, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Ozburn, and a popular belle of Atlanta society. At her right is the group of charming maids and matrons who attended Mrs. Candler at her wedding and include from left to right, Misses Lutitia Johnson, Sophie Street, of Rome; Mrs. William C. Warren, Jr., Misses Virginia Torrance, Runa Erwin, Louisa Candler, Patsy Thayer, and Mrs. Joseph S. Raine, Jr. The lovely bridal figure at the lower left is Mrs. Joseph Albert Oswald, of Dayton, Ohio, who until her marriage, which was quietly solemnized Wednesday evening, was Miss Lucy Elizabeth Harper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph N. Harper, the wedding having taken place at their home on Fifteenth street. At the lower right is a beautiful likeness of Miss Hortense Adams, debutante daughter of Mrs. Albert S. Adams, who was formally presented to Atlanta society at a brilliant reception given by her mother at the Piedmont Driving club Saturday afternoon, December 1. Photographs of Mrs. Candler and her bridal party by Rogers and Farmer studio; photo of Mrs. Oswald by Thurston Hatcher; the photograph of Miss Adams is the work of Kenneth Rogers, staff photographer.

Social Spotlight Turns Upon Attractive Visitors

A group of attractive visitors is occupying the social spotlight during the gayeties of the Christmas season. Atlanta, which is always on festive occasions a mecca for belles from far and near, is proving especially attractive to buds of other climes. Other cities are offering their most charming young ladies as honor guests and feted visitors and Atlantans are making their stay in the capital city one that will long be remembered. Mrs. Edward Chester Barnard, of Washington, D. C., who is the charming guest of her aunt, Mrs. William Simpson Elkin, at home at the Georgian Terrace, will be honor guest at the reception to which Mrs. Elkin has issued invitations for Thursday, December 13, at 4 o'clock, at the Piedmont Driving club. Mrs. Barnard accompanied Dr. and Mrs. Elkin on their Mediterranean cruise last winter, visiting the Holy Land and traveling extensively on the continent. She is numbered among the most prominent of the December visitors and will be entertained at a series of informal parties while in Atlanta, as she has made many friends upon former visits to Mrs. Elkin.

Miss Helen Pidgeon, of Memphis, Tenn., who arrived in the city Friday to be the guest of Mrs. Jack Pappenheimer at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue, has been extensively entertained, among those complimenting this charming visitor being her hostess, Mrs. Helen Dargan Lowndes, Mrs. Edward S. Gay, Mrs. Quill Orme, Orme Campbell and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Burr. A series of informal teas, luncheons and bridge parties have been planned in honor of Miss Hester Dunham, of Scranton, Pa., the guest of Miss Sarah Hurt at her home on Piedmont avenue. This attractive guest will continue to prove the inspiration for further entertainment while here. Miss Laura Inge Hill, of Montgomery, Ala., the guest of Miss Isabel Breitenbucher at her home on Fifteenth street, has added to the group of attractive visitors who are being extensively entertained.

Participating in the round of gayeties of the week will be Miss Clara Cole, of Newnan, and Miss Mary Tupper, of New Orleans, La., who will be bridesmaids at the wedding of Miss Ednabelle Miller Raine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shelton Raine, to William Clarke Wardlaw, the third son of Mr. and Mrs. William Clarke Wardlaw, to be solemnized at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, December 15, at All Saints' Episcopal church. Mrs. Henry Watkins, of New York city, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. William C. Wardlaw at their home on Peachtree circle, having arrived here to participate in the social festivities preceding the Raine-Wardlaw wedding, and as a former resident of Atlanta she will be welcomed by a wide circle of friends.

Miss Sharp Honors Season's Debutantes.

Miss Jane Sharp entertains at a small, informal buffet supper this evening at her home on Rivers road, the occasion to honor Miss Adelaide Howell and Miss Marion Hull Smith, popular members of the Debutante club. The guests will include a small group of the season's debutantes and their escorts.

Major and Mrs. Herwig To Entertain at Club.

Major and Mrs. Hans R. W. Herwig will entertain at the dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club Saturday evening, December 15. The guests will include a congenial group of the military contingent.

Mr. and Mrs. Pappenheimer Honor Miss Pidgeon.

Honoring their guest, Miss Helen Pidgeon, of Memphis, Tenn., Mr. and Mrs. Jack Pappenheimer entertained at a breakfast Saturday at their home on Ponce de Leon avenue, preceding the Tech-Georgia football game. The breakfast assembled more than 75 friends of the hosts and honor guest.

Chrysanthemums were artistically used in decoration throughout the lovely home. Mrs. Pappenheimer wore a brown silk sport dress. Miss Pidgeon wore a smart henna colored sport model.

Mr. and Mrs. Inman Are Luncheon Hosts.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Inman entertained at a buffet luncheon Saturday at their palatial home on Andrews drive preceding the Tech-Georgia football game. The spacious rooms were elaborately decorated with Calla lilies and Pernet roses.

Fifty friends of the host and hostess were invited.

Biltmore Tea-Dance Is Interesting Event.

The tea dance Saturday afternoon at the Biltmore following the Tech-Georgia football game assembled many visitors and Atlantans. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Raley had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Ben Oxnard, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Stevens, Thomas Oxnard and Glenn Bond, all of Savannah; Miss Virginia Royster, of Raleigh, N. C., and Mr. and Mrs. Bartow Morgan, Jr.

In a party were Miss Harriett Turman, Miss Marion Altridge, Miss Netta Russell, John Whitner, Whitner Milner, Joe Henry Singer, Buster Thomas and others.

Among others entertaining were H. L. Chichester, William Hunter, J. R. Beltinger, Mrs. Seth Mellon, Neal Thomas, Mrs. Hugh Dobbins, Mrs. Sidney Wellhouse, J. McC. Hill, Miss May Asbury, Thomas Keesey and A. R. Pierson.

Among the interesting affairs given Saturday preceding the Tech-Georgia game was the luncheon at which the members of Chi Omega sorority entertained at the Biltmore. Among those attending the affair were members of the sorority from the University of Georgia, Oglethorpe and a number of the alumnae of Atlanta.

Bowie Bible Class Gives Benefit Bridge.

Group No. 1 of the Bowie Bible class of St. Luke's Episcopal Sunday school will have a benefit bridge party at Miss Bowie's, sixth floor Grand building, Friday evening, December 14, at 8:30 o'clock, to raise funds for Christmas social service work. Make reservations by calling Laura H. Moseley, Geneva 8312-R, or Walnut 4242. Friends of the class are urged to attend and help raise funds for this worthy cause.

Society Gathers En Masse At Driving Club Dance

Society assembled en masse at the Piedmont Driving club Saturday evening, the dinner-dance being one of the outstanding events of the social calendar for the week-end. Hundreds of out-of-town visitors, in the city for the annual Tech-Georgia football game, added gaiety and interest to the affair, the gold and white streamers of Tech vying for popularity with the red and black of Georgia university in the decorations throughout the club. The college spirit of rivalry was proclaimed by alumnae and undergraduates alike, the enthusiasm rising to its height with the orchestra's rendition of the favorite Tech and Georgia songs.

Chrysanthemums arranged in tall French baskets adorned the beautifully appointed tables where dinner was served, several hundred members of society assembling to dine, while a large number joined the throng later in the evening for the dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Tift had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cockrell, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Daniel, Dr. and Mrs. John B. Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sites, Frank Swirles, of Chicago, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Bobo Murray, of Macon; Robert Cates, of Waynesboro; Miss Haley, of Macon, and Willingham Marsh.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Woodside, Jr., entertained a congenial party, honoring their guests, Mr. and Mrs. George Harris, of Birmingham, Ala. Covers were placed for Mr. and Mrs. Woodside, Mr. and Mrs. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Casper Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Sam DuBose, Mrs. Obbie McKenzie Black, Lauren Foreman, Ben Washburn, of Wilmington, N. C.; Charles Skinner, Simion Bell, both of Waynesboro, and T. R. Gentry, of Coral Gables, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleming Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Sparks, of Macon, were honor guests in Mr. and Mrs. John L. Holmes' party, and invited to meet them were Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Shelton, Judge and Mrs. Luther Z. Rosser, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Case, Mr. and Mrs. George Street, Mr. and Mrs. Strother Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Dugas McClesky, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Pugh, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Shaefer, Mrs. Julia Rosser Eby, Dr. Champneys Holmes, Dr. B. H. Kline, and Kenneth Lassiter, of Savannah.

Major and Mrs. Hans R. W. Herwig entertained General and Mrs. Abraham G. Lott, Colonel and Mrs. Fitzhugh Lee, Colonel and Mrs. Henry S. Wagner, Colonel and Mrs. Emory S. Adams, Colonel and Mrs. Frank C. Jewell, Major and Mrs. Richard Donovan, and Major and Mrs. Roland Gaugler.

Dining together were Mr. and Mrs. William C. Wardlaw, Mr. and Mrs. Evelyn Harris, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Boland, and Mrs. Henry Watkins, of New York city, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wardlaw, who is receiving cordial welcome from her Atlanta friends, having formerly resided in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnard Boykin entertained Mrs. Edith McKenzie Mercer, of Montezuma, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Ryman, William Matthews and William Pottinger, of Charlotte, N. C.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Perkerson entertained in honor of Miss Ednabelle Raine and William C. Wardlaw, III, whose marriage will be a brilliant event of Saturday, December 15. Covers were placed for members of the wedding party, including Miss Raine, Mr. Wardlaw, Miss Dorothy Raine, Miss Mamie Raine, Miss Angel Allen, Miss Clara Cole, of Newnan; Miss Mary Hall Tupper, of New Orleans; Jack Donovan, Frank Boston, James Perkerson, Dave Black, Billy Armstrong, Stephen Barnett, Albert Davis, Kells Boland, Charles Nunnally, Thomas Hinman, Ernest Kontz, and James Nevin, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Bickelhaupt entertained a group of 20 close friends.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Becker, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Wickliffe Goldsmith dined together.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Beall entertained Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Phillips, of Clearwater, Fla.; Mrs. Raymond Kline, Miss Louise Gradwohl, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Chambers, Ralph Paris and Jack Wheatley.

A congenial group dining together were Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Boykin, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bennett, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford A. Duke, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Miss Clara Knox, of Social Circle; Mrs. T. J. Kelly, Miss Frances Boykin, James Dombrowsky, Gardner Allen, Henry McKinney and Jack Walker.

Mr. and Mrs. Blair Foster entertained Mr. and Mrs. Watson Matthews, Pat Dinkins, Thomas Oxenhart, of Savannah, and Glenn Bond, of Savannah.

Ponce de Leon P.-T. A. Board Holds Meeting.

The executive board of Ponce de Leon P.-T. A. met in the school Thursday morning with the president, Mrs. C. L. Danforth, presiding. Plans for the next few weeks were made, the most important being those for the observance of "Fathers' Night," Friday, December 14, at 8 p. m. On this occasion, there will be a presentation by the faculty and children of Ponce de Leon school, of an operetta, "Under the Sugar Plum Tree." One interesting feature of the evening's program, will be the drawing for the P.-T. A. cook book which will be given to the lady holding the lucky number. Refreshments will be served, and the parents of all the pupils of this school, especially the fathers, are urged to be present.

The executive board authorized the giving of a dress rehearsal of the operetta in the school auditorium Thursday afternoon, December 13, at 1:45 o'clock. Admission will be 10 cents for the entertainment of the children, and the securing of funds with which to further this important work of the children. Children of other schools of Decatur are cordially invited.

Mrs. Elkin and Mrs. Jones, fourth grade class mothers, reported a successful rummage sale, recently, and announced their intention of holding another early in the new year. It was also announced that the postponed benefit bridge will be given at the home of Mrs. Elkin, 604 Ponce de Leon place, at 2:30 p. m., Tuesday, December 11.

There was a request from Mrs. Camp, that the perfect teeth campaign be emphasized, and that the mothers be encouraged to do all in their power to bring this campaign to a successful culmination at an early date.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Mrs. Paul B. Simmons, the treasurer, expressed her regret at finding it necessary to move to another city, and paid a glowing tribute to the P.-T. A.

Grant Park O. E. S. To Give Silver Tea.

Grant Park chapter No. 178, O. E. S., will sponsor a silver tea and a bazaar on Tuesday evening, December 11, at 7:30 in Grant Park Masonic temple banquet hall, 464 Cherokee avenue, S. E. The public is invited.

Santa Claus Says:—

"Every Girl Will Want One of These Wonderful Dolls!"

MOTHERS

This marvelous 24-in. Mama Sleeping Doll is what you have been longing for and dreaming about to make that dear little girl of yours happy.

Here Is the Chance to Make Those Dreams Come True!

Hello, Little Girls!

I am "Princess Ann." I can talk, and I have sleeping eyes.

"I bring joy into the homes of little girls. If you really want me to bring joy and happiness into your home, The Atlanta Constitution makes it easy for you to secure me FREE for only a few moments of your time. Take advantage of its great offer at once. Then you will have me all your own. Won't we then have lots of fun? I'm all dressed up in my brand-new clothes, just waiting for you."

"Princess Ann"

Talks, and has sleeping eyes. Her clothes are beautiful, but you can take them off and make new ones whenever you like.

She Is 24 Inches Tall and a Real Beauty

YOU CAN HAVE HER FOR YOUR VERY OWN WITHOUT ANY COST

See This Wonderful Doll on Display at Constitution Office, Forsyth and Alabama Sts.

Parents Can Get Them

Simply by sending in their own subscription, if not now a reader, and one of their relatives or friends. The dolls are ready and waiting for you. Prompt action is advised. It takes only two new six months' subscriptions.

Anyone may earn a "Princess Ann" doll. The offer is open to boys, girls, men and women of all ages. Boys and girls who live in other towns and cities where the Daily and Sunday Constitution is sold and delivered by local news dealers are eligible.

Here Are the Terms of the Offer. READ CAREFULLY!

Two new subscriptions to the daily and Sunday Constitution are required, each for a term of six months, subscribers to pay the carrier at the rate of 20c a week, or 90c a month.

This applies to the city of Atlanta and nearby suburbs. For other points in Georgia and adjoining states where we have a carrier delivery service, three subscriptions are required. The extra subscription for contestants out of town is required to defray expense of packing and delivery of the doll to the contestant.

We investigate the validity of the order, and the subscriber's responsibility, and reserve the right to accept or reject any subscription order at our option for the city and suburbs of Atlanta, and the local dealer outside of Atlanta will exercise the same right.

Clip out the coupon blank below and bring or mail to The Atlanta Constitution, circulation department, Atlanta. A subscription book with all the necessary instructions for securing the subscriptions will be delivered to those who present the enrolment blank in person.

Those sending the enrollment blank by mail to The Constitution will receive the subscription book and necessary instructions by return mail. CUT OUT BLANK AND BRING OR MAIL TODAY.

He's Santa The Year 'Round

CHRISTMAS is the happy season of the year—a time when everyone makes plans to spread remembrances and good cheer. It is our greatest demonstration of thoughtfulness. Dad, as well as the rest of the family, stops to consider the needs and desires of friends and loved ones. But while the rest of the family is thinking solely of Christmas, Dad must keep other things in mind. He must be exactly as thoughtful of his family's future. His plans must put a halo of future security over Christmas Day—a halo that can best be provided through adequate insurance for the family.

Let us show you how you can arrange for a Christmas check for your family to continue throughout their lives after you have passed on.

LOST BABY TELLS WHERE HE LIVES ONLY TO "SANTA"

New York, December 8.—(AP)—Four-year-old Tommy Brennan, found by a policeman on the platform of the elevated at Battery Park, declined all information about himself other than he was looking for Santa.

At a police station a sergeant induced him to telephone.

"Hello, Santy, is that you? This is Tommy. I want an electric train and a puppy."

A jolly voice on the other end, which may have been Santa's or a policeman's boomed out, "Who are you?"

"Tommy Brennan. I live up by 155th street."

"All right, Tommy," said the jolly voice.

A contented Tommy was shortly returned to his mother.

LOCAL CONVENTION BUREAU TO MEET IN ANNUAL SESSION

Officers and executive committee members of the Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau will convene for the fifteenth annual session at a luncheon at 1 o'clock Wednesday in the pine room of the Ansley hotel.

Presentation of annual reports and discussion of organization work will feature the session, which will be presided over by Colonel F. J. Paxon, president. Other officers are Ivan E. Allen, vice president and chairman of the finance committee; W. T. Perkerson, treasurer; Fred Houser, executive secretary, and Alton B. Hollis, assistant secretary.

Directors whose terms expire on January 1, 1929, will be replaced.

FAYETTE, CLAYTON STILLS ARE SEIZED BY PROHI AGENTS

Three whisky-making plants having a combined daily capacity of more than 200 gallons were seized by prohibition agents Friday, according to reports submitted Saturday to H. P. Wright, deputy prohibition administrator. Two of the raids took place in Fayette county and the third in Clayton county. Agents W. H. Barksdale, A. C. Sowell, W. L. Andrews, and T. B. Harriss took part in the seizures.

One 30-gallon still, four 500-gallon fermenters, one 300-gallon steamer, 2,000 gallons of rye meal beer and four gallons of rye were seized and destroyed in Fayette county, agents' reports showed, the estimated value being $350. A seizure on the same premises during October netted 180 gallons of whisky, it was stated.

The other Fayette county raid resulted in the destruction of 13 60-gallon fermenters, two 50-gallon stills and 700 gallons of beer. The estimated value was $165. A raid in Clayton county netted one 200-gallon still, one 100-gallon steamer and 18 60-gallon fermenters estimated to be worth $120.

AIRMAIL PLANES HELD AT RICHMOND BY POOR WEATHER

Unfavorable weather conditions which produced a "low ceiling" caused the northbound and southbound planes on the New York-Atlanta air line to be held at Richmond Saturday night and they did not take-off until this morning, according to an Associated Press dispatch received here Saturday.

Pitcairn officials reported that the plane from Richmond arrived at Candler field about 2 o'clock, eastern time, Saturday afternoon. It was due in at 5:17 o'clock Saturday morning. The New York plane was scheduled to reach its destination early Saturday afternoon.

DANCE TO BENEFIT ODD FELLOWS HOME SET FOR SATURDAY

Patriotic lodge No. 75, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, announces that a dance will be held at the Fort McPherson Service club next Saturday night from 8 to 11:30 o'clock for the benefit of the Odd Fellows home at Griffin. Admission will be 50 cents.

Members of all branches of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, their families and friends as well as the general public are cordially invited to attend. The dance committee has arranged to meet street cars and automobiles at the fort.

Real Estate Man Slashes Throat; Condition Critical

His throat slashed, Joseph Franklin, 50, retired real estate dealer, late Saturday was in a critical condition at Davis-Fischer sanatorium, with surgeons according him a chance to recover.

Franklin had been despondent over ill health, according to Mrs. Phil Hirsch, a niece, with whom Franklin made his home. Returning from a drive Saturday, he locked himself in the bathroom and after a few moments staggered out with his throat slashed.

Examination at the hospital revealed that though the jugular vein had not been severed, his condition was described as critical.

RED MEN'S DANCE

What's Up In Congress

BY SENATOR GEORGE H. MOSES

President Pro Tempore, United States Senate

BOULDER DAM — When? Where? How high? At what cost? For flood control? For irrigation? For power? For domestic water supply?

Whoever can answer these questions can tell something about the second session of the Seventieth Congress, which will come to an end on the fourth of next March—because the Boulder Dam bill stands in a preferred position on the calendar of the Senate and because it is backed and opposed by groups of Senators who are both able and determined.

It may be taken for granted that neither Boulder Dam nor the naval construction bill nor the multilateral treaty nor farm relief will be permitted to stand in the way of the regular supply bills. These, now reduced in number and favored under a change in the rules of the Senate—with which the Vice President had nothing to do—should take but little time. So the question continues—how far will Boulder Dam obstruct everything else?

It cannot be that the opponents of the measure, who conducted the ill-concealed filibuster at the last session,

Shoppe Early and Avoid Ye Rush

THE essayists of the pipe smoking school have ruined their own game. Ever since the days of Charles Lamb they have been writing about quaint old bookstores in which one may linger undisturbed for hours among the dusty folios and first editions. And invariably they have used the word "browse" to describe the activities of those who linger in the old bookstores.

This was a mistake, for the booksellers (many of whom can read) proceeded to adopt the word for their very own, and work it to death. Today almost every bookstore in the country flaunts a cheery invitation to the passerby to "Come in and Browse." But try and do it!

Bookstores may be divided into two classes, high-browse and low-browse. The former has the sepulchral atmosphere of a Federal Reserve bank on Sunday afternoon; the clerks emerge from their hiding places only at feeding time, and run like startled fawns when a customer approaches. It is practically impossible to get waited on there, but it is the sort of place people like to be seen going in and out of, and the doorman is very deferential.

The low-browse bookstore does not wait for the customer to enter. It rushes out on the sidewalk and surrounds him. He finds his path blocked by "The Principles of Phrenology," "My Four Years in Germany," "The Heptameron of Margaret of Nevarre," "Taxidermy Self-Taught," "What Theosophy Means to Me," and enough back numbers of the "National Geographic Magazine" to equip every dentist's waiting room in America.

Inside, the low-browse bookstore resembles a morgue, with its rows of long tables on which Publishers' Reminders are laid out to await a decent burial. The walls are lined with the best and worst sellers of the last fifty years, arranged in tiers, idle tiers—and many a budding author, entering its cluttered portals for the first time, is depressed by the realization that the world really doesn't need another book, after all.

In addition to these two classes of bookstores, there is the bookshop or shoppe (fem.) which is in a class by itself. Every year, thousands of ambitious women cast off the shackles of domesticity and open bookshoppes. A skyblue smock is their badge of emancipation, and their battle-cry of freedom is, "We Haven't It In Stock, But We Can Order It For You!"

For more than a century women have been patient consumers of culture in art clubs, reading circles, Chatauquas and lyceums, listening attentively to tiresome speakers (or at least acting as if they were listening attentively), applauding at the right moment, snatching eagerly at any crumbs of crystalized opium that came their way, accepting ready-made ideas without alterations and displaying dog-like devotion to any one who would make up their minds for them.

But now they have become purveyors of culture themselves. Any lady with the price of a good fur coat can emancipate herself by opening a book shoppe. And most of them do. "So's your old man," that classic mot of year before last, has been changed to "So's Your New Woman."

During the holiday season the ardent bibliophile who visits the quainter book shoppes must dig his way through several layers of hooked rugs and hand-painted greeting cards before he can find even a Popular Copyright.

Miss Priscilla Nace, proprietor of Knocking Him Through the Japanese Fire Screen

By Weare Holbrook

Ye Quill and Ink-Horn Book Shoppe, has always prided herself on maintaining what she calls a "bookish atmosphere" (although it has been rather difficult to maintain any kind of atmosphere since Weisbord's Cut Rate Gents Pressing Emporium moved in next door). But even she has yielded to the demands of holiday trade by installing a line of alleged "novelties." One must pay one's rent; and if people won't buy ship models and wooden soldiers.

With the approach of Christmas, the shoppers grow desperate. Pursued by the purchasing pack, buffeted by bundles and elbows, they retreat to the remote marts of commerce and invest their savings in whatever happens to be in sight. For these unfortunates, the book and gift shoppe is a sanctuary.

Under ordinary circumstances, Mr. Oddleigh would never have entered Miss Nace's establishment. There was something sweetly repellent about the inscription over the door. "Linger, Booklover," it read, "and Browse a Bit." Mr. Oddleigh was fond of books, but he had never had any desire to be known as booklover. It seemed ostentatious, like stopping to pat the nose of a milk wagon horse to show that one is fond of animals, or calling people "brother" and "sister" the way the Socialists do.

But last night the throngs of holiday shoppers literally forced him across the threshold. Besides, he had to buy a book for Uncle Naboth. "I'll attend to everything else," Mrs. Oddleigh had informed him in the morning as she made out her Christmas list. "All you will have to do is to get a book for Uncle Naboth." So Mr. Oddleigh broke away from the surging torrent of humanity on the sidewalks and eddied into the comparatively peaceful backwaters of Ye Quill and Ink-horn Book Shoppe.

"Something for you?" inquired Miss Nace, her eye-glasses twinkling nervously. He wasn't the sort of person she would have spoken to back in Harrisburg, but he was a potential customer.

Mr. Oddleigh gazed dubiously at a copy of "1001 Ways to Serve Tapioca," by Jessica Joy. "No," he said, "I'm only looking around."

"Ah, yes," she smiled and nodded understandingly, "you're just 'browsing'?" It was her favorite particle, but she always felt that it was a teeny-weeny bit slangy. Mr. Oddleigh could fairly see the quotation marks around it.

"Yes," he admitted, "that's all."

"I think it is very jolly to 'browse' among old books," asserted Miss Nace. (Though not so jolly, she added mentally, to browse among new books bound in pale gray boards that show every fingerprint.) "If you see anything you want, just let me know."

"Thank you," said Mr. Oddleigh, edging away with a sigh of relief. He picked up a copy of "Felicia Hemans' 'Day by Day,'" bound in imitation calf. "Just the thing for the guest room," he mused. As he opened it cautiously, the binding cracked at the back with a noise like a pistol shot. Mr.. Oddleigh glanced guiltily in the direction of Miss Nace, put down the book, and moved toward the door.

"Something for you?" inquired a young lady assistant who had been lying in ambush behind a hedge of bridge lamps.

"No," said Mr. Oddleigh, "I'm just browsing. I'm an old booklover." That ought to hold her for a while, he reflected.

But it didn't. When he paused beside a display of hand-painted ping-pong rackets, she was at his elbow. "Are you looking for anything in particular?" she asked.

"Yes!" said Mr. Oddleigh desperately. "I'd like to see your Incunabula."

The young lady assistant gazed at him coldly. "I beg your pardon?"

"Incunabula," he repeated. "Do you mean to tell me that this book shoppe doesn't have any Incunbula?"

"Just a moment, I'll find out," she said vaguely. "O, Miss Nace!"

There was a hurried consultation in the rear of the shoppe, but before Mr. Oddleigh could reach the door, Miss Nace waylaid him. "I'm sorry," she said, "we don't have Incunabula, but we can order it from the publishers for you. . . . Perhaps you would be interested in some games for children. We have one here called the Rainy Day Box, which contains a dozen different"——

"No," said Mr. Oddleigh, "I want to get a book for my uncle."

"Forty-five," said Mr. Oddleigh, "but he wears a 48 suit. He's large for his age."

"Maybe he would like a decalcomania outfit," said Miss Nace, producing a gayly decorated box. "There are glass plates in it, and he could make his own magic lantern slides."

"But Uncle Naboth doesn't have a magic lantern," objected Mr. Oddleigh. "He's never been able to get enough subscriptions to the 'Youth's Companion.'"

"Then why not give him a magic lantern? Here is a small one that would be very suitable for a man of forty-five. Pick it up, sir, and feel how light it is. You see, it's portable."

"Or a harp," suggested Mr. Oddleigh. He was about to put the magic lantern back on the shelf, when a toy airplane whizzed across the shoppe and crashed against the back of his neck, knocking him halfway through a Japanese fire screen. The magic lantern dropped into a Quimper tea set, and the decalcomania plates shattered themselves against a pair of brass andirons.

When Mr. Oddleigh, with a parchment lamp shade over one ear, crawled out of the debris, he found Miss Nace lecturing a small boy. "You mustn't be meddling with things that you have no intention of buying," she said severely. "If you want to look at toys you can go outside; there are plenty of them in the window. Now, you march right out of here, and don't let me—Oh, is he yours, madam . . . Of course . . . Oh, not at all. Boys will be boys!" Miss Nace laughed politely and added sotto voce, "But toys won't be toys if that little brat stays here much longer."

Mr. Oddleigh surveyed the wreckage around him. He felt that he was, in a sense, responsible for most of it, and Miss Nace's remark about meddlers who do not buy seemed directed at him rather than at the small boy. Perhaps if he bought an expensive book or two it would compensate for some of the damage he had caused.

"I—I'm sorry," he said. "I really do want to get a book for Uncle Noboth. Have you something in the way of poetry?"

It developed that Miss Nace had a great many things in the way of poetry. She mounted a step ladder beside the poetry shelf and began removing them, one by one, a croquet set, an armadillo basket, fencing foils and bottle lamps. "We had a copy of the 'Rubaiyat' here the other day," she said, balancing herself on one toe and groping at the back of the shelf. "I'm afraid it's not here now, but"—

There was a tinny rumble, like stage thunder, and an avalanche of Cape Cod fire-lighters descended upon Mr. Oddleigh's head. The impact stunned him, but only momentarily, for he could hear the voice of Miss Nace, faint and far away, saying, "—but we can order it for you."

When Mr. Oddleigh arrived home that night he brought with him one magic lantern (slightly damaged), one Quimper tea set (utterly demolished), two dozen parchment lamp shades, a ship model, an accordion and enough Cape Cod fire-lighters to equip a South Pole expedition.

"Thank goodness!" said Mrs. Oddleigh when she saw the bundles. "The department stores were so crowded that I wasn't able to buy a thing today. Where did you get these?"

"At Ye Quill and Ink-Horn Book Shoppe," he replied.

"And did you find a good book for Uncle Naboth there, too?" Mrs. Oddleigh asked.

"No," said Mr. Oddleigh, "they had sold their book. But never mind. We'll probably be able to get one at the handware store."

Pirates Ahoy!

By Charles B. Driscoll

IF EVER you visit the port of Algiers you will admire the great stone mole that protects the harbor from the ocean rollers on the west. It is of solid masonry that has withstood the buffetings of countless storms over a period of four hundred years.

Christian slaves toiled under the lash of Turkish masters and Moorish foremen for four terrible years to build that everlasting wall.

Algiers was the capital of the pirate empire of Kheyr-ed-din, the brother of Uruj Barbarossa, who took over the government of the corsairs when Barbarossa was killed by the Spaniards in a desperate battle on land, just outside Algiers. The name of the successor of Uruj is pronounced Hare Youdeen, and I see no reason why we shouldn't spell it as it is pronounced, since there is much doubt about how it was originally spelled, anyway. Hare Youdeen also was called Barbarossa, or Redbeard, as was his brother, Uruj, so that the two are often confused in accounts of their activities. To avoid confusion I shall leave the name Barbarossa to the first of the Barbarossas, who had the best claim to it, since his hair and beard were really red, while Hare Youdeen's beard was a dark auburn.

Hare Youdeen inherited from his notorious brother a toppling pirate state. Barbarossa had been successful in creating a barbarian empire, but when the King of Spain went after him in deadly earnest with an army of ten thousand veterans, Barbarossa and his whole active army were wiped out. The King of Spain had a victory that would have meant the end of the Barbary corsairs forever, if the Spanish soldiers had settled down to garrison the Barbary ports.

But the Spaniards blundered, as they so often did in the height of their power. The Marquis de Comares, who won this brilliant victory and left not one man living out of the little army that had been commanded by Barbarossa, put his men back into his ships when he had mopped up the job he was sent out to do. He went back to his post at Oran, and most of the fleet presently set sail for Spain in triumph.

This was rare luck for Hare Youdeen, brother of the fallen chief. He knew his Algerines, his Moors and his Arabs. He knew that these fierce fellows fight just as well in defeat as in victory. They must fight, and in a thousand years they have not often fought as conquerors, but more often as the minority party, harassing the majority and flinging their lives away in desperate battle.

Barbarossa had been able to unite the army tribes of his pirate state, and to exact from them all a personal loyalty that made him formidable. But Hare Youdeen had a good deal of statesmanship in him, and by threats and demonstrations he was able to bully his allies when he could not coax them.

Toward the Sultan of the Ottoman Empire, Hare Youdeen was all deference and respect. He sent ambassadors to say to the Grand Turk that he, Hare Youdeen, successor of Uruj Barbarossa, desired to present to His Majesty the corsair state of Algiers, with all its dependencies and loyal tribes, as a part of the Empire. He let it be known that he would continue to be boss at Algiers.

The Sultan, who loved to extend his Empire and had recently added Egypt to it, was delighted with this voluntary submission of a powerful pirate prince. He sent a guard of two thousand Janissaries to represent him in protecting the person of the head of the robber state, and invested him with the title of Beglerbeg, which was equivalent to Governor General. In other words, Hare Youdeen was to continue to run his little pirate nest as he chose, with the approval and at least nominal support of the powerful Sultan.

This was a statesman-like move. It gave Hare Youdeen time to prepare for extensive piracy without worry about what the Sultan might do to him. In 1519 Hare Youdeen was duly installed Beglerbeg of Algiers, with horsetail banner and official scimitar.

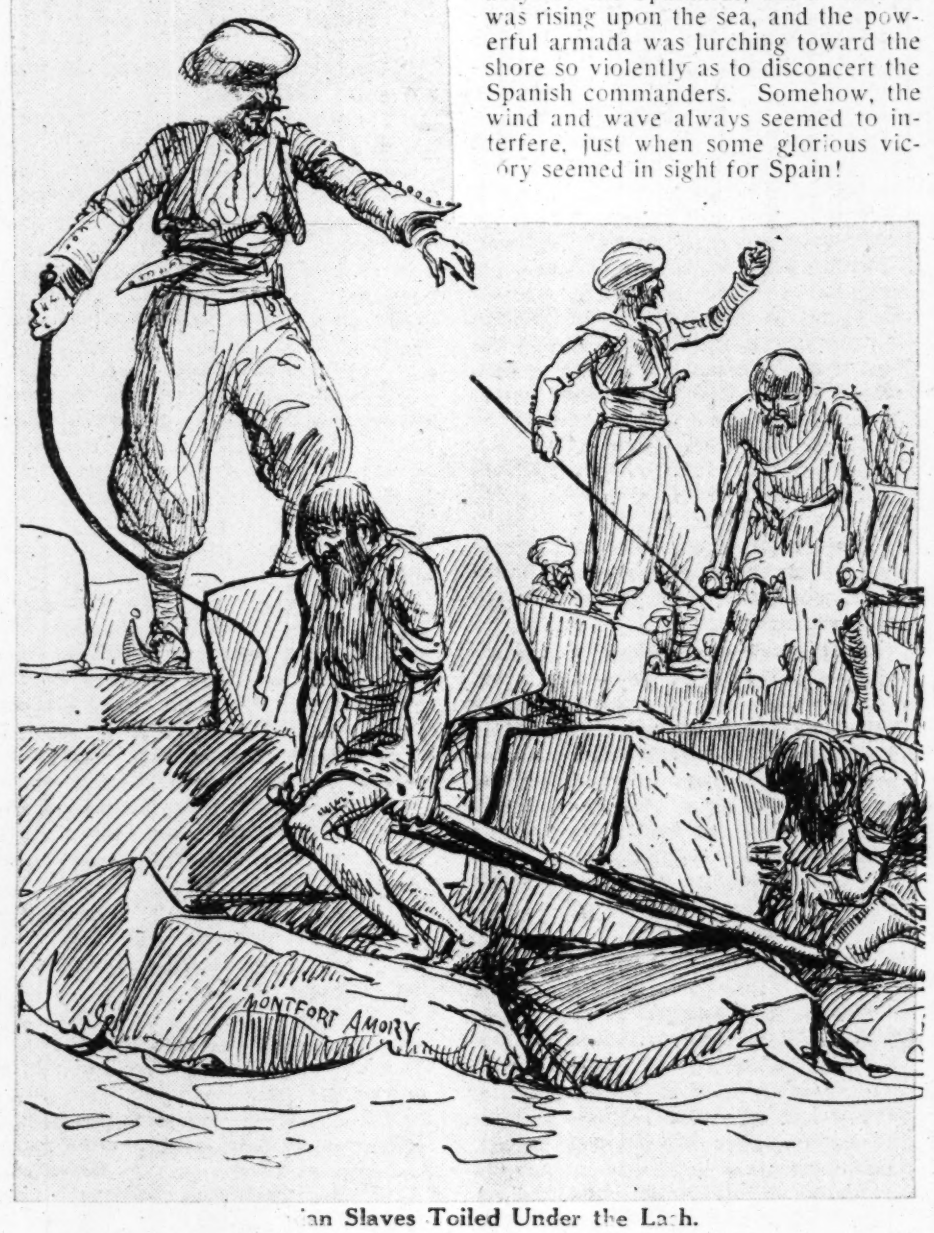
Now Hare Youdeen began to justify himself to his subjects by piratical enterprises of great moment. He collected and manned a goodly fleet, and went to sea. Again and again his wild men fell upon great Spanish galleons and Neapolitan or Venetian merchant ships, and brought the prizes safely to port. Algiers began to take on once more the appearance of a wealthy port. All the merchandise traded in was stolen, it is true, but the cost of robbery at sea was not high in those days, and the proceeds were almost clear profit. The new pirate king was waxing rich.

Alliances were made with several Arab tribes of the interior, and when the tribes were not quick to make alliance, Hare Youdeen found time to march upon them and punish them soundly for their hesitation. He got Arabs for his land defenses, and his Algerines manned the guns that won the day at sea. There were plenty of Christian captives to work the oars.

The King of Spain now realized that his expedition against Barbarossa had been a failure, even when it had seemed such an unqualified success. He sent a fleet of fifty ships, including troop transports, under Admiral Don Hugo de Moncada to extirpate the corsairs. Alas, the final extinction of the Barbary sea-rovers was nearly three hundred years away at this time, and a young republic on the other side of the world, which was not to be born until two centuries after the death of Admiral Moncada and his King, was destined to strike the blow that Spain, in the zenith of her power, was unable to deliver!

The Spanish soldiers landed on the beach at Algiers. The two hundred soldiers in the Spanish garrison within the heavy walls above the city opened a cannonade upon the town.

The battle was progressing favorably for the Spaniards, but a tempest was rising upon the sea, and the powerful armada was lurching toward the shore so violently as to disconcert the Spanish commanders. Somehow, the wind and wave always seemed to interfere, just when some glorious victory seemed in sight for Spain!



...an Slaves Toiled Under the Lash.

Moncada was forced to draw off half his fighting men to save the ships, and even then more than a third of the vessels perished upon the rocks or were stranded on the beach. What remained of the Spanish forces were reembarked under a withering attack, led by Hare Youdeen in person.

The victory over a highly organized and well-advertised Spanish force vastly increased the prestige of the corsair state. Hare Youdeen might be described as sitting almost on top of his part of the world. He was regarded a miracle man by the Turks in Constantinople as well as by the Arabs who were his close neighbors. All were willing to take service in his galleots for the acquisition of gold that was being dug out of the earth by red Indians in the far-distant Americas.

* * * *

Three small strongholds of European powers in Middle Barbary were conquered by Hare Youdeen, and the scouraging of the Christian commerce at sea was resumed on a bigger scale than was ever before attempted. The Barbary galleots were everywhere in the Mediterranean, and up and down the African coast.

At least once a year Hare Youdeen himself went to sea aboard a great galley, captured from the Spaniards, and rowed by captive Spanish Christians, leading a picked squadron of eighteen galleots, each one commanded by one of his favorite ruffians. Then there was great havoc upon the seas, and woe to the Christians who chanced to be abroad in those waters! Hare Youdeen himself passed sentence upon the captives.

Sometimes not a prisoner was brought back, for it was the whim of the great despot of the corsairs to see them all butchered upon the deck of his tall galley. Sometimes when there were plenty of oarsmen and no more slaves were needed upon the mole, the male prisoners were all thus despatched, but the women were brought back to Algiers, to be distributed as holiday gifts among the strong-arm men of Barbary.

There was a trusted lieutenant of Hare Youdeen's who was called by Europeans Drub-Devil, and whose Turkish name was Aydin Reis, and this fellow was often given important tasks to perform for the chief of the corsairs.

There is an island of the Balearic group called Majorca, which has long been famed for its climate and its historical traditions. It is owned by Spain today, as it was in 1519, when the events here related took place. It is now a favorite vacation resort for wealthy English families, but in 1519 it was occupied largely by Spanish grandees and their innumerable slaves, upon extensive estates. The neighboring Balearic Isles were also well populated by wealthy families.

Most of the slaves were Moriscos, the Moors who remained in Spain and Spanish possessions after the conquest of Granada in 1492, and the descendants of those Moors. Some of these blacks became Christians, and their lot was not so sad as that of the Moriscos who remained obdurately opposed to Christianity. Nearly all of them, however, wanted to get back to Africa.

Drub-Devil was sent by Hare Youdeen to gather up a great number of these Moricos at Majorca and return with them to Algiers. The passengers were willing to pay well for their passage, and Hare Youdeen was anxious to have them share their knowledge of Spanish industries and Spanish culture with his motley population at Algiers.

Drub-Devil managed to embark two hundred families, with their most valuable possessions, at night.

Eight Spanish galleys, under command of General Portundo, were returning to Spain from a ceremonial occasion at Genoa. Portundo received a message from his King regarding the pirate fleet off Majorca, and made directly for the island.

As the big Spanish ships hove in sight, Drub-Devil began landing his Morisco passengers and preparing to fight. Portundo, with great preponderance of gun-power, sailed close without firing. He had been offered a large reward for return of the Morisco slaves alive and unhurt. So he risked all upon the chance of scaring the Algerines into surrender.

Drub-Devil misunderstood. He did not know he was supposed to be frightened. He thought the Spaniards were afraid to fire. So he bent all energies to the attack, and before the day ended seven of the eight gal-

The Bargain

A Blue Ribbon

ENCOUNTERING his old friend Traquair opposite the Horse Guards, in the summer of 1880, James Forsyte, who had taken an afternoon off from the city, proceeded alongside with the words, "I'm not well."

His friend answered, "You look bobbish enough. Going to the club?"

"No," said James. "I'm going to Jobson's. They're selling Smelter's pictures. Don't suppose there's anything, but I thought I'd look in."

"Smelter? Selling his 'Cupid and Pish,' as he used to call it? He never could speak the Queen's English."

"I'm sure I don't know what made him die," said James. "He wasn't seventy. His '47 was good."

"Ah! And his brown sherry."

James shook his head. "Liverish stuff. I've been walking from the Temple; got a touch of liver now."

"You ought to go to Carlsbad; that's the new place, they say."

"Homburg," said James, mechanically. "Emily likes it—too fashionable for me. I don't know—I'm sixty-nine." He pointed his umbrella at a lion.

"That chap Landseer must ha' made a pretty penny," he uttered. "They say Dizzy's very shaky. He won't last long."

"M'm! That old fool Gladstone'll set us by the ears yet. Going to bid at Jobson's?"

"Bid? Haven't got the money to throw away. My family's growing up."

"Ah! How's your married daughter—Winifred?"

The furrow between James' brows increased in depth.

"She never tells me. But I know the chap Dartie she married makes the money fly."

"What is he?"

"An outside broker," said James, gloomily. "But so far as I can see, he does nothing but gallivant about to races and that. He'll do no good with himself."

He halted at the pavement edge, where a crossing had been swept, for it had rained, and extracting a penny from his trouser pocket, gave it to the crossing sweeper, who looked up at his long figure with a round and knowing eye.

"Well, goodby, James. I'm going to the club. Remember me to Emily."

James Forsyte nodded and moved, stork like, on to the narrow crossing. Andy Traquair! He still looked very spry! Gingery chap! But that wife of his—fancy marrying again at his age! Well, no fool like an old one. And, incommoded by a passing four wheeler, he instinctively raised his umbrella—they never looked where they were going to.

Traversing St. James' square, he reflected gloomily that these new clubs were thundering great places, and this asphalt pavement that was coming in—he didn't know London wasn't what it used to be, with horses slipping about all over the place. He turned into Jobson's. Three o'clock! They'd be just starting. Smelter must have cut up quite well.

Ascending the steps, he passed through the lobbies into the sale room. Auction was in progress, but they had not yet reached the "property of William Smelter, Esq."

Putting on his tortoise shell pincenez, James studied the catalog. Since his purchase of a Turner—some said "not a Turner"—all cordage and drowning men, he had not bought a picture, and he had a blank space on the stairs. It was a large space in a poor light; he often thought it looked very bare. If there was anything going at a bargain he might think of it. H'm! There was the Bronzino, "Cupid and Pish," that Smelter had been so proud of—a nude; he didn't want nudes in Park Lane. His eyes ran down the catalog. "Claud Lorraine," "Bosbeom," "Cornelius van Vos," "Snyders"—"Snyders"—m'm! Still like—all ducks and geese, hares, artichokes, onions, platters, oysters, grapes, turkeys, pears, and starved looking greyhounds asleep under them. No. 17, "M. Hondekoeter." Fowls. Eleven foot by six. What a whooping great thing! He took three mental steps into the middle of the picture and three steps out again. "Hondekoeter." His brother Jolyon had one in the billiard room at Stanhope Gate—a lot of fowls; not so big as that. "Snyders!" "Art Sheffer"—bloodless looking affair, he'd be bound! "Rosa Bonheur." "Snyders."

He took a seat at the side of the room and fell into a reverie—with James a serious matter, indissolubly connected with investments. Soames—in partnership now—was shaping well; bringing in a lot of business. That house in Bryanston Square—the tenancy would be up in September—he ought to get another hundred on a re-let, with the improvements the tenant had put in. He'd have a couple of thousand to invest next quarter day.

There was Cope Copper, but he didn't know; Nicholas was always telling him to buy "Midlands." That fellow Dartie, too, kept worrying him about Argentines—he wouldn't touch them with a pair of tongs. And leaning forward with his hands crossed on the handle of his umbrella he gazed fixedly up at the skylight, as if seeing some annunciation or other, while his shaven lips, between his gray Dundrearys, filled sensually, as though savoring a dividend.

"The collection of William Smelter, Esquire, of Russell Square."

Now for the usual popycock! "This well known collector," "masterpieces of the Dutch and French schools," "rare opportunity," "connoisseur"; all me eye and Betty Martin! Smelter used to buy 'em by the yard.

"No. 1. Cupid and Psyche: Bonzino. Ladies and gentlemen, what shall I start at—this beautiful picture, an undoubted masterpiece of the Italian school?"

James sniggered. Connoisseur—with his "Cupid and Pish!"

To his astonishment there was some brisk bidding; and James' upper lip began to lengthen, as ever at any dispute about values. The picture was knocked down and a "Snyders" put up. James sat watching picture after picture disposed of. It was hot in the room and he felt sleepy—he didn't know why he had come; he might have been having a nap at the club, or driving with Emily.

"What—no bid for the Hondekoeter? This large masterpiece!"

James gazed at the enormous picture on the easel, supported at either end by an attendant. The huge affair was full of poultry and feathers floating in a bit of water, and a large white rooster looking as if it were about to take a bath. It was a dark painting, save for the rooster, with a yellowish tone.

"Come, gentlemen? By a celebrated painter of domestic poultry. May I say fifty? Forty? Who'll give me forty pounds? It's giving it away. Well, thirty to start it? Look at the rooster! Masterly painting! Come, now! I'll take any bid."

"Five pounds!" said James, covering the words so that no one but the auctioneer should see where it came from.

"Five pounds for this genuine work by a master of domestic poultry! Ten pounds did you say, sir? Ten pounds bid."

"Fifteen," muttered James.

"Twenty."

"Twenty-five," said James; he was not going above thirty.

"Twenty-five — why, the frame's worth it. Who says thirty?"

No one said thirty; and the picture was knocked down to James, whose mouth had opened slightly. He had not meant to buy it; but the thing was a bargain—the size had frightened them. Jolyon had paid one hundred and forty for his Hondekoeter. Well, it would cover that blank on the stairs. He waited till two more pictures had been sold; then, leaving his card with directions for the dispatch of the Hondekoeter, made his way up St. James street and on towards home.

He found Emily just starting out with Rachael and Cicely in the barouche, but refused to accompany them—a little afraid of being asked what he had been doing. Entering his deserted house, he told Warmson that he felt liverish; he would have a cup of tea and a muffin, nothing more; then, passing on to the stairs, he stood looking at the blank space. When the picture was hung, it would not be there.

What would Soames say to it, though—the boy had begun to interest himself in pictures since his run abroad? Still, the price he had paid was not the market value; and, passing on up to the drawing room, he drank his China tea, strong, with cream, and ate two muffins. If he didn't feel better tomorrow, he would have Dash look at him.

The following morning, starting for the office, he said to Warmson, "There'll be a picture come today. You'd better get Hunt and Thomas to help you hang it. It's to go in the middle of that space on the stairs. You'd better have it done when your mistress is out. Let 'em bring it in the back way—it's eleven foot by six; and mind the paint."

When he returned, rather late, the Hondekoeter was hung. It covered

"D'you mean to tell me," he said, "that you don't like these Dresden vases?"

Short Story — By John Galsworthy

the space admirably, but, the light being poor and the picture dark, it was not possible to see what it was about. It looked quite well. Emily was in the drawing room when he went in.

"What on earth is that great picture on the stairs, James?"

"That?" said James. "A Hondekoeter; picked it up, a bargain, at Smelter's sale. Jolyon's got one at Stanhope Gate."

"I never saw such a lumbering great thing."

"What!" said James. "It covers up that space well. It's not as if you could see anything on the stairs. There's some good poultry in it."

"It makes the stairs darker than they were before. I don't know what Soames will say. Really, James, you oughtn't to go about alone buying things like that."

"I can do what I like with my money, I suppose," said James. "It's a well known name."

"Well," said Emily, "for a man of your age—never mind! Don't fuss! Sit down and drink your tea."

James sat down muttering. Women—always unjust, and no more sense of values than an old tomcat!

Emily said no more—ever mistress of her suave and fashionable self.

Winifred, with Montague Dartie, came in later, so that all the family were assembled for dinner; Cicely having her hair down, Rachel her hair up—she had "come out" this season; Soames, who had just parted with the little whiskers of the late seventies, looking pale and flatter-cheeked than usual. Winifred, beginning to be "interesting," owing to the approach of a little Dartie, kept her eyes somewhat watchfully on "Monty," square and oiled with a "handsome" look on his sallow face and a big diamond stud in his shining shirt front.

It was she who broached the Hondekoeter.

"Pater dear, what made you buy that enormous picture?"

James looked up and mumbled through his mutton: "Enormous? It's the right size for that space on the stairs." It seemed to him at the moment that his family had very peculiar faces.

"It's very fine and large!" Dartie speaking. "Um!" thought James "what does he want—money?"

"It's so yellow," said Rachel, plaintively.

"What do you know about a picture?"

"I know what I like, Pater."

James stole a glance at his son, but Soames was looking down his nose.

"It's a very good value," said James, suddenly. "There's some first rate feather in it."

Nothing more was said at the moment, nobody wanting to hurt the pater's feelings; but upstairs in the drawing room, after Emily and her three daughters had again traversed the length of the Hondekoeter, a lively conversation broke out.

Really—the Pater! Rocco was not the word for pictures that size! And chickens—who wanted to look at chickens, even if you could see them? But, of course, Pater thought a bargain excused everything.

Emily said: "Don't be disrespectful, Cicely."

"Well, Mater, he does, you know. All the old Forsytes do."

Emily, who secretly agreed, said: "Hssh!"

She was always loyal to James, in his absence. They all were, indeed, except among themselves.

"Soames thinks it dreadful," said Rachel. "I hope he'll tell the Pater so."

"Soames will do nothing of the sort," said Emily. "Really, your father can do what he likes in his own house—you children are getting very uppish."

"Well, Mater, you know jolly well it's awfully out of date."

"I wish you would not say 'awfully' and 'jolly,' Cicely."

"Why, not? Everybody does, at school."

Winifred cut in: "They really are the latest words, Mother."

Emily was silent; nothing took the wind out of her sails like the word 'latest,' for, though a woman of much character, she could not bear to be behindhand.

"Listen!" said Rachel, who had opened the door.

A certain noise could be heard; it was James, extolling the Hondekoeter, on the stairs.

"That rooster," he was saying, "is a fine bird; and look at those feathers floating. Think they could paint those, nowadays? Your Uncle Jolyon gave a hundred an' forty for his Hondekoeter, and I picked this up for twenty-five."

"What did I say?" whispered Cicely. "A bargain. I hate bargains; they lumber up everything. That Turner was another!"

"Shh!" said Winifred, who was not so young, and wished that Monty had more sense of a bargain than he had as yet displayed. "I like a bargain myself; you know you've got something for your money."

"I'd rather have my money," said Cicely.

"Don't be silly, Cicely," said Emily; "go and play your piece. Your father likes it."

James and Dartie now entered, Soames having passed on up to his room where he worked at night.

Cicely began her piece. She was at home owing to an outbreak of mumps at her school on Ham Common; and her piece, which contained a number of runs up and down the piano, was one which she was perfecting for the school concert at the end of the term.

James, who made a point of asking for it, partly because it was good for Cicely, and partly because it was good for his digestion, took his seat by the hearth between his whiskers, averting his eyes from animated objects. Unfortunately he never could sleep after dinner, and thoughts buzzed in his head.

Soames had said there was no demand now for large pictures, and very little for the Dutch school—he had admitted, however, that the Hondekoeter was a bargain as values went; the name alone was worth the money. Cicely commenced her 'piece'; James brooded on. He really didn't know whether he was glad he had bought the thing or not. Every one of them had disapproved except Dartie; the only one whose disapproval he would have welcomed. To say that James was conscious of a change in the mental outlook of his day would be to credit him with a philosophic sensibility unsuited to his breeding and his age; but he was uncomfortably conscious that a bargain was not what it had been. And while Cicely's fingers ran up and down—he didn't know, he couldn't say.

"D'you mean to tell me," he said, when Cecily shut the piano, "that you don't like those Dresden vases?"

Nobody knew whom he was addressing or why, so no one replied.

"I bought 'em at Jobson's in '67, and they're worth three times what I gave for them."

It was Rachel who responded. "Well, Pater, do you like them yourself?"

"Like them? What's that got to do with it? They're genuine, and worth a lot of money."

"I wish you'd sell them, then, James," said Emily. "They're not the fashion now."

"Fashion! They'll be worth a lot more before I die."

"A bargain," muttered Cicely, below her breath.

"What's that?" said James, whose hearing was sometimes unexpectedly sharp.

"I said: 'A bargain,' Pater; weren't they?"

"Of course they were," and it could be heard from his tone that if they hadn't been, he wouldn't have bought them. "You young people know nothing about money, except how to spend it;" and he looked at his son-in-law, who was sedulously concerned with his fingernails.

Emily, partly to smooth James, whom she could see was ruffled, and partly because she had a passion for the game, told Cicely to get out the card table, and said with cheery composure: "Come along, James, we'll play nap."

They sat around the green board for a considerable time playing for farthings, with every now and then a little burst of laughter, when James said: "I'll go nap!" At this particular game, indeed, James was always visited by a sort of recklessness. At farthing points he could be a devil of a fellow for very little money. He had soon lost thirteen shillings, and was as dashing as ever.

He rose at last, in excellent humor, pretending to be bankrupt.

"Well, I don't know," he said. "I always lose my money."

The Hondekoeter, and the misgivings it had given rise to, had faded from his mind.

Winifred and Dartie departing, without the latter having touched on finance, he went up to bed with Emily in an almost cheerful condition, and having turned his back on her, was soon snoring lightly.

He was awakened by a crash and bumping rumble, as it might be thunder, on the right.

"What on earth's that, James?" said Emily's startled voice.

Georgia Men Hold High Posts

Capt. Clark Howell Woodward, U. S. N., a Native of Atlanta, and Lt. Col. Julian L. Schley, U. S. A., of Savannah, Given Places of Importance In Panama

BY J. RUFUS HARDY

TWO Georgia men have established a record in succeeding to two of the highest posts available in the greatest enterprise of the United States government—the Panama Canal.

Never before has there been two men from the same state to hold the places of engineer of maintenance and marine superintendent of the Canal, the two positions next in importance to the governor. The record is doubly assured by the fact that they are distantly related and both came to their present positions through separate branches of the service.

This record is even more remarkable when it is considered that the three highest executive positions now are occupied by southern men, Mississippi furnishing the present governor, Colonel Harry Burgess. All of the three positions are appointive offices from the army or navy.

The two Georgia men who have been signally honored, and the positions they hold are Captain Clark Howell Woodward, U. S. N., marine superintendent of the Panama Canal, and Lieutenant Colonel Julian L. Schley, U. S. A., engineer of maintenance of the Panama Canal. Both assumed their new duties this year, and Colonel Schley has just taken his new place, assuming his duties October 16, when Colonel Burgess took the office of governor, succeeding Governor Meriwether L. Walker.

Both Captain Woodward and Colonel Schley are well known to a wide circle of friends in Georgia, and both are members of two of Georgia's most distinguished families. Captain Woodward is a native of Atlanta; and Colonel Schley was born in Savannah, both men living at their birthplaces until receiving appointments to the military and naval academy.

Captain Woodward is a product of the old Ivy Street school and Boys' High school in Atlanta. It was during his boyhood days that he obtained an experience which has helped him much during his naval career. At the early age of 12 years he turned to journalistic work and for two years he was owner and publisher of "Boys' Weekly," a little newspaper published in Atlanta for the interests of Atlanta boys. The little paper flourished under his management.

He again entered newspaper work after completion of his high school course, this time going as a reporter with the Daily Commercial, of Atlanta. Later he went to work for The Constitution, of which his first cousin, Clark Howell, is publisher. After working there for a short time he was appointed to the United States naval academy at Annapolis, receiving the appointment after competitive examination from Congressman Lon Livingston, who for many years was representative from the fifth Georgia district.

Captain Woodward is the son of Kate Schley Howell-Woodward and Colonel Park Woodward. Colonel Schley's parents were Eliza Ann Larcombe-Schley and Julian Schley. The relationship between the two executives is through the Schley side of Captain Woodward's family.

Captain Woodward was a graduate of the naval academy before Colonel Schley had entered his military career at West Point. Captain Woodward received his appointment in 1895, and three years later saw his first active service in battle, being attached to the U. S. cruiser Brooklyn, flagship of Commodore Schley, a kinsman of his and Colonel Schley, when the Brooklyn took part in the famous battle of Santiago, July 3, 1898.

Since that memorable battle, Captain Woodward has seen varied service in all parts of the world and has a distinguished service record with the navy. After the close of the Spanish-American war he served a tour of duty with the Asiatic station, from February, 1899, to October, 1901, during which period he was in service on the battleship Oregon and the gunboats Pampanga and Isla de Luzon.

It was during those years that he took part in both the Philippine campaign and the Boxer uprising in China. For both of those campaigns he has received medals. After his duties in the Far East, Captain Woodward returned to the United States and served on various battleships, cruisers and destroyers. He also has had command of several divisions and squadrons of destroyers during his career.

In addition to his duties on the sea, Captain Woodward has served two important shore duties. During the Jamestown Exposition in Norfolk he was stationed there for duty, and again in 1914-15 he was sent as aide to the president of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco.

Perhaps the two most important posts hever held by Captain Woodward was in 1919 to 1921 when he was second in command of the Brazilian Naval Mission, and from 1923 to 1926 when he was chief of the Naval Mission to Peru. For the latter service he received the highest decoration that can be given by the Peruvian government, the Order of the Sun in recognition for his efficient work in reorganizing the Peruvian navy.

During the World war, Captain Woodward was executive officer of the battleship New York, flagship of the America nsquadron which was attached to the British grand fleet in the North Sea. He was present at the surrender of the German high sea fleet in November, 1918.

Among the many decorations he has received are: The Distinguished Service Medal, Navy Cros, Sampson Medal for the Battle of Santiago, medals for participation in the West Indies campaign, Philippine Insurrection, Cuban Pacification, Boxer Campaign and the World war. He also has received many letters of commendation, including one from the secretary of the navy, for bravery in action while attached to the gunboat Pampanga in his Philippine service.

Captain Woodward's last service before coming with the Panama Canal was in command of the U. S. S. Milwaukee. It was during this command that he was sent to Nicaragua to quell the revolution and was in command of 1,800 bluejackets there. When he was appointed as marine superintendent, he was given a banquet in Panama by officers of his ship. He reported for duty here April 26, of this year, and took office May 15, relieving Captain John Downes.

The marine superintendent is third in rank of succession to the governorship of the canal and his duties are varied and highly important in efficient operation of the Panama Canal. Upon his shoulders are placed all responsibilities of supervising the transiting of ships through the canal. Those include, measuring ships for canal tolls, which produced an income of more than $27,000,000 last year, supervising the enormous work of lighthouse and channel marking facilities, seeing that ships pass safely through the ditch joining the two oceans, and many other similar duties.

Captain Woodward has entered enthusiastically into his new life here and since coming to the canal zone has taken an active part in social and civic life of the isthmus. He and Mrs. Woodward have just moved into the house reserved for the marine superintendent and their home has been the scene of many gay social affairs since that time. Both are very popular here and already have made a wide circle of friends among American and Panama population here.

In this early work of journalism, Captain Woodward learned some of the hardships endured by the average reporter and his office at the administration building at Balboa Heights is one of the most popular for newspaper men. His newspaper experience also stood him in good stead during his two years in command of the U. S. S. Milwaukee. During those two years he wrote, edited and published a weekly paper for the officers and men of his ship.

It was just after the graduation of Captain Woodward from Annapolis that Colonel Schley received his appointment to West Point from Savannah. He was graduated from the military academy in 1903 and commissioned as second lieutenant in the corps of engineers.

During the first five and half years of service with the engineers he saw a wide service, serving a year in the Philippine Islands, a year at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., two years at the engineer school at Washington barracks and a year and a half with the army of Cuban pacification. During the last service he was assistant to the chief engineer of the expedition for about half the time.

In 1908 he was appointed as instructor at the United States Military academy in the department of civil and military engineering. After holding that place for four years, he was appointed as assistant to the engineer commissioner of the District of Columbia. While in that position he organized the public utilities commission, which regulates the utilities corporations doing business there. He served a four-year detail there and then was sent to New Orleans as district engineer.

In June, 1916, he took command of a battalion of the Second Engineers at El Paso, Texas, stationed along the Mexican border, and the following year he took command of the 307th Engineers of the 82nd division at Camp Gordon. He went overseas with that division and was with it during the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives. In October, 1918, he was INSTALLMENT VII.

"NO," she said reluctantly.

"Well, your singing over the river won't be the knife that'll cut the strings."

"I'll tell you tomorrow," she parried.

She had thought to talk over the offer with Joe, but as she came down Harrison street in the dusk she saw him ahead of her with Violet Caine. There was nothing in the fact of their being together to trouble her, but something in the girl's attitude as she leaned toward Joe sent a sharp twinge of terror through Sally's heart. It wasn't possible, it wasn't even thinkable, that Joe thought twice of her, of any other girl. She was simply Violet, who'd played with them, and who lived next door. It was, Sally tried to reason, as ridiculous as believing that he'd care for May Temple, but something told her that the case wasn't the same. May had never seen any man but John Dalton. Violet, with her promiscuous flirtations, her browsing on the edge of the hundred emotional pastures, here starring of some new ball player each season, had nevertheless held to an interest in Joe that she hadn't even troubled to conceal. She had sulked openly when she had learned of his marriage, falling into that slump in her accompaniments from which she had never tried to rise. She had flattered Joe absurdly, egregiously. Time and again she had told him petty incidents of the theater which, transferred from its informal atmosphere, seemed distortedly unfair to Sally. She had played on his jealousy of Terry Gorman. She had kept herself assiduously in his path. With insight just lighted by that sudden swerving of Violet's body toward the man beside her, Joe Gates' wife saw in retrospect a hundred signposts, ignored in the passing. "She loves him," they pointed. Her hands, deep in the pockets of her ulster, clenched tightly. "I'll be damned if she'll get him," she told herself.

She overtook them at the foot of the steps of her own house, greeting them lightly. Joe tucked her arm within his own, but Violet, her eyes gleaming with a light that Sally knew now for hate, said, "Joe's just been telling me he's going to win the fight next week. It's wonderful to have a champion for a husband, isn't it?"

"Yes," Sally said.

"Two famous people are almost too many for one family, aren't they?" To Sally her look implied that if she were Joe's wife she would seek nothing for herself. "Just think, both of you doing things!"

"We're neither of us famous—yet." With the folly of youth she sent back a barb. "I suppose we shall be, though, when Joe wins the championship, and I'm singing on the big time."

"We're going to?" Her voice rang eager. "When? Did Gene get the Casino? Do we start there?"

"I do."

"Who's going to play for you?" There was fright and fury in her lisping voice.

"Gene."

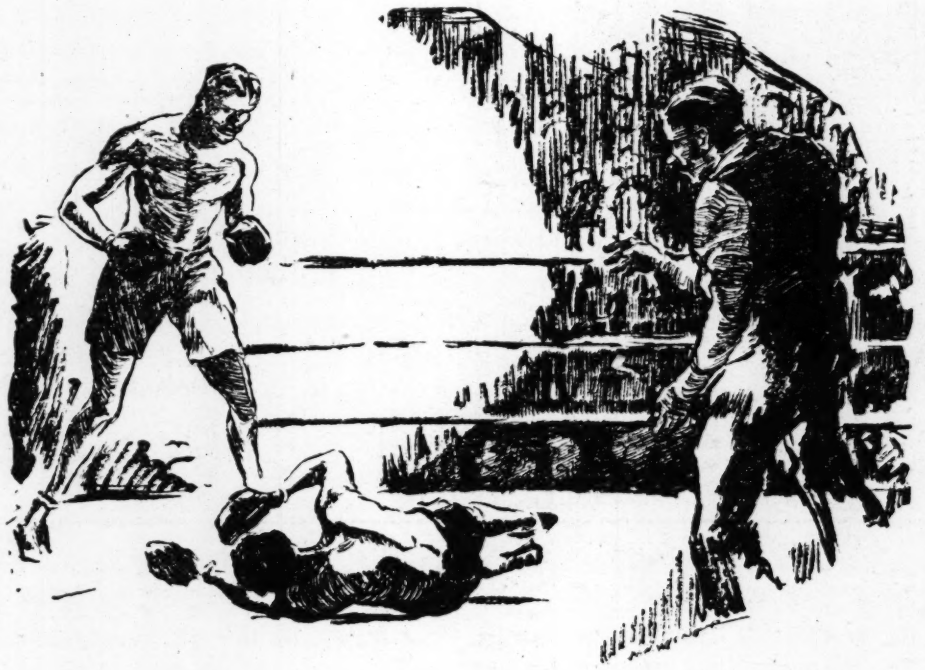
"O!" She turned away without another word, and Sally went in with Joe. "That was a dirty trick," he said. "Violet got you that job with Gregg."

"She didn't," Sally denied hotly. "It was my own voice got it. I can't help it if she won't play well enough to go on with me."

"Just the same," he said, "you might have told her some other way."

"You can go over and hold her hand if you want to comfort her." Before his look of bewildered surprise she saw her mistake. "O, Joe, let's not fight about her," she pleaded. "Let's not fight about anything."

"I'm not fighting," he said, but there was a glaze of sullen unpleasantness over his smooth head which sent down the mercury of her spirits. He didn't love Violet, she assured herself. That was too absurd to consider. She put the thought of it from her mind, but she could not put out realization that she had made her decision about the downtown theater without consultation with Joe. It didn't matter, she reasoned. He would not have gainsaid her desire to take the chance. She had the sense, however, of having failed him, and in remorse and something of terror she flung herself back into interest in his work, neglecting even her own practice to watch the rope skipping and shadow stepping in the Clover club gymnasium until her mother laughed at her. "You'll make him so soft," Nan warned, "that he'll be custard pie when he goes in the ring."



Joe swayed like a ship about to capsize, then went down and took the count.

"He won't," she denied. "There isn't a man within twenty pounds of his weight he couldn't beat."

"With you at the ropes," Pat Mangan volunteered, "yelling like Mrs. Fitzsimmons, 'Hit 'em in the slats, Bob, hit 'im in the slats!' It's a shame," he teased her, "that Joe's so light. If he weighed that twenty pounds more, you'd have him taking on all the big fellows. You'd be telling him that he's smarter than Gentleman Jim, a more terrific hitter than Bob Fitzsimmons, stubborner than Choynski—he's not much heavier than Joe at that—and tougher than Tom Sharkey. No, there ain't anything tougher than The Sailor on God's green footstool, except, maybe, Jem Pierce. Now a battle with him, if Joe were in his weight, that'd be history."

"Why can't Joe get in his weight?"

They laughed at her then, but she held up the thought to Joe when he came home. "Twelve pounds too light for meeting Jem," he said without regret. "I guess I've all I can do for a while with Walford. Besides, I can't go jumping from one class to another."

"Choynski does."

"He's a class in himself."

"But if you win the championship of yours?"

"Why'll I want to quit it then?"

She had no explanation, but the thought persisted that no man had the right to rest on laurels won. She had to admit, though, that Joe was working toward the winning of his first big bout with real tenacity of purpose. The fights with Furnow and Mullane had put him among the significant contenders for the lightweight championship. He was right in believing that his battle with the Australian would give him, if he won, a title not to be ignored. Walford had beaten Godwin, who held the American honors for the class, but Godwin was roaring that the man who defeated Walford must fight him for the crown. "I'm willing," Joe said, assuming with magnificent disdain of Walford's prowess that he would be victor.

* * * *

Except for the greater crowd in the armory the fight seemed to Sally not remarkably different from those which Joe had fought with Furnow and Mullane. Gregg had let her sing early at the West Town, and she had come to the hall with Pat Mangan, following his thrusts until they came close to the platform where two boys boxed in indifferent preliminaries. She did not see Joe when he came in, but she heard the cries of the crowd welcoming him, and she thrilled in the joy of his popularity with his own people. They all knew him with the easy informality of the sporting world, and they gave him greeting as their friend as well as their symbol. To them, his neighbors of the west side, he was Joe Gates, the boy from Harrison street, who was going to force the slim youth from the antipodes to the canvas, going to carry the banner of their sporting interest to triumph. "Attaboy, Joey," they shouted, stamping and whistling staccato encouragement. He bowed to them, not smiling, and Sally saw how tightly he clenched his fist as he strode to his corner of the platform.

Even when she apprehended the Australian boy, as slick, as quick, as tense as Joe, she did not falter in her faith that Joe was going to beat him. He wasn't as swift as Furnow nor as smashingly direct as Mullane. He was sensitive, too, wincing under the crowd's antagonism when jeers and catcalls rose against him. He fought well, at that, although for two rounds he twisted and circled around the ring until some wag back of Sally called, "get off the bicycle!" Then, suddenly, as if he had wearied of the game of pursuing the other man, Joe pulled himself up in pantherish quickness, and lunged at Walford, swinging his right a little wildly at the other man's back. Walford went down under the impact, thudding on the canvas, and lying there for seconds after the referee's count had ended.

The crowd came surging over the ropes to Joe as Pat Mangan lifted Sally to the platform. "I knew you'd win," she said, and because he gave her his little boyish grin, she forgot the hundreds of men around them, and kissed him. "Good girl," the men shouted. "He's your boy, Sally . . . Give him the crown. . . . He won 'em. . . . You can be proud of him, Missus. . . . He'll buy you diamonds," rose in din about her "Going after Godwin. . . . You don't have to take on that stiff, Joe. . . . You've as much claim to the title as he has—more, I tell you, Walford licked him. . . . You're the candy kid," rode high on beating waves of sound. Joe, lifted on men's shoulders, waved a towel. His eyes blazed with a terrible excitement as he looked out over the heads of the crowd.

Sally, caught in the jam, watched him with the feeling that these, his charioteers, were bearing him out of her life so far beyond her ken seemed his sudden passionate exultation as he was swept through the armory. "Joe, Joe," she cried. He heard her voice and called back, "Follow me!" Pat Mangan swung her up from the crowd's trampling rush. "Coming," she answered. A dozen men lifted arms to help her progress, almost flinging her from one to another until they had passed her to Joe. Breathless, she came to him, clutching at his hand to save herself from falling. He held her to him tightly, and for one glorious moment the two of them, heart to heart on a mountain peak of triumph, stood together above the heads of the mob. Then, swiftly, Joe jumped, and caught her in his arms. "Time," he pleaded.

"Time," the crowd laughed, driving back to make space for them toward the dressing room.

"Well, what do you think of little old Joe now?" he demanded of her, of Mack Stebbins, his manager, of Grimes, his trainer, of Pat Mangan, of the men huddled in the passage outside the door as Grimes unwound his hands. His mouth still twitched, his eyes still glittered with the thrill of victory.

"Great . . . great . . . top o' the world, Joe . . . never one of them like you . . . you could stand up to any boilermaker," the chorus of flattery rang out. Above it boomed Stebbins' "If he stands up to Godwin that's all I'm asking," and Pat's nasal, "Ten rounds is seven more than three, and Godwin's good fer ten, at least."

"What if he is?" Joe demanded. "So am I."

"Sure, sure," the bookmaker soothed him.

"You don't have to beat Godwin to hold the championship, Joe," a little sporting writer cut in.

"He does, if he takes him on," Stebbins said.

"I'm going to take him," Joe declared, and once more Sally saw the sullen set of his jaw.

"I'm proud of you," she told him when they had come back to Harrison street.

"For winning?" He gave her an indulgent smile.

"Partly," she said, "but most of all for going after Godwin."

"I didn't have to," he said, "but, with his yapping he'd made it look only half a victory if I didn't."

Here Was a Gorgeous Creature Who Could Set the Heart of a Graven Image on Fire. Yet the Trouble Lay Right There

Gentlemen Prefer Dumb Doras

Is Intelligence a Handicap to Women? It Is—If They Hope To Be Married and Live Happily Ever After. Here Are Psychologist's Views on the Subject

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M. D.

Author of "Your Inner Self," "The Conquest of Self," and Many Articles on Psychiatric Subjects

UNTIL a certain Miss W. walked into my office I thought I knew a lot about women, and about men, too, and what men like in women. And perhaps you will agree that there is or was some slight justification for my assumption.

You see, my work happens to be psychiatry, and, let me hasten to add, that does not mean that it deals exclusively with insanity and nervous breakdowns. On the contrary, psychiatry has more to do with preventing such calamities than with curing them afterward. That is why, at any rate, Miss W. came to consult me.

Her case dealt particularly with the problem of what gentlemen really prefer when it comes to tastes in women and what results when a woman does not belong to the preferred class.

It was several years ago, according to my files, that Miss W. unburdened her soul—years before the opinion became current that gentlemen prefer blondes but marry brunettes. And the occasion brought home to me the conviction, then a surprise but definitely corroborated since by experience, that what gentlemen really prefer—but that is my story!

I recall Miss W. distinctly. Modishly gowned, lithe of body, a face not merely pretty, but distinctly beautiful. Distinguishing marks were her dark chestnut hair, her deep and soulful brown eyes, her long curling lashes free from artifice and a sort of rosy peach skin.

I stress these points of allurement, inasmuch as her complaint was all the more astonishing because of them. Here was a gorgeous creature who, one might assume, could easily set the heart of a graven image on fire. And yet the trouble lay right there.

Men were attracted to her only to be repelled later when they knew her better. She roused their admiration, often their love, but she could not hold it. Despite the advantages of remarkable beauty there was something that left her decidedly unpreferred. Why?

Frankly, Miss W.'s case soon looked to me like a professional Waterloo. I searched for this. I investigated that. I suspected and accused her of the usual things that make men suddenly get fed up with women. I thought of gold digging, bad manners, bruskness, snobbishness, lack of sociability, athletic deficiencies, lateness for appointments, too much "goody-goodiness," even of unwillingness to "pet" and be a "good sport" in the generally accepted sense of those terms as we use them today.

But my patient seemed to meet all the requirements I could think of for social success, for success in love in an unusually superlative way. Well educated, well bred, a personality double plus, more than plenty of it—well, I began to despair of discovering why men suddenly grew cold and left her flat.

And all the while Miss W. was sleeping badly, losing appetite and weight, becoming depressed and morose, heading, indeed, for nervous collapse.

Then luckily—lucky for her as well as for me—I was invited to a dinner party and, lo and behold! there sat the charming lady looking more radiantly beautiful than ever.

I remember I did not altogether relish the idea of meeting Miss W. this way, because I was eager enough to get away from my work and forget it. I soon realized, however, that there might be advantages in seeing my patient under this new light, away from the formalities of the consulting room.

During the course of the dinner I observed that without exception each and every male guest within earshot tried mighty hard to engage Miss W. in conversation. I was not seated near enough to catch what was said, but her conversation appeared to be bright, sparkling, amusing repartee. All of the gentlemen seemed to be delighted with her. The mystery about my patient's personality continued to grow.

But after dinner the mystery just solved itself without any special effort on my part. I discovered quite easily what I had been laboring on for weeks.

"Mighty lovely girl, Miss W.," remarked a man to me after the ladies had left us with our cigars. "But she's so darn clever she makes a fellow feel cheap."

Then along came another with this: "I say, that Miss W. is a wonder. Got a mind like a flash. Marvelously well informed, too. Should have heard her talk about minerals. That's my line, you know. She's good enough for a job in my department at the university."

"But would you marry her?" I asked point blank. "Just for the fun of it, forget you actually are married. Would you marry her if you were free?"

"Come to think of it, I don't believe I would," replied the professor. "My wife knows nothing whatever about my work and I've always maintained that's why we're so happy. I couldn't stand talking shop at home, you know."

As the light of discovery began to dawn on me I followed up three clues and began asking questions of the gentlemen with whom I had seen Miss W. in conversation.

All were agreed that she was exceptionally beautiful and admirable in every way. But all were likewise agreed that she knew too much and that she was too brilliant and intelligent.

"I'd be scared of that woman," said one of my friends. "Why, she can discuss any old topic better than any man I ever saw. I pity the chap she would want to make a monkey of. No man would have a chance in the world against that mind of hers!"

And so came the answers as to why the adorable Miss W. could not make good at love. She was too intelligent for men. Men were afraid of her. Even pronounced sex appeal could not surmount the obstacle of her own intelligence.

What I learned then, and am entirely convinced of now, is this:

Men prefer neither blondes nor brunettes, except perhaps in a superficial way. What they do prefer, quite definitely and universally, are Dumb Doras!

If you stop to think of it for a moment you will understand why this must of necessity be true.

First and foremost, man is a supreme egotist. And this ego of his must be kept alive at any cost. Otherwise he feels belittled, his pride is hurt and his love dwindles to nothingness.

Often have I observed this in the marital difficulties that have been brought to me for solution.

There was the case of Mr. and Mrs. M., for instance. He was a stock broker and she an adoring wife. Everything went well with this couple for three years. But one day, unexpectedly, the market collapsed and Mr. M. was nearly wiped out.

The husband did not stand the shock very well. He became a timid, fearful almost cringing creature. He hung onto his wife as a baby does to his mother's apron strings.

Mrs. M., as might be expected, soon took charge of things herself, studied the trading game and, before long, was sitting next to the ticker beside her spouse. Rather quickly, also, through Mrs. M.'s expertness, the family fortunes were retrieved. The husband gradually returned to normalcy. Once more he became his former self

But one thing seemed to be gone for good—something that meant more to the wife than had the loss of dollars.

M. never again loved his wife as before. Wonderful though she had been, heroically fighting through and rehabilitating him, and appreciative though he was—this I know for a fact—the trouble was that M.'s pride had been hurt, deeply hurt, because of her very ability. His wife's intelligence had punctured his balloon of self-respect. And that was too much for him. They continued to live together afterward, to be sure. But never again were they really happy.

Fortunate it is that all men's egos do not run to such, shall I say, despicable extremes. For it often happens that women are compelled to step out of their Dumb Dora roles to ride on an emergency and save the day. But no matter how much man's reasoning may dictate admiration and gratitude, of this you may be certain: no man ever likes it.

Have you observed how the brainiest man fall for the silliest women, for the very dumbest of the Dumb Doras?

A most capable scientific research worker of my acquaintance was standing in front of a public telephone booth one day—waiting. Inside, a kittenish little person was holding the receiver. He waited a long time. Then he waited longer. All the girl was doing was holding the receiver and occasionally stamping her foot. Presently she opened the door of the booth and said, sweetly, "Pardon me for keeping you waiting but for the life of me I can't think of my own number." . . . He married that girl!

I know a doctor—a mighty bright fellow he is, too. But he has always appeared very finicky about his feminine preferences. Not long ago he engaged a secretary who never typed correctly, never did learn to spell medical terms; always mixed up his appointments. Nevertheless, he fell in love with that lady, and their engagement has already been announced.

Watch the couples in the restaurants, at the theaters, at the night clubs. Which are the women over whom the men hover with delight? Are they the serious-looking, high-brow faces? Are they the women whom you might suspect of being librarians, teachers or business executives? As a man about town said to me once: "You say ten years according to the Binet test spells Moron? Well, that's how dumb I like 'em."

Man's love, you see, is essentially a selfish and sensual enjoyment. Man doesn't care a rap about a woman's mental development.

What attracts men is form or grace or voice or sentiment. Sometimes they love because of pity. They may also fall desperately in love because the woman reminds them of their mother, or if the man happens to be paternally inclined, because they admire maternal qualities. Practical men think about having a good housekeeper. Society men want to be proud of a wife as a hostess. Wealthy men like to parade a wife around like a circus horse, gorgeously bedecked and bedolled, as much as to say to the world: "Look what a great fellow I am. See what I picked and what I did for her!"

But as for brains? Men without exception solemnly believe they have more than enough to share with any number of women without missing it in the least.

Always you note in man's choice of a love object a certain conquest-ownership motive. Man must be top-dog. He loves best and longest when he is top-dog or thinks he is. And wise is the woman who lets him think it.

Mind you, I am not trying to intimate that women by far and large are Dumb Doras. As a matter of psychology, quite the contrary is true. There can be no doubt but that the average woman is more intelligent than the average man.

Intelligence does not mean knowledge. It means making knowledge adaptable and workable so that it will count. Just as a woman requires only a hammer and a nail to hang a picture, while a man needs in addition a ladder, a ruler and often a T-

"Pardon Me for Keeping You Waiting, But I Can't Think of My Own Number." He Married That Girl!

What Has Happened to Justice?

Tijuana and a Family That Erased a Stain On Their Honor By Suicide

WHAT has happened to justice in the Peteet case?

In the early days of this unparalleled drama of dishonor and death, there was a great deal said about the likelihood of the guilty men facing a firing squad for their most cruel and bestial crime.

But no firing squad performed in this case. No one even went to prison. The crime which Thomas Peteet asked that justice avenge has not been avenged. Justice has failed.

That, in the final analysis of this affair, must stand as the most shameful feature of the amazing "shame suicides" of Tijuana.

Tijuana, Mexico, came in for considerable unsavory publicity as a result of the Peteet case. It was predicted that these "shame suicides" would mean the death of this hell-hole of depravity across the border. But Tijuana is not dead. Thanks to the Peteet tragedy, its reputation for wickedness has swelled tremendously.

And that, after all, is what this resort thrives on.

Tijuana is about eighteen miles from San Diego, Cal. Twenty years ago is was nothing more than a group of shacks. Its growth has been the result of American backing and American trade. The town began to boom in a small way about fifteen years ago after many California communities did away with their "red light districts." Later when California tabooed horse racing and boxing a group of Americans organized the Tijuana we know today.

The combination in control of this resort is a powerful one. It has its friends on both sides of the border.

Marvin Allen, Frank B. (Booze) Beyer, the late Clark Withington, Wirt G. Bowman and James W. (Sunny Jim) Coffroth have long been magic names in Tijuana. All are Americans. They have made millions catering to pleasure-seekers who flock by the thousands across the border to spend their money in the saloons, dance halls, gambling dens and race track.

And back of this combine stands Abelardo L. Rodriquez, the Mexican governor-general of the district.

In the depths of its depravity and the variety of its sin, Tijuana has for years been second to no town on the North American continent. All kinds of liquors are sold in the scores of saloons which line the streets. Any one anxious to gamble can pick his favorite form and be sure to find a place to amuse himself, from slot machines to roulette.

The late Mrs. Thomas M Peteet

There are several hundred prostitutes in the district. They are licensed by the Mexican government.

The government takes a generous percentage of practically every dollar that is spent in the resort. During the busy season this amounts to about $15,000 a day. The notorious Monte Carlo resort, where every form of gambling may be enjoyed, yields the Mexican government close to $7,000 a day during the racing season.

Tijuana, nicknamed "the Old Lady from Hell," does not attempt to conceal her depravity. Like the scarlet women who roam her ugly streets, she flaunts her wickedness. She is a lady who is jealous of her reputation. She wants to be known for what she is, for that is what brings the customers.

We come now to the Peteet family and their visit to Tijuana.

Thomas M. Peteet, a native of New Orleans, lived in San Diego with his wife, Carrie, and his two daughters, Clyde, 26, and Audrey, 19. He had come to San Diego late in the fall of 1925 in the hope that the California climate might benefit his wife's health. For many years he had been a salesman for a Chicago concern. In San Diego he also owned a half interest in a stand where peanuts, popcorn and other confections were sold.

The San Diego home of the Peteets, where they committed suicide.

Both daughters were musically inclined. Audrey, an accomplished violinist, played in a San Diego orchestra. Peteet was inordinately proud of them both.

During the winter the Peteets often heard about Tijuana, that wild town across the border. Neighbors and friends told them that they must not miss seeing the place. Tijuana, after all, was like no other place on the continent. At least they should go there once, said the neighbors, just so they could say they'd been there, anyway.

Peteet decided early in the year to take his wife and daughters on a holiday across the border.

The holiday began on January 30. Several times the family journeyed back and forth in their car between their home in San Diego and Tijuana. They enjoyed rooms at one of the hotels and together visited the races, the saloons, the gambling places. The girls said they were having a wonderful time, and being with their father constantly they felt quite safe.

On the evening of Wednesday, February 3, the father and two girls left Mrs. Peteet sleeping at their hotel and went forth to see some more of the sights. They decided they would like to hear some Hawaiian music and visited a saloon operated by one Luis Amador. They sat at a table and ordered beer.

While they were there, a suave Mexican was introduced to them as the chief of police, Zenaido Llanos. He politely inquired if they were having a good time and asked Peteet if he might dance with Aubrey. The father graciously consented. The chief had a drink with them. Later the owner of the saloon joined the party at the table. Many eyes were directed at the handsome American girls.

And the Old Lady from Hell, too, noted them. They were so different from those women who walked the streets.

Something in the drinks—yes, that is the way. Something for the father—get him out of the way—something for the girls. The father drops off into a heavy sleep. The girls' eyes grow glazed, their bodies limp.

The Old Lady from Hell has a good laugh.

Peteet knew nothing until he woke up in his hotel. His wife told him that a man had brought him in at about 10 o'clock. She had left to look for the girls but had not found them. They had not come back to the hotel. They were alone somewhere in this terrible place.

Like a crazy man the father went forth to search for Clyde and Audrey. He had been drugged—and the girls must have been drugged, too. But daylight came and he did not find his daughters.

Peteet reported the matter to the police but he could get no assistance from that quarter. He hastened to the customs office—the girls had not been seen.

But before many hours had passed the family was together again—and the holiday was over. What Peteet heard from his daughters reduced him to the last extremity of despair—the girls had been drugged, abducted and assaulted.

Audrey said that she remembered nothing of what happened after she took the last drink until she woke up, partly undressed, in a rooming house. She was forced to remain there, she said, until 11 o'clock in the morning when she was put in a car and returned to her mother's rooms.

Clyde said that she regained consciousness in an automobile. With her was a man by the name of Louie. He had his hands over her mouth, she said. He dragged her into a hotel and into a room, where he attacked her. All the time she was calling for help, she said, but no one came. She was forced to take something in a glass to quiet her. When she woke up she found herself in a bed.

Clyde was found at this hotel, the Nacional, by her father and a policeman.

The hysterical family fled to the U. S. customs office and told their story to Inspector Fred Markley, in charge there. Markley promised them that there would be an investigation.

Then the Peteets returned home.

The father, determined to get into affidavit form as soon as possible every detail of the crime that had been committed, made and signed a statement of what he knew, and the girls did the same. Peteet turned these over to Capt. James M. Adamson, a detective who had spent much time in Tijuana investigating the death of a man from Atlanta.

The statements signed by the daughters each told what had happened to them. Audrey said, "I know I was assaulted by the chief of police."

When Adamson came to obtain these statements from the family, he found the father crying in the garage. In the house he found the mother and daughters weeping bitterly. Mrs. Peteet and Audrey were lying on a bed while Clyde was slumped dejectedly in a chair.

On the seventh of February, D. W. Coclogus, a business associate of Peteet, found a note from Peteet in the mailbox of his house. The note told him to call the police and beware of gas. Coclogus summoned a policeman and entered the house.

The entire family was found dead in the kitchen.

They were stretched, side by side, and fully clothed, upon bedding on the floor. The room was filled with gas. Seams of the windows and doors had been stopped with soap to prevent the fumes from escaping. All six burners of the kitchen range had been turned on.

Beside the father was an automatic pistol which he had apparently used as a threat to prevent any one from

NO. 27---"THE YELLOW CAT"---BY WILBUR DANIEL STEELE

AT LEAST once in my life I have had the good fortune to board a deserted vessel at sea. I say "good fortune" because it has left me the memory of a singular impression. I have felt a ghost of the same thing two or three times since then, when peeping through the doorway of an abandoned house.

I remember how it made me shiver, there in the full blaze of the sun, to hear her screaming in that stark fashion. We found a parrot in a cage; that was all. It wanted water. We gave it water and went to look things over. Everything was in order, and I seemed to hear the footsteps of hurrying warders that we had forced to leave in haste. She was tied up to a Hoboken dock, this Marionette, but she always seemed to belong to another world.

Such a thing happened in a dozen years, so that I am always peculiarly interested. I remember a clipping I found tucked away on the second page of an evening paper.

* * * *

"The first hint of another mystery of the sea came in today when the schooner Abbie Rose dropped anchor in the upper river, manned by a crew of one. It appears that the outbound freighter Mercury sighted the Abbie Rose off Block Island last Thursday, acting in a suspicious manner. A boat party sent aboard found the schooner in perfect order and condition, sailing under four lower sails, the top sails being pursed up to the mastheads but not stowed. With the exception of a yellow cat, the vessel was found to be utterly deserted. There were no evidences of disorder—the dishes were washed up, and even the stove in the galley was slightly warm to the touch. The ship's papers were missing, however.

"Indications being for fair weather, Captain Rohmer, of the Mercury, detailed two of his company to bring the find back to port, a distance of 115 miles. Stewart McCord, the only man available with a knowledge of the fore-and-aft rig, and a seaman named Bjornsen were sent aboard. McCord arrived this noon, after a heavy voyage of five days, reporting that Bjornsen had fallen overboard while shaking out the fore top sail. McCord himself showed evidence of the hardships he had passed through."

* * * *

Stewart McCord! Yes, Stewart McCord—I used to know this fellow, and had been quite chummy with him. I decided to see him and find out about this strange thing. It was strange that the mild weather we had had would be sufficient to shake a man out of a top—especially if he were a seagoing man.

It was hard at the time of night that I arrived at the river to make anything but a black blotch of the Abbie Rose. Of course, I could see that she was pot-bellied. And that McCord had not stowed his top sails. I could make them out, pursed at the mastheads and hanging down as far as the crosstrees like huge, overripe pears. Then I recollected that he had probably found them that way and left them.

When I arrived at the side of the ship in a little boat I could see the tip of a cigar on the farther rail. I called "McCord! McCord!"

"By gracious," he said, "I'm glad to see you, Ridgeway." He took my wrist and helped me aboard. "I had a boatman coming out to take this thing, but I guess he'll be along presently. Come on in the cabin and have a nip. Dead man's liquor."

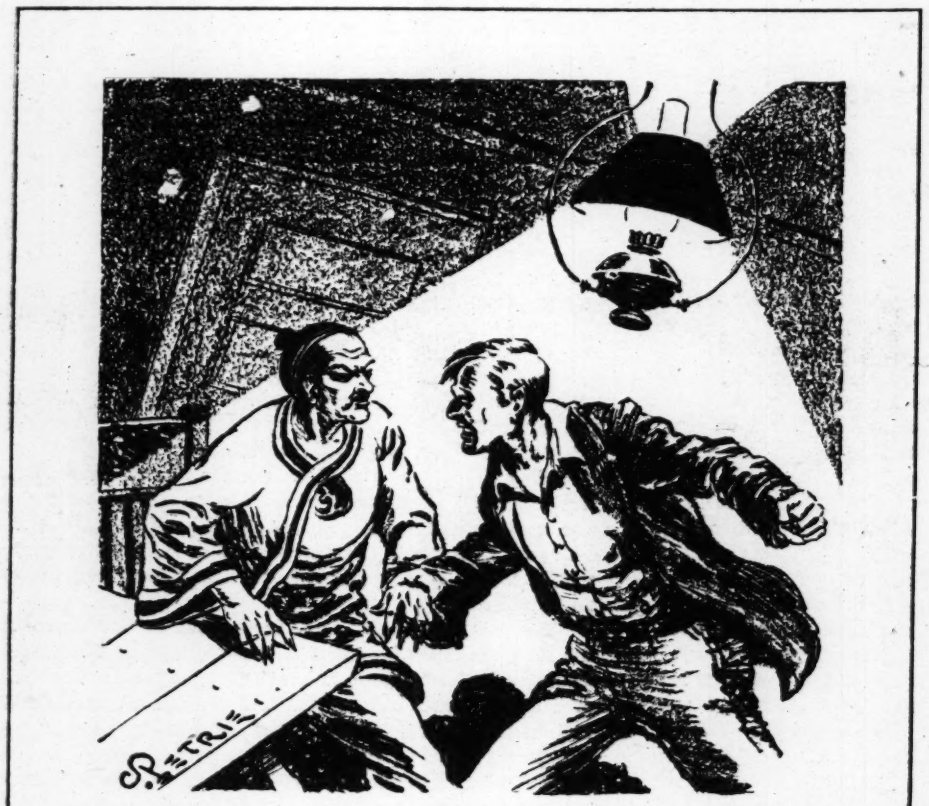
"Do you happen to know anything about this craft's personal history?" I asked, when we had settled ourselves and had taken a few drinks. "No!" He shook his head. "Well, I do—I helped pick up this thing fourteen years ago off the Virginia Capes and in the same condition. I can tell it—the same cabin, same galley—there you are!" I was yapping like a nerve-strung puppy.

"I am not surprised after what I have heard—after what I have seen. Here, let's have a nip."

"Yes, sir—" he mused, "after what I've seen and heard."

"What do you know? The papers said that you could find no records."

"I didn't find anything when we came aboard her. Nothing—but that



" 'Look here,' I says and fetched him a tap on the ear—" damned yellow cat, and she's vanished. . . . Last night I did find this—" (he drew a ledger from under a mattress.) "All it is is what the captain wrote—not a 'log'—more a diary. Lord, how he hates the Chinaman!"

"What Chinaman?"

"The cook—read there!"

From selected pages I read brief excerpts in a cramped scrawl:

August 2—"Anything can happen to a man at sea, even a funeral. In special to a Chinyman, who is of no account to social welfare, being a barbarian—"

"I'll get the mustard-coloured—Never can hear the — coming, in them carpet slippers. Turned around and found him standing right to my back this morning. Could have stuck a knife into me easy. 'Look here,' I says, and fetched him a tap on the ear—

August 3—"Bach comes to me, complaining that he's been watched—Says the devil has swiped his gun."

"Now, by God! this is the end. My gun's gone, too; right out from under lock and key. I been talking to Bach this morning. Not to let on, I had him in to clean my lamp. There's more than one way, he says"—

The rest was blank paper.

"Well, what do you think happened?"

"Well," answered McCord, "I have an idea the 'barbarian' got them, when it came to a pinch."

"And let the remains over the side, eh? There were none left, you remember." I was sarcastic, in view of his obvious carelessness in logic. "And the Chinaman—I suppose the ghosts came back and got him?"

"Ah, the yellow cat! You notice the captain didn't mention a yellow cat. It's an uncanny business—this transmigration of souls."

Personally I had enough of it. McCord's fingers were eternally on the bottle as he talked.

"Now, either come ashore with me or get in bed. You're drunk, McCord—you're so drunk that you don't know what you're talking about!"

"Ridgeway," he said slowly, "you are a fool if you can't see better than that. I'm sick, not drunk. I haven't slept for three nights—you landlubber, damn you! Can your damn logic and tell me where Bjornsen went."

"Listen!" He sat down and waved me into a chair. "It happened on the first night after we took this hellion. . . . We mugged up about 7 o'clock. There was a good deal of canned stuff in the galley, and Bjornsen wasn't a bad hand with the kettle. He took the wheel to stand till midnight, and I turned in. I could hear his boots wandering around over my head, and occasionally, in a block of moonlight, I could see the shadow of his head, as I lay in my bunk. He comes in and says, 'The breeze is going out, and I'm going up to the tops to see if we can't get it out.' . . . I heard him go out, and say 'Scat you!' to something."

"I drifted off to sleep. When I awoke it was past my time to take the wheel, but all was quiet. I went out and called, 'Bjornsen! Bjornsen!' "

McCord was really telling a story now.

"That was the first time I really went over the hulk, with a lantern, and I worked all over her. Not a sign, not a stain, not a scrap of clothing anywhere. I went aft and there sat the cat on the wheel-box, washing her face. She had a new scar on her head. She just drooped and began to purr and looked up at me with her moonlit eyes—I wanted to throw her over the side, but Bjornsen had kicked her—and he—I didn't want anything like that to happen to me!"

He could see that I was skeptical.

"Yes, on land, with your stout stone buildings, you're so damn sure. I felt that way in the sunshine again and I fed the cat and slept a while. And that night—I lay down to sleep, but I wasn't so sure. . . . I remember that I heard something fiddling around in the galley and I rolled over and lay on my left side. It must have been the cat, so I yelled 'Scat!'—and then, in that square of moonlight at the window—you'll laugh at what I saw."

"Well, there on the floor outside—on that little patch of moonlight, I saw the shadow of an animal—in a ball, with a tail quite long. . . . But how could a cat hang from the hatch above—like that?"

"I fished my gun out of the sack and started to slip one foot over the edge of the bunk, when that shadow turned around and there was the profile of a man's head upside down—a man's head with a tail of hair!"

"See?" he said, holding out a tiny flame above a splintered scar on the boards. "You wouldn't think a man would be fool enough to shoot at a shadow?"

"You have no idea the rumpus a gun makes in a box like this. I got outside, shivering like a dry leaf. There wasn't a whisper of sound in the world—just pale water floating past and the sails towering up like a pair of twittering ghosts."

"Then I saw the shadow over by the mainmast, and through the black powder smoke I saw a shade, blacker than smoke and big as a cow, it looked to me. It ducked behind the sweep of the main sail at that"—

He snapped his fingers.

"You're—if you're laughing, damn me, I'll"—

"I followed. And I fired at every shadow I wasn't sure of. As I rounded the thing up at the very stern—there she sat, washing her yellow face under the moon. I didn't make any bones about it. I put the gun against her head and fired. The gun clicked on an empty shell. She followed me aft and stuck her paw in the water pan I'd set out and looked at me and yawled. At sundown there'd been two quarts of water in that pan. A cat can't drink two quarts of water in"—

He broke off again. "What's the use? I knew you wouldn't believe when I started. You're too damn smug, Ridgeway, I can't shake you. When I tell you that I found that yellow thing snooping around the davits and three bights of the boatfall loosened out plain on deck—you grin. When I tell you she padded off forward and evaporated—flickered back to hell—and hasn't been seen since—why, you say I'm drunk—and I tell you there's not a cubic inch of this boat I haven't accounted for. I"—

The man got up and moved a step toward the companion.

A WELL advertised race, the Hibernian—of which singularly little is known. Though everywhere and more than articulate, the common summary is of comic and contentious men, as in the tale of the one wrecked on a cannibal isle, who, as he was dragged from the surf, demanded: "What's the government here?" adding quickly, "I'm agin it!"

A clever, obstreperous, witty, unreasonable, kindly illogical, charming, fanatic and, more than occasionally, treacherous folk, for whose paradoxical ways it is not strange the English have had no understanding.

During the World War news came to an officer of the Irish Guards that his men were in mutiny. Regulations prescribed proper action. But he was half Irish himself. He went to the men, sitting sullenly in their mysterious rage. And because he spoke them fair, they told him the truth . . . their bacon had been cold two mornings on end! Whereat (being half Irish) instead of having them shot he made apologies and a promise that such a thing would not happen again, if he had to cook their bacon himself. And so, smiling, they got on with the war.

The ex-German officer to whom I told this tale was torn between incredulity and horror. That German soldiers—or a German officer—could take part in anything so fantastic . . . his brain reeled at the thought!

For seven centuries the brain of the world has reeled at what the Irish could do when their emotions were stirred, their feelings hurt, their pride affronted.

Despite my name, I must confess that I have never been even mildly interested in the "Irish question." My ancestry was of too dim, Milesian a past, and I grew up with an active distaste for that noisily objectionable feature of the American scene, the "professional" Irishman. I had heard faint echoes of Fenian and Clan-na-Gael; and Dr. Cronin had been murdered not far from where I was born, in Chicago—though why, or by whom, I never inquired. My knowledge of Irish affairs was as limited as my interest.

What little contact I had with autochthonous Irishmen merely deepened a conviction of their essential drollery. I recall meeting one, a few years ago, when there was much talk of Sinn Fein, and asking him what the Irish, with their ambushes and bombings and assassination, really wanted. He answered that what they wanted, above all things, was—the Irish language! And to my protest that they could want nothing more useless, he agreed: "That is true. But, ah—'tis so beautiful!"

Small wonder the practical, realistic, humorous English could never understand such a people, with their passion for music and intricate rhyming, their irrelevant pugnacity, and with no sense of humor at all.

This statement, of course, will excite controversy, no myth being better established than that of Irish humor, despite the effort of no less an Irishman than Bernard Shaw, in "John Bull's Other Island," to dissipate it. He failed, since it is the common fate of Irishmen to have no one believe they mean what they say.

Because Irishmen are often funny—never, to the Anglo-Saxon, funnier than when they are most in earnest—people will believe they are humorous. But the Irish do not make jokes; they supply the material. Irish "jokes" are often but an awkward use of the English idiom, the Irish "bull," an obvious consequence of thinking in one tongue and speaking another. The fact is that the Irish are not a laughing race at all, but serious to the point of melancholy, as their music, that unerring index, shows.

Until recently I, like most Americans, considered the "Irish question" as one of strictly domestic British politics, the nationalistic aspirations of the Irish rather childish in this day of great agglomerations, to be viewed, at best, with tolerant amusement, and for which the long-suffering English merited the sympathy of the unprejudiced.

But now I have been to Ireland. And I come away with the singular feeling that an isolated fragment has fallen into relation with a vast historic whole, that what had seemed a trivial phase of British politics was really a part of the great Norman wave which engulfed England at the Battle of Hastings, reached the Irish shore a century later and has not yet altogether receded.

I must disclaim any pretense of having observed anything, being neither by taste nor temperament an "investigator." I merely journeyed over the land, my mind and my emotions sensitive to whatever impressions might be set upon them, ready to listen to bard or politician, poetry or statistics, and seeking, as the last thing desirable, to form an "opinion."

For that, one should have facts. But in that commodity the Irish are notably deficient. There are books innumerable dealing with Irish legend and Irish landscape; but the writers of books on Irish history and Irish affairs are more skilled in invective toward England—and each other—than in judicial presentation of truth. There may be writings that set forth the complicated tale of Erin with due regard for the fact that a question may have more than one side. I can only record that I was unable to find them.

Ireland is a land that quickly marks the stranger. And so, in setting down what I saw, I must begin with an Irishism, and state that the first important thing I did not see on leaving the boat at Rosslare, were signposts. In a labyrinth of winding lanes, and no one astir in the seeming-deserted villages, it was easy to credit the guide-book statement that during the last century the population of Ireland has been reduced by nearly one-half; and that had Ireland fared even as well as Austrian Poland under the Hapsburgs—not a notable example of benevolent government—her population to-day would be close to 20,000,000.

I sought the new Ireland, and the first sign-post encountered led to New Ross—which proved to be not a new city at all, but ancient when Caesar was in Gaul. But the sign itself was very new, lettered in Irish, with the English equivalent below—the new Ireland at last!

But everywhere were the stark and blackened ruins of the old—not all, as I thought at first, the work of the invader. The Irish had done their share—revolutionists annoyed by parliamentarians, Republicans put out with Free Staters, clan against clan, Geraldine against Ormond. Some were the work of Strongbow's Normans, some of the Danes, a great many, it was shocking to learn, of that industrious vandal, the Puritan, Morrough O'Brien—"Morrough of the Burnings," as he is affectionately remembered.

And a great many, victims of the most resolute destroyer of all, had merely fallen apart. Desolate, the unroofed homes of men, with the black, crumbling holes where windows once had been—desolate beyond the dissembling of green foliage and an opulence of flowers.

Not all of the ruins were of stone, nor all my relatives dead. At Dungarvan, stopping for what we call "gas" and the British Isles call "petrol," I overheard a passage of language between a Mrs. O'Flynn and a Mrs. O'Brien, in which the latter, who might have stepped from the stage of the Abbey Theater, her turns of phrase written for her by Synge himself, came off somewhat second-best.

She had been born an O'Brien, she said (and not, praise be to heaven, an O'Flynn!) and had married one: and though now a widow and the prey of "offers," she felt it too grand a name to lose The resolution was costly and life hard, and God with both hands would reward the charitable. My contribution to the cause would be acknowledged by a large catalog of the sainted, and my house and my journey would prosper

But her eloquence was cut short by the appearance of a new character—a Civic Guard, not at all picturesque, but spruce and clean and devastatingly efficient. His was the voice of the new Ireland; and he was not a policeman—that word, of unpleasant memories, has been suppressed.

Like Mussolini in Italy, the new Ireland is trying to restore the self-respect of a subject and degenerating people; and the whine of the beggar is not often to be heard. The few encountered were women, usually with babies. The only male was a flaxen-haired lad of ten, who sidled up at a Galway street fair, intimating softly that it was "only tuppence for the flying horses." Him we saw later, his curls peeping over the gaming table, his lips twitching, busy at "pitch-and-toss." And the next morning we found he had raised his stake to two shillings!

When the Irish beg, it is from circumstance and not temperament They would rather, I think, sandbag the stranger than beg from him. They are a proud folk, for all their tatters and broken shoes, and the women with their rusty black shawls hooding wind-seamed, sternly handsome faces—so perversely proud they will not confess their poverty by sending their children to the free schools of the renascence

Brusque in their ways and speech, with the wariness of wild creatures, they take ill to any sign of patronage. Delicate, indeed, is the task of complaint, and nothing so futile as anger. Not for an instant do they forget their ancient state. There are times when one feels that they do not forget it often enough.

Appalling, the filth in which they live—but deceptive. For centuries any show of well being meant an unwelcome prominence in the eyes of landlord and government. As Dean Swift said to an Englishwoman who had spoken well of the Irish climate: "Don't mention it at home, I beg. They'll tax us for it." Instinctively, as a sort of protective coloration, they still cling to drab raiment.

One cannot journey through that land without the heart being touched with sadness—through gray and dirty towns, filled with gray and dirty people, past crumbling castles, brooding under their ivy in a drowsy melancholy like broken old men mumbling of their vanished youth; and shattered churches, remote and pathetic in their roadless meadows. And one comes gratefully, at last, to Killarney, to lie upon the storied rocks beside the still black water—of polished ebony but for the occasional rise of a trout—with not a sound to mar the stillness, not a light to pierce the purples of the shadowed shore! and muse and ponder on the mad perplexities of men.

From Limerick, with a properly respectful visit to the shrine of an especially royal and ancient ancestor, it was a jump of eight centuries in as many minutes to the vast electrical project at Ardnacrusha, where a German engineering firm is harnessing the Shannon to supply light and power for the whole Green Isle.

A more impressive thing, this, than all the fustian of politicians. The old swords are rusted away, the old fortresses in dust. The fairies of the Firbolgs have vanished and new ones, of which the mightiest is the Kilowatt, are come to take their places. The Irish, despite their protests, still believe in fairies, and their dream is of a rural industrialism, the cabins on the rocky hillsides and in peat bogs linked together with copper threads of light, power and communication. Toward this the peasant pays his taxes, if not gladly, with less reluctance than Irish peasants ever paid taxes before. And so, on to Galway.

In a thousand miles of Ireland I saw no drunken person—this in the land which invented whisky! As one old farmer said, there are children now who have never seen a drunken person. Quietly, by heavy taxation and the regulation of drinking hours, the new Ireland is becoming a land of sobriety, and the wail of the publican is loud.

It is a crime, now, to make poteen. Whereat a tale. An old moonshiner, with two barrels of it on hand, saw the Civic Guards coming to his cottage. "We're in for it!" he cried in panic to his wife. Quickly he laid a plank between the barrels, his wife upon it, and a sheet over her. He was in tears when the guards arrived. "The fever that's goin' 'round!" he sobbed, "an' me wife dead of it." The guards hastily withdrew. He was saved.

I do not quite believe that tale. From what I saw of the guards, I do not think they would be so easily eluded.

And so, at last, from the bleak, rock-scattered lands of the west, with the tragic little farms walled off from each other, we made our way to Dublin, where sits the Dail (pronounced Dawl). Having seen the marvelously wrought "potato rings" and the golden claddaghs on the gnarled fingers of the Galway peasantry, it was no surprise to find this meeting place of what one would expect to be the most turbulent of assemblies, done in mahogany and blue leather and dull silver, with soft-toned aquarelles of old Dublin on the walls, a thick blue carpet under foot—and not a spittoon in sight!

The Senate was a surprise—no fervid oratory there, no heat; in its place a rather stiff decorum. It was as passionless as a civil court, as dull as a board meeting—rhetoric conspicuously absent.

On the logical benches sat Mr. Jameson, of the distilling family, and Mr. Guinness, of the brewers—bankers, both. Behind them were Sir Richard Keane, some time financial expert of the British government, and Sir Bryan Mahon, once commander of the British forces in Ireland. Presiding was Lord Glenavy, K. C. Aristocratic, these men, with Tory leanings, if not sympathies; and named by the British. Opposed were the elected Irish—four of them women—labor men, farmers, intellectuals, poets. W. B. Yeats was impressive, with his lean face and gray locks, and though he listened earnestly to the discussion I felt sure he understood it no better than I did.

Even if trade were booming, they say, and industries flourishing—which they are not, with exports approaching 50 per cent of imports, with much unemployment and thousands on the dole—the fact remains that England's King still has a representative in Phoenix Park. The Irish question, they insist, can never be settled until the Irish settle it in their own way. The present settlement was made under pressure and duress. Neither the Free State constitution nor the treaty is binding.

Whatever may be said of Irish race consciousness, in praise or disapproval, it cannot be denied that it has extraordinary vitality, having persisted despite the most patient and ingenious efforts to crush and destroy it.

My last step in Ireland was to purchase a ticket for what I called Kingstown, and was curtly informed that "the spot where a drunken King of England first set foot on Irish soil" was now Dun Laoghaire again.

It seems a little absurd to find all the place names changed back to the Irish originals. But these names are descriptive. With the change goes inquiry into the historic events that gave the names. And so the humble folk of Smithtown discover that they are living on the spot where Conn of the Hundred Battles personally did in a thousand Norman knights. Others, along the line of the great retreat of the O'Sullivan, discover in their own history an epic beside which the March of the Ten Thousand Greeks pales in color.

Meanwhile, peace is not yet, and the struggle of Celt and Northman goes on, the present situation but another of their many truces. Irish governments subsist only on the frail alliance of minority groups, seeking to establish order by abrogation of civil rights and instruments as potentially oppressive as any the invader ever used. The English utter minatory growls. They will concede what they call a dominion status—and no more. The Irish deny the English right to make any concessions whatsoever.

The Irish demand autonomy, to shed their rags and tatters, bring back the silver and scarlet to the ancient shield and run steam-rollers, play the harp or slaughter each other, as most amuses them.

transferred as corps engineer for the Fifth corps, then commanded by Major General Charles P. Summerall, and participated in the final drive of that corps toward Metz and Sedan, which was stopped by the armistice.

For his service in France he received the distinguished service medal and was given a citation by the Fifth Corps for participation in the offensive from November 1 to 11, 1918.

After the World war he returned to Washington and was on duty at the war department in connection with the settlement of war claims. In 1921 he was appointed district engineer, with headquarters at Nashville, Tenn., and the following year was appointed assistant commandant of the Engineer School at Fort Humphrey, Va. His last service before coming here was as district engineer at Galveston, Tex.

The post of engineer of maintenance is one of the highest to which any army engineer office can be named. According to precedent the engineer of maintenance is appointed governor of the Panama Canal after four years of service, and unless the custom is changed Colonel Schley is expected to succeed Governor Burgess. Also during times when the governor is absent from his duties, the engineer of maintenance always is named as acting governor.

Few people realize the vast amount of labor connected with the operation and maintenance of the Panama Canal. It is similar in many respects to a corporation doing an annual business of more than $50,000,000. It is this gigantic business enterprise which Colonel Schley must supervise during his four years as engineer of maintenance. An important part of his work will be general supervisory work connected with the proposed Alhajuela dam, which will cost $10,000,000 or more and which will furnish the canal with 50 per cent more water for locking ships through.

The highest officer of the Panama Canal is Governor Harry Burgess, a native of Starkville, Miss. He has just completed a four-year term as engineer of maintenance. Governor Burgess also has a distinguished record with the engineer corps of the army, and has served on many important posts during his army career. He is very popular with both Canal Zone and Panama people and his appointment as governor was hailed by both people as being highly satisfactory.

"Do you hear?" He hesitated. "Somebody. Listen."

I thought the man was so keyed up that—and then of a sudden there was a sound—the dying rumor of a ripple somewhere in the outside darkness, as though an object had been let into the water with extreme care.

"You heard?"

I felt sick. "My God, Ridgeway, why don't we get out!" I dashed out. "There's nothing." I tried to be calm.

"Over there," he muttered, jerking his head toward the shore lights. "Something swimming."

I moved to the corner of the house and listened.

"Ridgeway, look behind you!"

That voice brought the sweat stinging to my pores.

A cat sat there on the hatch, expressionless and immobile in the gloom. We stared.

"I think she wants something to eat," I said to McCord.

He lit a lantern and went into the galley. Returning with a chunk of salt beef, he threw it to her. She started to tear it, when she stopped and listened.

"Quick! She has kittens somewhere. When she starts now"—

She had turned and dashed for the ladder. Then she was off in the shadows forward.

"Look aloft, man," I said, when we could not find her. And there our quarry was, almost to the crosstrees. McCord started up the mast after her. The clear star of his lantern shot this way and that.

At last he drew out his head. "All right—they're here. Head! There below!"

I ducked and something spanked on the planking. I picked it up—a slipper covered with some woven straw. McCord soon reappeared. Under his left arm he hugged a curious assortment of papers, a brace of revolvers, a gray kimono and a soiled apron.

"Well," he said when he had come to the deck, "I feel like a man who has gone to hell and has come back again. . . . I almost believed that about the cat."

He looked toward the wharf. "I am sort of glad he got away. He's probably over there now, shivering and scared to death. Took the ship's papers up there when we came on deck. I guess he drank the water."

He smiled: "The mystery of it all that a man like me who had been to sea all his life could sail around with a man bundled up in his top for three days and never know it."

"And Bjornsen—he must have caught it all in a bunch up there"—

Next Week—"The Oblong Box," by Edgar Allan Poe—a mystery story written in the style that is so peculiarly Poe's.

TWO FORCES.

Two forces fight within the souls
Of mortals on this earth;
Two forces with different goals,
One, base—and one of worth.

That "inner voice" will ever say,
"To thine own self be true."
The other points a pleasant way,
The baser things to do.

The battle rages ever on,
Until death takes its toll;
When life's last bit of breath is gone,
One force will reach its goal.

The Vogue of Comfort

Along With the Trend Toward Comfort Come Many Cushions and Plenty of Well-Placed Footstools. They Make Good Christmas Gifts, Because They Are Decorative and Because They Contribute Greatly to the Fine Art of Lounging

BY MARGARET FLEMING

PILLOWS and stools have come into their own once more. Not, of course, the pillows that made hideous the parlors and "dens" of the naughty '90s, but pillows that express in their designs the frank, direct and somewhat mathematical spirit of our modern times, as well as those which revive—with a sincerity which the '90s never knew—the best designs of other epochs of decoration.

To the annual gift query which every Christmas brings, pillows and stools are a happy answer. They can be bought in a wide variety of styles—beautiful, useful, practical, humorous, whimsical—and, of course, there is almost no style which can be bought which cannot also be made by the nimble fingered, thus, at one master stroke, saving money and clearing out that lower bureau drawer where leftover scraps of silk and chintz accumulate. And there is one more point in their favor: Pillows and stools have no sex. A discreetly chosen pillow may be an ideal gift for a man's room whether that room is in a real home, a bachelor apartment, a boarding house, or even a club. In fact, it may be more welcome to the man who hasn't a home than to the one who has, because it adds the little touch of comfort and personality without which "furnished" quarters are often so cheerless.

With the present great popularity of crewel work, crewel cushions have naturally come to the fore, and make handsome and appropriate gifts for many types of interiors. Two examples are shown in one of the groups on this page.

The hunting scene pillow, which is done on linen twill, is one of a series of four, and would make a beautiful present for a sportsman's room. Also appropriate for a man are the two other pillows shown in the same picture, one of a three-masted schooner, embroidered in colored mercerized linen thread on linen, and the wire-haired fox terrier, embroiderd in wool on linen. These dog pillows are particularly interesting. They are made after the manner of a hooked rug, the wool pulled through and then trimmed to follow the shape of the dog's body. Simpler dog pillows, showing puppies embroidered flat on a linen background, may also be bought. Both types come in black and white, and it must be confessed that the little black Scotties are more practical than the white terriers.

Even more appropriate as a gift for a man are leather pillows and hassocks, which may be bought in many shapes and color combinations. Two styles are illustrated in the middle of this page. The hassock is in black and tan. The square pillow next to it is wedge-shaped, to go at the driver's back in an automobile. It has a handle and a zipper opening at the top, so that the cushion may be removed and the cover used as a bag. In the same picture is another pillow, also appropriate for a man's room, of Egyptian applique in colors on linen, showing some kind of mythical beast taking his ease under a palm, with the pyramids for a background.

Gifts for the Early American enthusiast — a simple, appropriate footstool and a patchwork pillow made from a bandana

The square leather pillow on the floor (right) is wedge-shaped to go at the driver's back in an automobile. It has a handle and a zipper opening at the top, so that the cushion may be taken out and the cover used as a bag

Another illustration on this page carries gift suggestions for the friend who is an Early American enthusiast. The little wooden footstool is simple and appropriate, and the pillow is a patchwork design made from a bandanna.

Of novelty cushions there are no end. Several shops are showing round pillows covered with embroidery in colored raffia, especially appropriate for use on a porch or summer house, but probably more novel than practical. Novel as well as practical, however, are cushions covered with oilcloth, for breakfast room, nursery, automobile, porch, summer house, or motorboat. In covering cushions, it is best not to use the old-fashioned, slick-finished oilcloth, although it comes in many fascinating shades, because it is likely to crack under the constant rumpling. This material may now be bought in many textures, including good imitations of moire silk, leather and satin damask. The new designs give the effect of calico in stripes and dots, of chinz in flowered figures, and of Italian satin damask.

Nursery gift pillows may be effectively covered with either oilcloth or felt, and ornamented with figures of animals in contrasting colors, appliqued on a solid background.

Twin sister to the cushion is the stool, which is also increasing in popularity. Stools fall into three classes, the tabouret de duchesse, or backless chair, the footstool, and the hassock, which is really only a large stuffed pillow. The first of this group derives its name from the fact that at the courts of the later French kings no one was allowed to sit in an arm chair in the presence of royalty except royalty itself, and only those ladies of very high rank, such as duchesses and princesses of the blood, were alolwed to sit even on stools.

The most popular gift stool, however, is the footstool, which probably owes its origin, in part at least, to draughty floors. Very attractive gift stools are the small round, or oblong ones upholstered in petit point; a novel idea would be to cover one of these with some sort of flat fur, such as pony or calfskin, tacking it on with a row of matching upholsterer's tacks.

The most practical hassocks are covered. Others are clothed in plush, and still others, for the boudoir, in satin.

In covering pillows, with any washable or cleanable material, it is always worth while to take the extra trouble to make them easily removable, by fastening the fourth side with hooks and eyes instead of sewing it up. This takes a good deal of effort to accomplish tidily, but makes a gift of pillows far more acceptable.

The Good Red Bricks

"That's it. That's why I'm proud of you."

He kissed her with that intensity of hungry need which always melted her into burning desire to sacrifice anything, everything in her power for him. "If I'm any good at all," he told her, "it's because of you. If it weren't for you, dear, I'd be—well, like Harry, I suppose."

"You're good on your own account. No one's good because of some one else."

"If you hadn't stuck to me I'd have gone to the devil." All the flame of his triumph seemed to have burned out in the little time they had been out of the crowd. Once more he was the wistful boy of drifting hopes and fears.

"You stick to me and I won't let you go to him," she laughed tremulously, and held close to him as he unlocked the door. In the darkness of the hall he kissed her again. "You're all the heaven I want," he said.

The emoluments of victory, telegrams and letters of congratulation, one of them from Terry Gorman, parties, headlines, interviews, offers from athletic clubs, negotations with promoters, fell away before the real reward of more work when Stebbins announced that Joe would fight Goodwin six weeks later. Joe, just beginning to find the pleasures and gay amusements which the sporting world hold out with both hands to its winners, rebelled against the manager's time arrangement. "It's too soon," he made protest. "You cut out the parties," Mack bade him, "and keep your nose to the grindstone. You see that he does," he told Sally.

"I'll try," she said doubtfully, hating to deny Joe the joys of success. Living in the big brick house of Tom Burt's choosing wasn't any great joy for him, she saw with a clearness which made her see also the present impossibility of leaving it. Joe had made big money in winning from Walford, but there were so many bills to pay, so many obligations to be met with it that most of it was already gone. Her mother, too, opposed her going, although she let them alone in everything else, and when Sally once mentioned moving to Dr. Damon he turned on her sharply. "You stay right where you are," he said.

"Are you worried about my mother?" she asked him.

"Not exactly worried, but there's no need of you leaving her now. You'll be sorry if you do." Too unschooled in the symptoms of physical breakdown to see what Fred Damon saw in the dimming of Nan's spirit, the slowing of her gay bravado, the girl saw in the change only the inevitable toll of the years. She yearned, though, to take from her mother's shoulders some of their burdens, begging her to let her go in her stead to see her father; but, "He doesn't want you to see him there," Nan said, and Sally could only ease the pack by assuming the heavier end of running the house.

More than anything else the need of ready money bound her to her work with Gene Gregg. She had never wanted for herself the career that Nan had planned for her. She had taken and held the West Town job as shield against the first high winds of poverty. She had made good on it not from vaulting ambition, but because she was gay, and lovely, and sweet, and sad, as the mood or the song demanded, but always she was high feather in the cap. It was for that abounding vitality, that unfailing quality of kinship to the crowd, that Gregg wanted her for his new venture.

"I'm gambling on Chicago," he told her. "I'm staking everything I've got on the idea that the city's big enough to keep up a house like this. There's no reason why it's not. This neighborhood keeps the West Town. We've fifty neighborhoods to draw from if we go over the river. I believe in pictures, too. They're going to be something yet. They're not much now, but they're getting better with every fellow who plunges into the game. That's the ticket, Sally, you, and the pictures, and Chicago. I'm betting on the three of you."

He was playing her accompaniments at the West Town since Violet, furious at his refusal to take her to the Casino, had quit the job. She had gone with her mother on the cheap vaudeville circuit of Mrs. Caine's intermittent tours, leaving the boarding house to servants who mismanaged it so badly that Gregg had already left, and the ball players and Pat Mangan were threatening to go. Released of her impeding lack of cooperation, as well as of her espionage, Sally sang with new zest, and rehearsed with a surety which delighted Gregg. "We'll put it over, sister," he vowed, but the coming of a new anxiety into her life shook her surety.

She could not have said when Joe began to drink, although, looking backward when she first realized the fact, she saw that nothing but liquor could account for some of his moods after his fight with the Australian. By turns he had been too excited, too ugly, too convivial, but it was not until the night when he staggered in, wild-eyed, raging against Stebbins for having pulled him away from the Sherman house bar, that she had to recognize the reason for his conduct. "He can't win, if this keeps up," Stebbins passed the problem to her. "You'll have to hold him straight."

Had she known, as she did long afterward, when the knowledge was of no use to her, that it was Joe's young fear of defeat which drove him to the will-o'-the-wisp encouragement of drink, she might have taken his dereliction more philosophically, although Sally Gates was never a philosopher. Young, forceful, deeply in love, she could not seek the fundamental reason for fault in Joe, but thought to uproot it by anger, by imploring, by raillery, by everything but realization of his pathetic need of belief in himself. When he sobered enough to listen they plunged into their first real quarrel, a cruel, bitter war of words that darkened the world for them both. For days they went without speaking to each other, while Nan held to impartial ignoring of the situation. Then, with the suddenness of a rainbow, peace came to them. They kissed between sobbing promises that they would never again hurt each other, and dove back into the same troubled waters.

Two weeks afterward he fell from sight. With Stebbins roaring, with sporting writers making inquiries, with messengers from the Godwin camp hinting at treachery, she set out on his trail. It was high, wide and handsome, as broad as the town. On its course she learned the depths of his weakness. Wine and women—wine and women! Standing in a midnight of gusty winds at the corner of Twenty-second and Federal streets, while Pat Mangan searched the resorts of the district, following a rumor that he had been seen going into one of them, Sally touched the nadir of despair. "I can't go on," she moaned. "O, God, You can't want me to stay with him!" But when they found him next day in Mercy hospital, cut and bleeding from a barroom battle, she only sighed in the utter futility of trying to make him understand how deep had been the hell of her worry for him. "I'll go straight, Sally," he said contritely, his eyes beseeching her forgiveness. "Only stand by me and I'll come out all right!"

"I'm standing," she said with ashen lips.

He braced after that, pulling himself up by the bootstraps of determination to the rigors of training, with Dr. Damon scowling over his heart, and Pat Mangan watching him like a terrier at a rat hole. "I won't fail you," he promised Sally.

Had it not been for the amazing resiliency of her hopefulness she would have discounted his promises, but with the rebound of youth she thrust from her thoughts memory of those fearsome nights and wearing days.

Without conscious realization of having lifted the load she was doing the work of three; sweeping, dusting, cooking, making Nan's clothes and her own, singing at the West Town, and practicing for the opening of the Casino, managing her tasks with gay insouciance. Sometimes in the shops she met Joe's mother, and tried to break through the icy glaze of the older woman's resentment. "It isn't half as bad for Joe to marry me as it was for Harry to go around with Cora Gorman," she reasoned angrily, "and she never fought that until the harm was done." She tried to find justification for her mother-in-law's attitude, though, when May Temple, in loyal friendliness, vented her opinion. "Maybe I'd feel the same way if I lost Joe to some one," she said.

"That's different," May declared, "mothers must expect to lose their sons."

"Wives lose their husbands, too."

"It's their own fault if they do."

"Not always. What do you know about it?"

"Just this," May said, "if I married a man, God, or woman or devil couldn't get him away from me."

"I believe you," Sally laughed, but her laughter went down as May said, with apparent inconsequence, "Violet's home." She tried to shrug off the sudden annoyance that May's bracketing of the girl's return with talk of marital fidelity aroused in her, but remembrance of Violet's loitering with Joe down the dusk of the street would not leave her. It persisted even when Violet, with apparent determination to ignor etheir quarrel over the Casino engagement, came in one morning as she practiced, and ran higher when the girl, with an indifference too studied to be real, asked of Joe's chances of success. "Is he going to win?" she asked Sally, her eyes narrowed, as always when she sought something for her own advantage.

"Of course." She threw defiance into the assertion. "Why?"

"O, nothing." Her eyes traversed the space of the old room, then came back to Sally. "I met Terry Gorman in Denver. He was asking for you."

"Was he?"

"He said he's never going to live in the same house with Cora."

"I suppose not, but his father forgave her."

"They're in Paris now. They won't be home before next year. Terry's coming back soon." Against Sally's indifference she took aim, shooting at the bull's eye: "Terry's crazy about you," she told her.

Many a community throughout the United States has been oddly puzzled to see one or more of its members quickly reduce from a state of awkward obesity to normal weight with a trim, youthful figure.

"Am Feeling Fine"

In many cases, the change has come so rapidly, yet without any apparent reason, that the result has been the subject of common gossip. What have these men and women done? How did they accomplish this miracle and still manage to keep themselves in robust health?

The answer is given here. If you are overweight and if you seem unable to remedy the condition, do what these thousands of others have done. You will be amazed and delighted with the results.

No one—man or woman—need hesitate to use the F. J. Kellogg Treatment if their aim is to reduce. No tedious exercising with its resultant discomfort—no denying yourself the foods you crave and enjoy. Because of the surprising results obtained, and the fact that reduction of weight is in most cases permanent, this sane, simple treatment is fast supplanting all rigorous and unpleasant methods.

But do not take our word for it. Send for your free trial package, mailed in plain sealed wrapper. We want every fat person to test the F. J. Kellogg Treatment. That's what this coupon is for. Use it—Now!

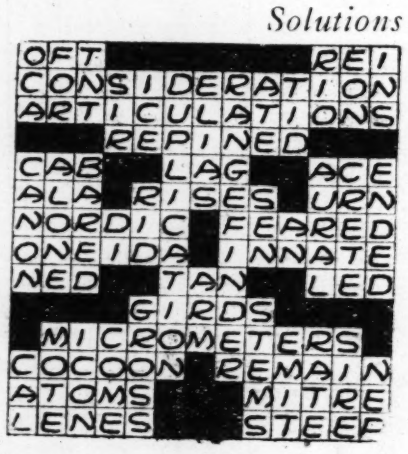
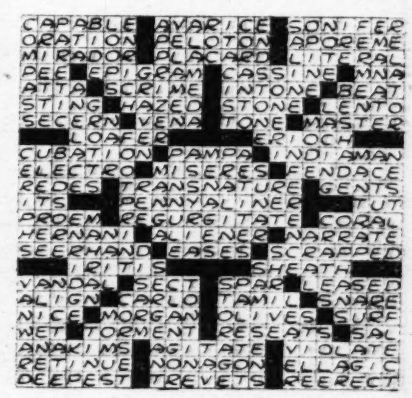
Solutions of Last Week's Puzzles





Things New and Old About the Bible

VERY many are perplexed about the Biblical difficulties. Much confusion still prevails through an effort to give entire originality, not only to the religious ideas of the Bible, but an entire originality to the scientific and historic frame-work.

Peters, a cautious and conservative archaeologist in his "Bible and Spade" writes:

"The cosmogomy of Babylon became the cosmogomy of Palestine. It is wonderful how out of the puerile, gross fancies of the primitive times, those which appear in the myth and legend of kindred peoples, the Hebrew thinkers developed so sane, so lofty, so spiritual a system of cosmogomy and theology. This is the glory of the Bible." Why should religious people who hold to a religion preeminent in ethical quality and insight fail in devotion to the truth? It was not the purpose of divine inspiration to enable Biblical writers to forecast the discoveries of modern science. Nothing will be gained for the faith, but much will be lost by making false and exaggerated claims.

There are some people who have no difficulty as regards the Bible. They accept everything without question. There are others who have no difficulty—they reject the Bible with some sense of relief. There is a third class more thoughtful than either of these. They are troubled with difficulties. It is to the third class that this discussion is directed.

There are five distinct kinds of difficulties: Scientific, historical, literary, moral and philosophical.

First to be considered are the scientific difficulties.

The first chapters of Genesis have been a theological battle ground for ages.

When Copernicus made the discovery that the sun is the center of our solar system, and that the earth moves around the sun, the church raged furiously. This panic was only equaled by that which came later when Darwin came into conflict with the Mosaic account of creation.

There is the contrast between Biblical and modern science.

The Bible account of the creation of the earth before sun and stars is not in accord with astronomy and the nebular hypothesis.

The Bible gives the creation of fishes and birds at the same time, while according to science fishes appeared long before birds.

The Bible account of the creation of trees and plants before the sun is not in accord with geology.

The Bible account of the creation of birds before reptiles, creeping things, is not in accord with geology.

The Bible account of the separate creation of different species is not in accord with science.

According to the Genesis account, each new form of life was a special creation of God.

According to science, all sorts of intermediate forms are found between species so that it is probable that the higher have been developed by minute variations out of the lower. Every species is from a pre-existing closely allied species.

The Bible account of the method of the creation of man is not in agreement with science.

According to both creation accounts of Genesis, the appearance of man upon earth is due to a special and sudden act of creation on the part of God.

Science is at variance with the Bible as to the primitive condition of man. It is only fair to state, however, that the traditional belief has gone beyond the Bible in idealizing the character and condition of the first man. It has been popularly supposed that the first man was a being of developed intellectual capacity; perfect in the entire range of his faculties, a being so gifted that the greatest and ablest of those who have lived subsequently have been described as the "rags" and "ruins" of Adam. This view has been popularized by the great poem of Milton. A "golden age" during which the earth yielded her products freely, and man lived a life of ideal happiness unalloyed by care or sin or toil or sorrow, was pictured by the ancient nations. Human sin has embittered toil, but we are not to suppose that the sin of Adam affected directly the physical productivity of the earth. The evidence or archaeology, geology, biology and allied sciences points to the conclusion that man so far from having begun his existence on the earth amid happy surroundings, has slowly emerged from a state of savagery, in which he was externally at least, little removed from the brute creation.

Science does not support the Biblical account of the origin of woman. This account is an allegory, using a significant figure to set forth the relation of the sexes to each other, the dependence of woman upon man and her close relationship to him. The woman is formed out of man's side, hence it is the wife's natural duty to be at hand ready at all times to be a help to her husband, and it is the husband's natural duty ever to cherish and defend his wife as part of his own self.

Science is not in agreement with the notion of the original herbiforous diet of animals and man. Common tradition supposes that both man and animals at first subsisted entirely on vegetable food. It appears conclusive from the evidence of palaeoutology that carniverous animals existed upon the earth long before the appearance of man, and that they preyed upon one another as the same species of their successors do now.

The Bible and science do not agree as to the long life of early man. Longevity, such as is ascribed to the patriarchs is physiologically incompatible with the structure of the human body. The tradition of the Israelites like the tradition of other races in dealing with personages living in prehistoric times assigned to them abnormally protracted lives. The evidence of science precludes the possibility of such figures being literally correct.

What Has Happened to Justice?

withdrawing from their pact. The gun had not been fired.

"I and my family are of the best southern blood. Death always was preferred to dishonor by our women. We are wiping it out tonight. Push this case and, if you can, have the government avenge our wrongs. We will appreciate it were we go, maybe."

The Old Lady from Hell, for all her cruelty, was startled. She was not used to this sort of climax. Many girls had been abducted and sold into white slavery, but it had always been done quietly. Here was something calculated to arouse the people of the United States. Perhaps justice would make things embarrassing.

Chief of Police Ilanos, Luis Amador and five others were arrested in connection with the affair. It was announced that they would be very sternly deal with. Gov. Gen. Abelards Rodriquez stated that the whole matter would be thoroughly investigated and the guilty ones punished. It was said that the guilty ones would very likely face a firing squad.

Secretary of State Kellogg inquired about the matter, and later expressed himself as satisfied with the way the inquiry was being pushed.

On the twelfth of February an inquest was held, and the jury returned a verdict of death by a suicide pact caused by grief and remorse over the fact that the daughters had been assaulted. The jury decided that Llanos and Amador had been guilty, and ordered the seven prisoners to be held for trial.

One of the witnesses at the inquest was Rudolph Bachman, formerly an employee at the Oakland saloon, where the supposedly drugged drinks were served. Bachman said he was acquainted with both Llanos and Amador, that he had witnessed everything that took place in the saloon, and substantiated the story that the girls had been abducted by the police chief and the saloon keeper.

Bachman said he saw Amador take one of the girls into a house and he assumed that Llanos had taken the other.

After the inquest the police announced that the prisoners would be tried at the earliest possible moment. President Calles of Mexico ordered Mayor Frederico Pelacio of Tijuana to close all the dives in town, and the United States government closed the border at 6 p. m. daily, three hours earlier than had been the practice.

The Old Lady from Hell cursed disgustedly and bided her time.

Later in February three of the seven arrested in connection with the affair were released and on June 27th the other four—Llanos, Amador, and two bartenders—were placed on trial before Federal Judge Urias in the municipal hall of Tijuana. They were charged not with abduction or kidnaping, but with attacking the two girls.

From the outset of the trial it was apparent that all the defendants would be acquitted. Numerous witnesses for the defense—bartenders, saloon habitues, prostitutes, and others—attacked the characters of the Peteet girls. A perfect deluge of evidence, calculated to show that the young women had been indiscreet, that they had gone willingly with the men, was allowed to go into the record.

The prosecution attorneys made little effort to impeach this testimony.

So the defendants were acquitted. And the Old Lady from Hell had another good laugh. Tijuana celebrated boisterously.

Chief Llanos beat his case, but the affair did have its domestic complications for him. His wife, who had separated from him after the Peteet tragedy, filed suit for divorce the following September, asserting that her husband had been guilty of all the charges filed against him in connection with the Peteet case. In November the former chief was banished from Lower California for attempting to murder his wife.

Thus did Mexico justice perform in this extraordinary case. How many other abductions have accurred there will probably never be known. The Peteet case was one that happened to become public.

And when all is said and done, perhaps the Old Lady from Hell is just as glad that this did become public. From her viewpoint, it's good business.

Pirates Ahoy!

leys were theirs, Portundo was dead, and the one remaining galley was fleeing under full sail for Spain.

This was another great victory for the Algerines. Hare Youdeen celebrated it by launching a stormy attack upon the Penon, or Spanish fortress overlooking Algiers. After fourteen days of cannonading with guns taken from the Spanish galleys, the thick walls were breached, and the Algerines entered, putting every Spaniard to the sword.

Now began the building of the great mole, to protect corsair fleets from such storms as had destroyed Moncada's ships and many others. Thousands of Christian slaves were available for the work, and the sooner some hundreds of them were worked to death, the better for the national larder of the pirate empire.

So the great stones of the Spanish fortress were removed, one by one, and transported by man-power to the site of the mole, and there laid down under direction of Moorish engineers. Masonry from the Penon was supplemented by stone hewn from the nearest quarries and transported by sweating, dying Christians. The work went on until the noble mole was finished, and there the wall still stands, testifying to the barbarism and enterprise of a dark day that is happily gone forever.

Sunday Health Talks

——By——
William Brady, M. D.

MANY correspondents send in quotations or clippings bearing on the subjects of their letters. Naturally a good share of these clippings or quotations contain views on the "cold" question that are not in accord with my own. I take it the war still goes on, yet it is not quite fair to assume that because desultory firing is faintly audible in the far places my teachings about "colds" must be all wrong.

One clipping sent in by a large number of readers, some of 'em anonymously, refers to a "study" made by the New York ventilation commission. Having pursued some of the voluminous "reports" of this commission I am entitled to a wry smile here. It seems the experts representing the commission observed that in a country school room the prevalence of "colds" was greatest when the outdoor temperature was lowest; that "colds" increased in a rainy or snowy week and this increased prevalence continued for a week after the snow or rain, though not in the springtime, only in the winter time. Why not in the springtime remains a dark mystery. More than this, the experts of the commission concluded from this "study" that pupils are justified in complaining about cold floors, cold seats near windows, and drafts. At the same time the commission's experts conclude that there is equal justification for complaints of other pupils about hot stuffy air. So that one gathers the report will please everybody.

My reaction to such items is characteristic, I suppose. Whatever "colds" may be, I deny that country children have 'em more than city children do. If you are willing to define a "cold" before we begin the quarrel, I may agree that country children have it more frequently than city children do, for we know that certain respiratory infections, notably diphtheria, are more prevalent among country children than among city children (per thousand children,) and we assume—the assumption is now borne out by the Schick test—that city children, being more crowded together and therefore more frequently exposed to diphtheria, acquire a certain degree of natural immunity which country children do not have. A similar pathological factor may apply in reference to other specific diceases, but don't come sniveling around here about "colds" if you expect me to be gentlemanly toward you. When you speak of "colds" you are either trying to evade the truth or else you seek to perpetuate some superstition—a superstition from which a lot of people reap very nice profits.

These experts representing the New York Ventilation commission like many other medical or scientific authorities, cannot, will not, and dare not define what they are talking about. They are perfectly conscious that if we ever succeed in pinning them down to a frank and unreserved definition of "cold" or "colds," the war will be over and a lot of war workers will have to look for other jobs.

My conclusion obvious to the scientific mind, is that people are more inclined to huddle indoors in cold weather and respiratory infections are more readily spread from one to another where people are thus crowded indoors. Children always get the worst of the deal because they come into the most intimate and indiscriminating contact with older persons and with each other; and in a community where such inferences as these of the New York ventilation commission are taken seriously it is unlikely that the majority of people will take any particular pains to avoid sharing their alleged slight "colds" with others, particularly with children who hardly know enough to resent being sprayed.

One of the toughest obstacles I have encountered in teaching hygiene is the pertinacity of certain elderly mentors who have at one time or another exercised censorship over my teachings. One such obstacle, now happily removed, managed for years to cripple my efforts within his sphere of control. One day shortly before his removal we went to the mat about this, and when the gong sounded he was inquiring whether I gave no weight at all to empirical evidence, and insisting, not very honestly I thought, that he himself invariably, INVARIABLY, sir, took cold if he went out without his rubbers on when the pavement was even a little damp. As I look back on it I know that I should have killed him right there, but the gods had other plans.

Empirical evidence is common experience. If folks would only look at this question from the viewpoint of common experience and weight the empirical evidence against theories, traditions and coincidence, the thing would be settled beyond peradventure.

I have several files stuffed full of empirical evidence bearing on the effect of exposure to cold and wet. All this testimony from polar explorers, arctic and temperate hunters, fishermen, sailors, veterans of the World war, lumberjacks, forestry men, ice harvesters, cold storage warehouse men, people who have had ample experience with exposure to cold and wet, all this testimony unanimously shows that no illness (except frostbite or freezing to death) ever comes from exposure. On the other hand, I have even a greater quantity of testimony from molly-coddles who take such absurd precautions against technical exposure, and these misguided folk draw heavily upon the imagination for a lot of circumstantial evidence. It is the irony of this that makes a man contemplate murder. Only those who do not know what exposure means harbor a groundless fear of it.

A good deal of experimental work has been done in the past five years in a "nation wide study" or "intensive campaign against the common cold." Now and then some research student reports that a slight though interesting preponderance of guinea pigs inoculated and subjected to cold and wet developed a kind of snuffles, as compared with a control group of guinea pigs inoculated but not exposed to cold and wet. But there is one thing noteworthy about all this concerted "study," the scientists engaged in the work waive the ethical rule that requires scientific men to report their NEGATIVE results as well as their positive results. If a series of experiments give negative results, that is of interest, even though negative evidence has no weight. Can it be that the big nostrum barons who endow these expeditions make that a condition of the fund? We must not forget that all sorts of commercial interests take a profit from the popular fear of "taking cold."

square and a table of logarithms, so a woman with her highly developed intelligence puts all kinds of rings around a man while he stands there thinking about it.

But a woman must hide her intelligence. To reveal it is fatal.

John and Mary are all ready for their Sunday morning spin. Everything is set to go. John starts the engine, shoves the gears into first, steps on the gas—the blooming thing jumps, then dies!

Now that's an embarrassing situation for any man to find himself in. His supposed knowledge of mechanics, his experience as a driver—these and other conceits humiliate him all the more in the presence of his lady fair.

Mary, of course, has suspected from the very first that John, as usual, has forgotten to release the emergency brake. A glance confirms her suspicions.

But is it politic for her to mention this to John and thereby reveal her intelligence? Not if she wants to enjoy herself on the trip. Therefore Mary lets him pull this switch and that, examine the motor, hop in and out until he gets tired. She knows that finally he will tumble on what's wrong.

"Wasn't that silly of me?" he remarks with a smile as he releases the brake. Mary smiles, too—a knowing smile. She behaved like a Dumb Dora, yes. But she safeguarded an enjoyable drive.

Which reminds me that I did not finish my story about Miss W.

After the dinner party and my ("Intelligent") discovery, I had a long conference with the young lady and explained everything in detail.

"You're too much for them," I told her. "Your intelligence is a handicap. Don't discuss or argue with men, even if you know enough to give them lessons. Let them give vent to their egos. Let them believe they are teaching you something. The less you appear to know the better they will like it. Play the part of a Dumb Dora and I'll wager you'll have so many proposals you won't know which way to turn."

Presto! Within two months I attended the wedding.

The aftermath? None, except one of contentment and happiness. "But please, doctor, don't ever tell him I'm a college graduate and have a Ph. D.," she wrote me once from abroad!

Since then I have concluded that gentlemen not only prefer Dumb Doras in the beginning. They prefer them right along.

The intuition of women sometimes prompts them to hide their mental capabilities. But after marriage, or after a courtship becomes prolonged, they sometimes forget. They begin to reveal how really intelligent they are.

Frieda begins to tell Everett why he makes a mistake in not changing his job with a penetrating insight that completely floors him. Alice points out to Fred with unassailable logic the wisdom of moving into the suburbs. On their trip abroad Felicia talks French like a streak, an ability Andrew never suspected, and Andrew feels like a chump. Jane asks for a chance to manage the family budget and starts a savings account with five dollars the first month.

The result? Generally a vague feeling of uneasiness on the part of hubby because his own common sense tells him his presupposed superiority is being deflated.

This becomes more and more irksome and irritating as time goes on. He may become sad and feel forlorn. He may develop an inferiority complex. Anyway, the breach tends to widen.

Men are peculiar animals. They live in a dream world much more than surface indications would suggest. They must keep their egos supreme at any cost. They go so far as to like illusion better than reality, provided the illusion carries with it the idea of their own impregnable intelligence superiority.

Then why not keep them thus illuded?

Appear dumb and act dumb always, even if it hurts. Dumb-like, let your man think he is leading you. Dumb-like, also, ask always for advice and guidance, no matter whether you intend to use it or not.

If he happens to discover that you went to college, don't let on that you ever passed an examination, whatever you do. And, finally, dumb-like, too, you must forgive them, for seldom, when it comes to women, do they know what they do.

The Bargain

"What?" said James. "Where? Here where are my slippers?"

"It must be a thunderbolt. Be careful, James."

For James, in his nightgown was already standing by a bedside—in the radiance of a night light, long as a stork. He sniffed loudly.

"D'you smell burning?"

"No," said Emily.

"Here, give me the candle."

"Put on this shawl, James. It can't be burglars; they wou'dn't make such a noise."

"I don't know," muttered James "I was asleep." He took the candle from Emily, and shuffled to the door.

"What's all this?" he said on the landing. By confused candle-and-night-light he could see a number of white clothed figures—Rachel, Cicely, and the maid Fifine, in their nightgowns. Soames in his nightshirt, at the head of the stairs, and down below, that fellow Warmson.

The voice of Soames flat and calm, said: "It's the Hondekoeter."

There, in fact, enormous, at the bottom of the stairs, was the Hondekoeter, fallen in its face. James, holding up his candle, stalked down and stood gazing at it. No one spoke, except Fifine, who said: "La, la!"

Cicely, seized with a fit of giggles, vanished.

Then Soames spoke into the dark well below him, illumined faintly by James' candle.

"It's all right, Pater; it won't be hurt; there was no glass."

James did not answer, but, holding his candle low, returned up the stairs and without a word went back into his bedroom.

"What was it, James?" said Emily, who had not risen.

"That picture came down with a run—comes of not looking after things yourself. That fellow Warmson! Where's the eau de Cologne?"

He annointed himself, got back into bed, and lay on his back waiting for Emily to improve the occasion. But all she said was: "I hope it hasn't made your head ache, James."

"No," said James; and for some time after she was asleep he lay with his eyes on the night light, as if waiting for the Hondekoeter to play him another trick—after he had bought the thing and given it a good home, too!

Next morning, going down to breakfast, he passed the picture, which had been lifted so that it stood slanting, with its back to the stair wall. The white rooster seemed just as much on the point of taking a bath as ever. The feathers floated on their backs curved like shallops. He passed on into the dining room.

They were all there, eating eggs and bacon, suspiciously silent.

James helped himself and sat down.

"What are you going to do with it now, James?" said Emily.

"Do with it? Hang it again, of course!"

"Not really Pater!" said Rachel. "It gave me fits last night."

"That wall won't stand it," said Soames.

"What! It's a good wall!"

"It really is too big," said Emily.

"And we none of us like it, Pater," put in Cicely "it's such a monster, and so yellow!"

"Monster, indeed!" said James, and was silent till suddenly he spluttered: "What would you have me do with it, then?"

"I shouldn't get anything for it."

"But you said it was a bargain, Pater," said Cicely.

"So it was!"

There was another pause. James looked sidelong at his son: there was a certain pathos in that glance, as if it were seeking help but Soames was concentrated above his plate.

"Have it put up in the lumber room, James," said Emily quietly.

James reddened between his whiskers, and his mouth opened; he looked again at his son, but Soames ate on. James turned to his teacup. And there went on within him that which he could not express. It was as if they had asked him: "When is a bargain not a bargain?" and he didn't know the answer, but they did. A change of epoch, sometimes now fangled in the air. A man could no longer buy a thing because it was worth more: It was—it was the end of everything. And, suddenly, he mumbled: "Well, have it your own way, then. Throwing money away, I call it!"

After he had gone to the office the Hondekoeter was conducted to the lumber room by Warmson, Hunt, and Thomas. There covered by a dust sheet to preserve the varnish, it rested twenty-one years, till the death of James in 1901, when it went forth and came under the hammer. It brought five pounds and was bought by a designer of posters, working for a poultry breeding firm.

What's Up In Congress

will now recede—they have just been re-elected and, I take it, feel that they have a fresh mandate to continue their opposition.

Both President Coolidge and Mr. Hoover have declared against the so-called equalization fee; which has been the bone of contention in the framework of farm relief as thus far proposed. Accordingly, it will be impossible to secure this feature prior to 1933, if ever and I can see no reason why the advocates of farm relief —which means all of us—should not get together and agree upon a measure and pass it. The House rules are conducive to speed in such a matter, and the Senate, regardless of its rules, can outdistance the House whenever it chooses to show its celerity.

Hence, Boulder Dam. If its friends shall decide that national security and international peace pacts are more immediately desirable than a cheap water supply for southern California, and that farm relief for every one is better than flood relief for a few—then the Boulder Dam bill will be laid aside and the session can finish work in orderly fashion.

But we shall not be able to complete the program without some debate. The pacifist lobby which always infests Washington—and I should like to know the origin and maintenance of that lobby—will do all in its power to defeat the naval construction bill. And those of us irreconcilables of 1919 who are left will want to make sure that the naval bill goes ahead of the treaty, and that the treaty is safeguarded so that we do not barter away the right of self-defense or the Monroe Doctrine. The advocates of the McNary-Haugen bill in its original form will want to do a little gloating. But all this can be done and we still shall be able to pass the indicated program by March 4 if Boulder Dam can be disposed of.

Even this, however, will not necessarily obviate an extra session of the Seventy-first Congress — though it may not be called at once. The farm relief measure, which can be passed at the approaching short session, will deal primarily, perhaps altogether, with the problem of the exportable surplus, and will provide for some sort of gradual support of the farmers' co-operatives along the line of the activities of the Alberta wheat pool, if an effete Easterner may be permitted to hazard a guess on a subject which the West regards as its own.

This, it will be observed, has no traffic with the tariff, although the central war cry of those who battled for farm relief last winter was: "Make the tariff effective." This slogan fell upon responsive ears—but the response was not exactly what the originators of the slogan had expected. "Make the tariff effective" indeed, thunderously echoed the textile mills of New England, the cement mills of all the states, the brass founders and locksmiths of the industrial East, the shingle mills of the Northwest. Less resonantly, perhaps, but just as sincerely, every interest involved in an existing tariff schedule took up the cry.

A tariff bill is a curiously interlocked measure, in which no single item may be altered without impairing the equilibrium of the whole structure. Whenever we begin to "make the tariff effective" for the farmer, we shall have to "make the tariff effective" for everybody else, too. This means a general tariff revision, which cannot possibly be undertaken at a short session of Congress. The existing tariff bill took more than a year for its drafting and passage. The Underwood bill required more than six months. If the next tariff bill should require as much time as that, it would mean that we would not be able to pass it until the mid-summer or the autumn of 1930—and that we should then plunge into a Congressional campaign with a new and untested tariff bill as a major issue.

Not for me, thank you, if I can help it. I want no more campaigns like those of 1890 and 1922. It should not be difficult to impress this point of view upon the majority leaders in the Congress now in existence and, through them, upon the new President. Therefore, I look upon an extra session of the Seventy-first Congress as inevitable. If this should prove to be the prevailing opinion, what effect will it have upon the program which confronts Congress this winter? It should have none at all. Nevertheless, it will probably lead to a much more prolonged debate on each controverted measure than if its advocates realized that it is now or never—or, at any rate, now or fully two years hence—for their pet projects. Personally, I now hope that wiser councils might prevail and that we can go on—as we surely can—with the essentials of legislation and dispose of them so that we can confront tariff revision next summer untrammeled by a lot of other major legislation.

That I have spoken only of the Senate in this discussion of the forthcoming winter's work of Congress is not because of my well known regard for the Senate as a legislative body, in spite of what any one may say of its rules, which, I may add parenthetically, I probably know as well as the next man. I speak only of the Senate because, as I sought to point out earlier, there is only one subject of major consequence in the winter's program—aside from appropriation bills—in which House action is required. That is farm relief, which must be attacked again. However, neither the House nor the Senate is likely to spend much time in debating this subject once the agrarian leaders come to an agreement, as they doubtless will.

And it is in the Senate, too, that we find Boulder Dam.

Stop Whiskey

By John's Wife

I'm the happiest little woman
In all this little town;
And my merry laugh and singing
Takes the place of sigh and frown,
For JOHN HAS QUIT HIS DRINKING
And is life himself once more,
And the world is just a paradise
With such happiness in store.

On day I read some verses——
"Mary's Miracle," the name,
And I said, that's John exactly,
And I'll send and get the same.
So I sent for GOLDEN TREATMENT,
(As sly as sly could be)
And I put it in John's supper
And I put it in his tea.

And it didn't taste a little bit;
Had no odor, so you see—
It was smoothest kind of sailing
For little Doctor Me.
And I watched and prayed and waited,
(And cried some, too, I guess),
And I didn't have the greatest faith,
I'm ashamed now to confess.

And John never thought a minute
He was being cured of drink,
And soon he's as well as any one,
It makes me cry to think!
Just makes me cry for gladness,
I'm so proud to be his wife—
Since he is cured of drinking,
And leads a nice, new life.

"Since John he quit a-drinking!"
I can't say it times enough!
And hates and loathes a liquor
As he would a poison stuff.
And when I say my prayers at night
As thankful as can be—
I pray for John the most of all—
Then GOLDEN TREATMENT.

A Letter From the "Seckatary"

Dear Club Members:

Two weeks from next Tuesday will be Christmas! I guess every boy and girl in our club today is dreaming of the many joys that this great feast day brings. And it is really a time for dreaming, too. I caught myself dreaming about it just a little while ago, as I sat down to write this. The present world with all its noise and hustle and bustle gradually faded from my mind, and I wandered out into the great open spaces far away in the land of Judea, when the Romans held sway. I seemed to be standing in a lone, bleak place. Beyond in the dark-

A CHRISTMAS PASSWORD

Last week our password was "Nebuchadnezzar," and we made no mistake in saying that it was a difficult word to figure out.

This week we are going to give you another difficult password. As you will see, we are giving you four vowels, each one preceded by a dash. Each dash represents a missing letter, and the missing letters are all consonants. You must fill in the missing letters to get the password. Here it is:

—U—E—I—E

If we gave you the first letter, it would be easy, we know. But you must figure out for yourself what letters go in the blank spaces, and when you have placed the right ones there, you will have a word that means Christmastide. Now, let's see how good you are!

"CHRISTMAS"

Prizes announced each Sunday for best letter, story, drawing or poem.

READ THE RULES CAREFULLY

In our next contest the title must contain the word, "CHRISTMAS." You may write a letter or a verse or draw a picture.

WRITE ON ONE SIDE OF PAPER ONLY.

YOUR COMPOSITION MUST BE ORIGINAL. YOU MUST WRITE IT WITHOUT ANY ASSISTANCE FROM OLDER PERSONS.

Drawings must be made in black drawing ink. Those made in ordinary writing ink cannot be considered.

Manuscripts or drawings will not be returned unless accompanied by self-addressed and stamped envelope.

All contributions must bear the writer's full name, address and age. Don't forget to give your age.

The contest is open now. It will close next Thursday at 4 o'clock. All contributions must be received by that time.

Prize winners will be announced Sunday, December 23.

PRIZE: A BOOK OF "OUR CLUB'S ADVENTURES"

Address all submissions in this contest to Seckatary Hawkins, care The Atlanta Constitution.

ness I could just make out the darker shadows of a little town, in which there was no sound or movement, for the inhabitants were asleep. It seemed that the silence of the ages lay about it. And then in my dream, suddenly a curtain was lifting upon a scene that was to be remembered down through the centuries.

Now the place began to take on shadows of different forms, and presently, out of the mist I could see the dawn begin to break, and to my yet unaccustomed eyes there appeared the outlines of a tiny hill, in the side of which there was a tiny cave, and in this cave a supernatural glow shone upon a manger in which lay a tiny infant, and bending over the crib there was a beautiful Virgin, and an old man with gray hair and a venerable face, absorbed in complete adoration of the babe. At the mouth of the cavern a shepherd hesitated, and around him his pet sheep timidly peeped into the luminous cavern. It was Christmas morning.

There, now, let's see what you can write about Christmas. Write a story or a verse or something, just so it's about Christmas, for that will be the title of our contest for this week. Read the rules carefully, and even if you have tried many times before and not won a prize, remember, it is the one who keeps on that finally gets somewhere. And if you are not yet a member, fill out the membership blank and send it in with your contest work, and you will then receive a club button and a certificate making you eligible to all contests conducted by our club.

OUR WEEKLY MEETING

We will open the meeting this week with a few communications from some of our new members. Those of you who enjoy exchanging postcards with different members will find in most of the letters presented in this column a request to hear from you. And all members whose letters are printed in our meeting column will be awarded a book of our club's adventures on the old river bank. The first letter comes from a Kentucky member:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

I am ten years old, and a member of the Seckatary Hawkins club at Louisville, Ky. I always listen to your talks over the radio every Saturday evening and sure enjoy them. Would like for some of the club members to write me some time. Be very careful that the Pelhams don't get you.

JOHN W. BLACK, JR.,
1108 S. 32d St., Louisville, Ky.

Now we let you read a letter from one of our new members who lives 'way down south in Dixie:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

Gee! I know you have a good time up there with your club. I read your stories in the paper every day and Sunday, too. I am very much interested in your club. Please keep up your club. (I know you will). Don't let old Pelhams get you.

Yours, fair and square,
FRANCES LINDSEY.
806 Peeples St., S. W., Atlanta, Ga.

When a little girl only five years old can read, and write such a nice letter, she ought to get one of our books, and we are going to send her one for this:

Dear Seck:

Here comes a little girl five years old. I read all your stories. I want to join your club.

FRANCES BERT WILKERSON.
Rosman, N. C.

And always after North Carolina comes South Carolina, so we introduce you to two brothers and one sister, all three of them having the same birthday—which is unusual—but nevertheless very handy for mother, as she can have one birthday party for all three:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

I have just listened in on your radio meeting, and I am writing you to tell you that I sure enjoyed it. I am a little boy 11 years old, and I have a sister nine years old, and I have a little brother six years old, and all of our birthdays are the same day—the 14th of May.

We all enjoy your program.

Your little friend,
EUGENE CARMAN.
14 Wright St., Greenville, S. C.

ADIOS

For the nonce we must say good-by, and therefore this meeting will come to an abrupt end now, and we will all meet again on this page next week. Don't overlook your chance of winning a prize in the Christmas contest. Well, get busy.

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

IN THE SECKATARY'S MAIL BOX

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

I know you are getting so many letters you can hardly read them all, but here comes one from a little Georgia girl. I am nine years old and in the fourth grade. I enjoy being a member of your club. I sure do enjoy reading your page. It is very interesting.

Yours, fair and square.
MARTHA BEAUCHAMP.
Coleman, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I enjoy reading your stories very much. I am ten years old. Last week I borrowed a book from a friend. The name of it was "Stoner's Boy," by you. It certainly was a good book and I hope I will be as lucky as some of the boys and girls and win a book.

Yours, fair and square.
KENNETH STEWARD,
1206 Peachtree St.,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seckatary:

I have been reading your stories for some time and enjoy them very much. I am twelve years old and in the seventh grade. I like school as well as I like your club. All you club members write me.

Yours, fair and square.
LULA BELLE COLE.
Lilburn, Ga.

Dear Seckatary:

I read your stories in the paper. I like them very much. I am in the sixth grade. Am eleven years old. I want all of the members to write to me.

Yours, fair and square.
MARTHA WITCHER,
124 Central St., Cedartown, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have enjoyed the stories in The Constitution about the cowboys and Indians. Again, I hope this letter will win a prize as I am doing my best for your club.

Yours, fair and square.
GENE McNAIR,
2007 Gordon Rd., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seckatary:

I am writing my first letter to your club. I have been reading your pieces and the letters from the boys and girls and certainly do enjoy them. I wish to join your club. I am in the fourth grade and am nine years old.

Yours, fair and square.
EUGENE DEAL,
Route 97, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I enjoy your stories in The Constitution of your adventures on the river bank. I am only eight years old and in the third grade. I get my mama to read your adventures to my sister and me every morning before my daddy goes to work, as he takes the paper with him. I enjoyed your pulling the "red-head's" wig off today.

Yours, fair and square.
WARREN EVERETT,
560 Tenth St., N. W., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Hawkins:

I like to read about your adventures and imagine being with you. I am ten years old and am in the fifth grade. I attend Peeples Street school.

Yours, fair and square,
DOROTHY COREAUX,
572 Culberson St., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am sending the membership blank, and hope you will accept me as a member. Every Sunday sister reads your page to me. Lots of times she does not want to but I beg her and beg her until she finally has to. We both like it and think your adventures are great.

Yours, fair and square,
JAQUE DAVISON,
719 Myrtle St., N. E., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have read your stories every Sunday. Now I wish to join your club. I would be glad to hear from any member of your club at any time or especially you.

Yours, fair and square,
BIMMIE GAY DEAN,

"MY FAVORITE BOOK" PRIZE

By BERNICE SMULLIAN, 680 Washington St., S. W., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have been reading your adventures every day. I think they are fine. I go to school and am in the eighth grade. I have been wanting one of your books so I can learn more about you.

Yours, fair and square,
MARY BURCH.
Wiley, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Here comes a girl from Tennessee. Please let me in the clubhouse. I read your stories every Friday night and am interested in them. If you do not help me win a book I will come down south where the cotton grows and quarrel with you more than the Pelham boys do.

Yours, fair and square,
LOLITA ALLEY,
Box 201, Oakdale, Tenn.

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

We have a clubhouse and we have three members of the club. We are doing a heap of things in it and it is a good one. But it is not as good as yours is, because we did not have a Doc Waters. That is why I am writing to you because I hear of heap of people writing to you.

Yours, fair and square.
SECKATARY BILL.

Dear Seckatary:

I sure do thank you for my club pin. I wear it every day. I am glad I joined your club for I know we will all have lots of fun together. I belong to the "Girls' G. A.," and we sure do have lots of fun together. We go on hikes and picnics. We have our pins and on them are printed: "G. A." They are green, blue, and white.

Yours, fair and square.
KATE BINGHAM.
Box 136, Dillard, Ga.

Hello, Seck:

I received my badge a few weeks ago and think the colors are wonderful and also the motter. Seck, I am sure glad to be a member of your club as I think it is a great club.

Seck, I sure was tickled to see my letter in print and also glad to receive my badge. I wear it everywhere I go. I enjoy going to school and I go every day. I am expecting a letter from you and all the rest of the club.

Yours, fair and square.
MYRTIS FORSYTH.
Route 4, Dallas, Ga.

Dear Seck:

We are going to have a contest. I guess you will want to know what this contest is going to be about. Well, we are going to draw your picture and the best one is going to get the prize. I received my badge. I sure do like it. I am going to try to obey the rules, which I can. Everyone in the seventh grade of the Rutherford College school is going to join. I think. Well, good luck to you all. Will write you soon.

Yours, fair and square,
BOYD SMITH,
Connelly Springs, N. C.

Dear Seckatary:

I am sending in my membership blank and want to join your "Fair and Square" club. I am twelve years old and in the seventh grade and I'd rather read history than eat, but I would rather read one of your books, which I am going to try to get pretty soon. I read your part daily and like it very much for I am

Yours, fair and square.

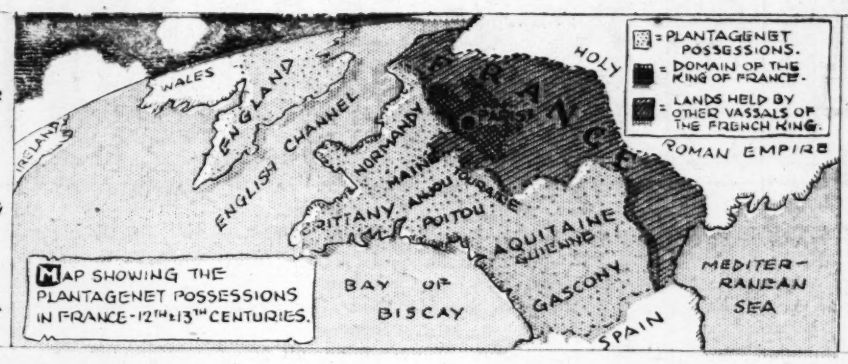
THE ENGLISH KINGS OF THE PLANTAGENET FAMILY, OF WHOM HENRY II. WAS THE FIRST, OWNED OR CONTROLLED LANDS IN FRANCE COMPRISING AN AREA LARGER THAN ENGLAND, AND LARGER THAN THE DOMINIONS OF THE KING OF FRANCE. HENRY AND THE KINGS THAT FOLLOWED HIM SPENT A GREAT DEAL OF TIME ON THE CONTINENT.



MAP SHOWING THE PLANTAGENET POSSESSIONS IN FRANCE - 12TH & 13TH CENTURIES.

HENRY II (1154-1189) INHERITED ENGLAND, NORMANDY AND BRITTANY FROM HIS GREAT-GRANDFATHER, WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, — FROM HIS MOTHER, WHO HAD MARRIED THE COUNT OF ANJOU, THE PROVINCES OF ANJOU AND MAINE, — AND THROUGH HIS WIFE, ELEANOR, WHO WAS THE DIVORCED WIFE OF LOUIS VII OF FRANCE, HE ACQUIRED POITOU, GUIENNE AND GASCONY.

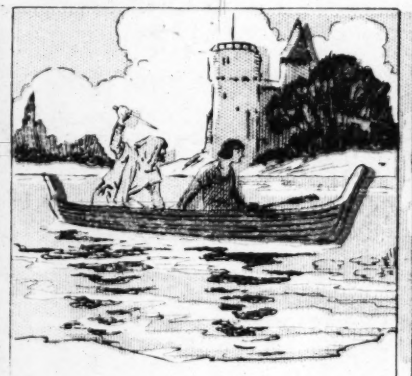
HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

Chapter 109—John "Lackland" and the Magna Carta. By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

THE GREATER PART OF THE VAST FRENCH POSSESSIONS OF THE PLANTAGENET KINGS OF ENGLAND WAS LOST DURING THE REIGN OF KING JOHN (1199-1216), WHO WAS THEREAFTER CALLED JOHN "LACKLAND".

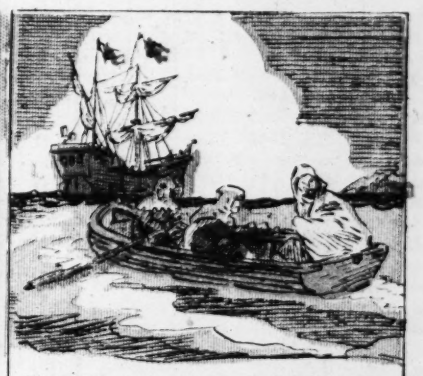
JOHN, WHO CAME TO THE THRONE OF ENGLAND AT THE DEATH OF HIS OLDEST BROTHER, RICHARD COEUR DE LION, WAS HATED AND FEARED BY ALL.

THERE WERE MANY WHO BELIEVED THAT ARTHUR, THE SON OF JOHN'S NEXT OLDEST BROTHER (WHO HAD DIED IN 1186), WAS RICHARD'S RIGHTFUL HEIR, AND JOHN REGARDED ARTHUR AS A DANGEROUS RIVAL.



IN 1203 ARTHUR, WHO WAS JUST A BOY, WAS MYSTERIOUSLY MURDERED WHILE UNDER JOHN'S PROTECTION. EVERYONE WAS CERTAIN THAT JOHN, HIMSELF, HAD COMMITTED THE CRIME.

PHILIP OF FRANCE COMMANDED JOHN TO COME BEFORE HIM TO ANSWER THIS CHARGE AND TO DO HOMAGE FOR HIS FRENCH LANDS. JOHN IGNORED THIS SUMMONS, WHEREUPON THE FRENCH KING PROCEEDED TO CONFISCATE THE PLANTAGENET PROVINCES OF NORMANDY, ANJOU, MAINE, TOURAINE AND PART OF AQUITAINE. JOHN FLED TO ENGLAND WHERE HE SOON GAINED THE HATRED OF THE PEOPLE BY HIS ACTS OF OPPRESSION.



IN 1207 JOHN BECAME INVOLVED IN A QUARREL WITH POPE INNOCENT III. JOHN REFUSED TO RECEIVE STEPHEN LANGTON WHOM THE MONKS OF CANTERBURY, BY THE COMMAND OF THE POPE, HAD ELECTED ARCHBISHOP TO SUCCEED HUBERT WALTER WHO DIED IN 1205.

THE POPE RETALIATED BY PUTTING ENGLAND UNDER AN INTERDICT, A BAN SUSPENDING ALL CHURCH SERVICES. THIS WAS A DIREFUL SENTENCE IN THOSE DAYS, AND A CLAMOR AROSE FROM THE PEOPLE.

FINALLY, IN 1213, WHEN THE POPE THREATENED TO DEPOSE JOHN AND GIVE THE ENGLISH CROWN TO PHILIP OF FRANCE, JOHN YIELDED, RECEIVED LANGTON, AND HUMBLY AGREED TO BECOME A VASSAL OF THE POPE.

IN 1214 THE GREAT BARONS, TIRED OF JOHN'S DESPOTISM AND MISRULE, UNITED TO FORCE THE KING TO RECOGNIZE AND RESPECT THE RIGHTS OF HIS SUBJECTS.

A CHARTER, SETTING FORTH THE THINGS THE KING MUST NOT DO, WAS DRAWN UP BY THE LEADING BARONS AND BISHOPS AND SUBMITTED TO THE TYRANT WHO REJECTED IT WITH CONTEMPT.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

THE BARONS THEN GATHERED THEIR FORCES, SEIZED LONDON, AND MARCHED TO ATTACK THE KING AT WINDSOR. GREATLY ALARMED, JOHN AGREED TO MEET THE NOBLES AT RUNNYMEDE.

THIS MEMORABLE MEETING TOOK PLACE ON JUNE 15, 1215, AND RESULTED IN JOHN BEING FORCED TO SIGN THE CHARTER LIMITING THE POWERS OF THE KING AND STATING THE RIGHTS OF HIS SUBJECTS.

THE MAGNA CARTA, OR GREAT CHARTER, WRUNG FROM JOHN "LACKLAND" AT RUNNYMEDE, IS ONE OF THE MOST CELEBRATED DOCUMENTS IN THE HISTORY OF GOVERNMENT.

IT SET FORTH CERTAIN INALIENABLE RIGHTS OF THE PEOPLE, AND SERVED THENCEFORTH AS A CURB UPON OTHER ENGLISH KINGS WHO WISHED TO RULE AS ABSOLUTE MONARCHS.

LATER, JOHN TREACHEROUSLY TRIED TO ANNUL THE GREAT CHARTER, BUT FAILED.

JOHN DIED IN 1216 AND THERE WERE FEW WHO MOURNED HIS DEATH.

THE SCRAGGS CASE IS CLOSED

Scraggs had escaped! How fast the news spread around our old river bank! Judge Granbery had sent him to the School for Bad Boys, after that last trouble he was in, when he broke a big plate glass window up on Main Street, and tried to lay the blame on Jerry Moore. The sheriff had taken him up to the school on Friday night. And by Saturday night he had broken away and was gone again, nobody seemed to know where.

We boys talked about it at our meeting on Monday, right after school let out.

"Tough on you, Hawkins," said Shadow Loomis; "that kid will try to pay you back for what you did."

"What I did," I said, "I would do again. I'd do the same for any kid who didn't play fair and square. We have stood enough out of Scraggs—time after time we let him go when he was caught doing something. You fellows never seemed to worry about him. I think I was about the only one who ever felt sorry for him—"

"You're too soft-hearted!" exclaimed Jerry Moore. "That's what I always said about you, Hawkins, you let a guy get the best of you. Why did you ever want to feel sorry for Scraggs? He got himself in bad; and just because you wouldn't let him get away with some of the things he did, he has a grudge against you, and he'll come back here and try to pay you up—"

"I only hope he will do that very thing," I said; "it will give me one more chance to capture him for old Judge Granbery; and this time, believe me, I'll see that he stays captured. He won't be able to break out of the School for Bad Boys again. They'll be watching him too close after this."

"Huh!" exclaimed Bill Darby. "You wouldn't send him back if he started to cry in front of you. You're too soft-hearted."

"Now you fellows get that out of your heads!" I said, hotly. "You get me sore—talking about me like that—I ain't any more soft-hearted than you are. I'd like to take a punch at this Scraggs myself—every time I think of the way he slapped Arthur that day when his gang caught him, it makes me mad."

"You're right there," spoke up Arthur, one of the two brothers whom we had taken into our club a few weeks ago. "He wouldn't have tried it if he hadn't his gang all around him, holding me so I couldn't fight back. And I'll say this right here, Hawkins, to your face, too—if you let him get away without paying him back for what he did to me—well, I don't care to belong to this club any more."

"Don't worry, Arthur," I said, "as long as you belong to this club, we will stick up for you. Now get out, all of you fellows, and let me alone to write the minutes of this meeting."

"No, we'd better stick around," says Jerry Moore, "because we know that Scraggs is loose again and if he comes here when you're alone, he'll give you the worst lickin' you ever had—"

"Not on your life, he won't," I said; "don't you fellows worry too much about me. The way I feel now, I am mad enough at Scraggs to lick him twice before he knows what's happening to him. Go on, get out."

They all went out except Perry Stokes. He stayed to dust up the place and to set the things in order after meeting, as he always does.

The telephone bell started ringing. Perry leaped to answer it. "Hello!" He listened for a while without saying a word. Then he said: "Goodby!" and hung up the receiver. "It was Judge Granbery, sir," he explained. "He wants you to come up to his office right away, sir."

I closed my book and put the stopper on my ink bottle.

"I'm going up there right away, Perry," I said, as I took down my coat and hat. "And don't want you tagging along at my heels. Understand? All I wish is that I run into this Scraggs."

I left the clubhouse in Perry's charge and went up the river path to the Main road.

When I reached the judge's office, the sheriff was sitting on one side of his desk, and on the other side sat the principal of the School for Bad Boys. I knew right away they were talking about the escape of Scraggs. Most likely the judge had the principal on the carpet for it, and was giving him the dickens. And I knew afterwards, too, that all three of these men were sore at Scraggs for getting away, and were bent on getting him back as soon as possible.

"Well, Hawkins," says the judge, "you've heard all about it, already, I guess."

"Yesh," I said, "Scraggs, you mean. I wasn't surprised to hear he was out again——"

"You're to see that he gets in again," broke in the judge. "You know what I've always called you boys—the junior police of the river bank. You see your duty now."

"Just wait!" I said, nodding. "If I get my hands on that Scraggs kid again—"

"Oh, there's to be no more fighting of any kind," the judge cut in; "it is very plain that Scraggs will more than likely come around your clubhouse on the river bank. You're to keep all your boys wide awake, and see that this thing is handled right. As long as you have Scraggs around, there will be no peace and quiet on the river bank. Something must be done."

"All of us boys are watching for him," I said.

"But you will take charge of it yourself," said the judge, tapping the desk with his pencil; "I look upon you as the chief of the junior police, Hawkins, and I'm going to put this case into your hands until it is finished. When you have finished it, simply send me word that the case is closed. I'll depend upon you entirely."

I said I would do as he wanted me to, and with that then, I hurried back to the clubhouse and before we all went home to supper, I told all the other boys what the judge had said.

However, we did not catch Scraggs that day, nor the next. We saw him—three times we picked up his trail—twice we got close to him and once we thought we had him. But he is a slick worker. He laughed at us. That made me mad. I made up my mind now to get him, sure, if it was the last thing I ever did. Then Sadler came—a boy who had a gang he called Sadler's Seventeen. Once upon a time Scraggs belonged to the Seventeen, but was caught stealing, and Sadler threw him out. Later, however, Sadler took him back—on his promise, I thought, to turn a new leaf. Now I know that wasn't the reason. Sadler was soft-hearted.

Sadler came up to the clubhouse the day after we had almost caught Scraggs.

"Why are you hounding that kid?" he asked me.

"You know why," I answered. "But why are you shielding him?"

"Never mind about that," answered Sadler; "I always have a reason for everything. I want to ask you a favor, Hawkins—let this poor kid go. Call your fellows off, and let Scraggs go back—"

"He won't go back," I told him; "he's got it in him to be bad, that's all; and he'll worry the daylights out of our fellows until he is in the School for Bad Boys. Why are you taking his part now—that's what I want to know."

"Because," he answered, slowly, "I feel sorry for him. He belonged to my gang once. I think we ought to stick up for fellows who belonged to us, once. Don't you ever feel sorry for a guy?"

"That's just my trouble," I said, savagely, "and I'm going to stop it right now. No, sir, I don't feel sorry for Scraggs—I'll be switched if I do! There's some other reason you've got for coming here and begging for him—what is it?"

Sadler shook his head, and sighed. "No," he says, getting up to go, "maybe I ought not do it—I don't think I should—but something made me feel sorry for him that's all. I'll tell you this, Hawkins, much as I like you and your pals, I'll have to work against you about Scraggs. I'm not going to let you get him, if I can help it."

And with that, then, he went away. But I didn't sit still. As soon as he was safely out of sight, I sent Perry Stokes to get the other boys and follow Sadler. It was just a hunch—from the way he talked, I thought Sadler knew where Scraggs was—and by Jinks! I thought right. They got Scraggs, then, in the old dug-out on Burney's field, where he was hiding. They took him out, although he fought like a wildcat, and Sadler helped—but our boys were too much for them. They brought him up to our clubhouse.

"Just as soon as the sheriff can get here," I said, "he goes back to where he broke away from."

"So, Scraggs," I said, "it didn't do you much good to break out of the School for Bad Boys, did it? You're going back there, tonight. Understand?"

"I'll never go back there!" he snapped. "You'll never get me in that place again."

"We will see about that," I said; "here, fellows, put him back in my writing room and tie him to a chair till I can get the sheriff down here. Perry, call up the sheriff right away."

From behind our boys came Sadler, and there was a sad look on his handsome face.

"Hawkins," he said, "once more I ask you to let him go—let me take him back to his—"

He paused.

"Back to his what?" I asked. "Go on, talk. Back to his home? Where does he live? In Watertown? If so why didn't he stay there instead of coming down here and getting us all in trouble? No, Sadler, here's one time you don't see me getting soft-hearted. The fellows have called me soft-hearted for the last time. From now on, by golly, I'm going to be the hardest-hearted guy in the world. I'm mad, I am! And I don't care who knows it!"

Sadler backed away from me as though he thought I was going to tear up things.

"Just one moment," he said, "don't get all riled up, Hawkins. Will you do me one favor, then, if I ask you, for old times' sake, when my gang helped your gang—"

"One favor," I said, "as long as you don't ask me to set him free—"

"No, I want you to promise you won't turn him over to the sheriff until tonight—"

"Just as soon as the sheriff can get here," I said, "he goes back where he broke away from."

A noise sounded from the river path—I thought it was the sheriff coming for Scraggs—I heard wheels grating on the hard path and Sadler's voice called "Whoa, there, Prince." Then I knew he had his father's best horse hitched to a carriage, and I wondered what he was coming back for. I sat down in the chair at the head of the long table as a knock came at the door. I called, "Come in." The door opened. It was Sadler.

"Oh!" he said. "I'm glad you kept your promise to me—is he still here?"

I nodded to the back room. "In there," I said. "Waiting for the sheriff."

Sadler backed out and closed the door again. I sat silent, wondering.

Presently the door began to open slowly, again. No, it was not Sadler. It was a little old-looking lady who came in—she was trying to smile even through the tears that made her eyes look sad. Her clothes were old—her hands trembled—she slowly closed the door behind her, as she said:

"Are you Seckatary Hawkins?"

I got up and walked over to her, and placed a chair for her. But she would not sit down.

"My name is Hawkins," I said nodding; "and the boys all call me Seckatary—"

"I am so glad!" she said. "It's you I wanted to see. The Sadler boy—I asked him to do this for me—he promised he would come—but he said you would not listen to him—"

"Sadler?" I said. "Yes, I listened to him, and I told him—"

"About Billy, I mean—"

"Yes, Billy Scraggs—"

"Oh!" I said. "Yes, I told Sadler that we could not let Billy go—he's in the other room. We—"

"I was wondering what made him stay away so long," she said, "you know, Sadler told me Billy was with you boys down here in this clubhouse—you see I can't watch him as much as I would like—I must work every day—and for a while I wasn't working, and Billy got restless—he wanted to go all the time—to see something. I thought he might be glad to know—I've got work again now—I'd like to have him come back home."

"You didn't know—" I began—"you mean you didn't hear about him getting into—"

"Oh, yes, Sadler told me you had him in the club. But I want him back again, Seckatary Hawkins, you see—Billy only has me, now—his mother died when he was a baby, and his daddy—he is gone, too—and now Billy has only me to look after him—but he is a dear boy—always kind to me—I can't bear to have him gone like this—"

She sank into the chair, and put a little handkerchief to her eyes and cried. Oh, boy, that's one thing I never could stand—no, I can't see an old lady crying for a boy—as long as an old lady like that has that much love for a boy, that boy ought to try to make her happy.

I didn't know what to say to her. I'm not good on talking, anyway. So I went back into the writing room. Scraggs had his head hanging upon his chest. I spoke to him, but he didn't look up. I shook him, and he started up suddenly. He had been asleep.

"Did you hear anybody talking there?" I asked, nodding toward the room where the little old lady sat.

"No," he said, shortly. Then he caught the sound of sobbing. "Who?" he asked simply.

I didn't answer him. I took my pocket knife and cut the ropes that bound him.

"Get out of here," I said.

He stood up and stretched himself. I followed him as he slowly walked to the door, drew aside the curtains and looked—and then he gave a little cry of surprise—

"Granny!" he shouted. "Oh, Granny—I been in so much trouble—"

She was on her feet now, waiting for him with outstretched arms. He flew to her—by Jinks! there wasn't all bad in the heart of Scraggs—no, sir! He put his little arms around her as she folded her cape around him and drew him to her dear old kind and tender heart.

"Billy," she said, and she was smiling down at him, "don't you know you need your old Granny? You mustn't ever run away from me again—I'll have money to send you to school again now—listen! your old Granny's got the nicest job—come along home with me, now, and I'll tell you all about it—and I've got supper waiting, too, Billy—"

"Oh, Granny!" broke in Scraggs, "I ain't worth—"

"Hush!" she told him. And then she turned to me. "Thank you so much for being good to Billy—he's such a restless boy—a bit wayward, maybe—but I love him—"

"That is enough!" I said. And then I turned away. I didn't know what to say, or think or do. I forgot in that moment everything—forgot the sheriff—and old Judge Granberry—and everything. Forgot, too, that this Scraggs had something coming to him from one of our own club members, Arthur, who had told me he wouldn't stay in the club if—

But that was fixed all right the next day, when both Arthur and his brother Walter said they were moving, and had joined the Merry Times Club, farther down the river.

All I could think of at that particular time was that this poor old granny loved that wayward boy. Well, maybe she could make something of him. Better perhaps than the School for Bad Boys. They don't have any loving grannies up there. When I turned around, both granny and the boy were gone. In the open door stood Sadler. "Now," he said, "you know how I felt, when she asked me to come up here and get Scraggs. I was doing it for her—not for that kid."

I waved him out and turned to my desk. And I took pen and paper and wrote upon it: "The Scraggs case is closed."

"Tomorrow," I said to myself, "we will send this to old Judge Granbery."

Which we did.

Elegance Persists

Paris Winter Showings Indicate No Abatement of the Trend Toward Feminine Styling

Three evening gowns from the winter collection of Captain Molyneux, all stanch exponents of the new elegance. The first is developed in black georgette crepe and has no trimming, depending on its subtle skirt flare for its charm. The next model is of red georgette, a two-piece affair with a hip ruche of tulle, while the last is white georgette embroidered in gold and silver.

FASHION currents today are very much like the stock market. They continue in one direction and, despite endless expert predictions of a reaction toward the opposite direction, they still persist in maintaining their original trend. Then suddenly, when every one settles back comfortably secure in the belief that the present trend is to continue indefinitely, the bubble bursts, and a febrile Paris doubles in its footsteps and marches the other way. Right now we are in an upward swing of femininity which has existed for three seasons and which at this moment shows absolutely no sign of abatement.

There were plenty of prophecies after the very feminine autumn openings to the effect that elegance had gone about as far as it could in modern styles and that the mid-winter openings would show a tendency toward less elaboration. This has not been the case. The mid-season showings which have just been completed in Paris point more strongly than ever to a still greater development of feminine elaboration. It would, of course, be rash to predict that this undercurrent of feminine styling will increase its sway indefinitely, yet at this moment there are not even the faintest indications of its abatement and it is a definite certainty that the movement toward modernized elegance will continue at least through the approaching February spring openings. Farther than that no one dares honestly predict.

The three models sketched on today's page are peculiarly representative of fashion's present temper, and th fact that Molyneaux has designed all of them is the best evidence of how far this new style tendency has developed. Captain Molyneux, as all followers of fashion must remember, was the intrepid gentleman who some five years ago astounded the then easily surprised world by offering it the promenade pyjama. Some langourous but very smart ladies along the Lido first adopted it, after which, despite the usual protests, its vogue swept the country. At that time Molyneux was considered a leader of he insurgent rise of youth against the fetters of Victorianism. Today that same designer has completely vaulted to the opposite side of the fence, and there is scarcely a spokesman left for what was once known as the youth movement in dress.

The model at the extreme left, developed in black georgette, is notable in that it achieves an unqualified air of elegance despite the face that it is utterly without any trimming. Its sinuous outline, which is terminated by a full cut skirt dipping deeply and gracefully at one side and counteracted by a bow just beneath the waistline at the opposite side, makes it an excellent example of the new elegance. Just adjacent to it is a jaunty two-piece frock of red georgette crepe which enters the lists of the elaborate by reason of its billowy rush of tulle which occurs a few inches beneath a normal belted waistline. The third model, with its bolero bodice, is easily the most advanced exponent of elegance on this page.

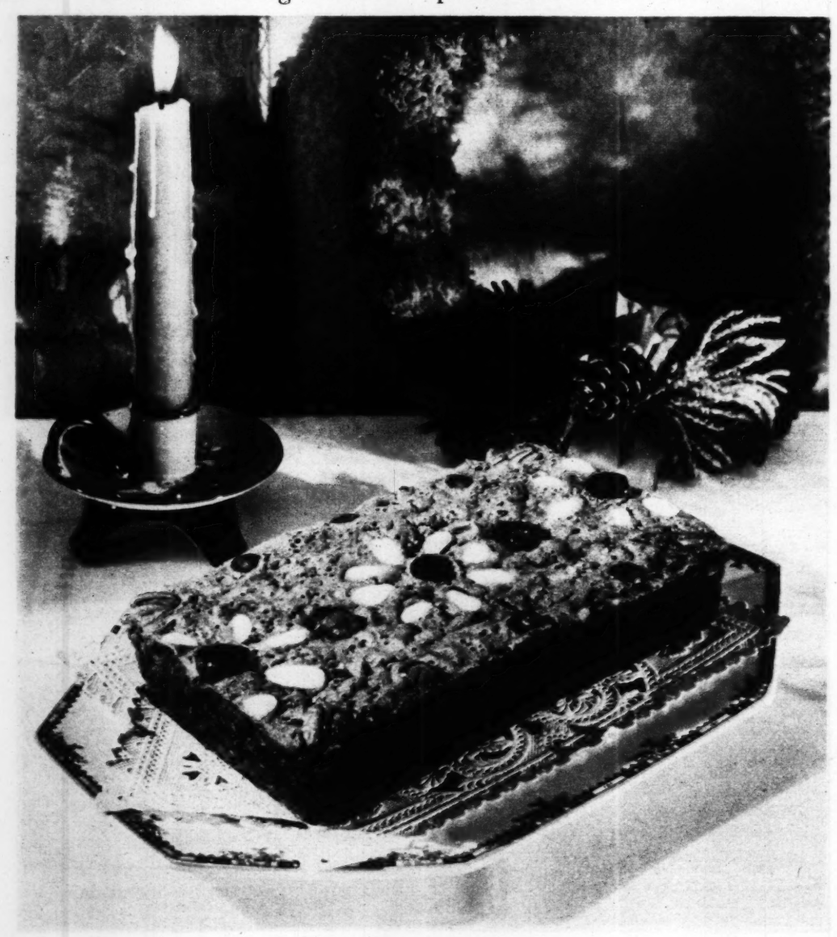
Cake—an aid to social success

Your social success depends largely upon the manner in which you entertain guests in your home—the foods you serve—the way they are prepared. Cake—if it is good—will always win praise for you from those you entertain. Bear this in mind and serve it next time. But be sure to bake it yourself—and do not fail to use that all important ingredient—Calumet Baking Powder—it's the key to better baking.

For nearly half a century, the quality and dependability of Calumet has never varied—that's why millions buy and use this double acting leavener today.

Calumet Baking Powder unfailingly produces bakings that are positively wholesome and pure. Use it and substitute positive results for the old "luck method."



FRUIT CAKE

1 lb. brown sugar	½ lb. pineapple
1 lb. shortening	½ lb. nuts
10 eggs	1 lb. dates
1 C. molasses	½ lb. orange and lemon peel
1 C. honey	1 lb. raisins
1 gill of cider	1 lb. currants
½ teaspoon cloves	½ lb. citron
½ tsp. cinnamon	1 lb. sifted flour
½ tsp. mace	1 level tsp. Calumet Baking Powder
½ lb. candied cherries

Sift flour three times with spices and baking powder. Cream shortening and sugar until light in color. Prepare fruit, add to butter mixture with molasses, honey and cider. Add dry ingredients, and pour into pans. Bake in a very slow oven (200 degrees F.) for 1½ to 2 hours. Makes 10 lbs.

LESS THAN 1¢ PER BAKING

The whites of more than 6,500,000 eggs are used in the manufacture of Calumet, the World's Greatest Baking Powder, each year, and over 1½ billion pounds of flour are leavened with it.

When you employ Calumet in your bakings and experience the remarkable and unfailing results—when you taste the tempting foods leavened with it, you will understand why more women use it than any other brand. Try the Fruit Cake recipe on the left.

CALUMET
THE WORLD'S GREATEST BAKING POWDER

Contains two leavening units: one begins to work when the dough is mixed; the other waits for the heat of the oven—then both work together. This double leavening action is responsible, to a large extent, for the unfailing results always experienced when it is used.

DOUBLE ACTING — CALUMET — MAKES BAKING EASIER

Fight Fat in this right way

A great cause of excess fat lies in an under-active gland. Medical science discovered that fact some years ago. Experiments on thousands of animals proved that fat departed when this cause was corrected. Then physicians the world over began to use the method in treating human obesity. Since then, excess fat has been fast disappearing. Slender figures are the rule. You see that everywhere.

About 21 years ago this method was embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for two decades—millions of boxes of them. Users told the results to others—the loss in weight, the gain in health and vigor. Thus the use has grown to enormous proportions. That is one great reason for the slender figures, the youth and beauty that you see today.

No starvation is required, no hard work. One simply takes four tablets daily until weight comes down to normal. Every box contains the formula, also the reasons for results. You know what you are taking and why.

If you need help in fighting fat, this is the help to employ. Use what has done so much for so many, for so long. Deal with the cause. Don't wait longer. A normal figure will mean much to you. Go start Marmola now.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

What a cigarette meant there

It took a lot of courage,

for he was no "ladies' man," and she was the belle of the town.

That awkward, stammering proposal . . . interrupted . . . what a mess he had made of it! And now . . . would she never come back? And what then? The zero hour, for a fact . . . the longest minutes of a lifetime.

Like most men, he lived through it, sustained by that little friend in need . . . his cigarette. In after years he always said it was the most important cigarette he ever smoked.

Xanthi and Cavalla, Smyrna and Samsoun—magic names, these! From here come the fragile tender Turkish tobaccos which lend their spicy aroma to Chesterfield's famous blend . . .

What a cigarette means here

It took a lot of courage,

likewise, to propose and go through with the idea behind Chesterfield.

It took courage, for it meant less profit per package than is made on most other cigarettes. Into Chesterfield we blended the finest qualities of tobacco ever offered in a cigarette at popular prices—tobacco selected regardless of cost, from all the leaf markets of the world.

And when Chesterfield jumped to big volume and continued steadily to grow . . . we knew that this cigarette which so surely bespeaks tobacco quality to us had come equally to mean it to you.

A New Kind of Motor Car Value

. . . . value which is measured not only by the dollar but by the finest of fine car standards, as well

Whenever a man or woman thinks of any General Motors car, it is perfectly obvious that he or she thinks of it as the finest car in its field. Back of this attitude toward all General Motors cars, is the fact that they actually bring you a new kind of motor car value—value which money alone cannot measure.

For this new, different value is largely the result of superb designing and fine, artistic craftsmanship; of unexampled success in attaining the intensely desirable advantage of surpassing beauty and comfort.

Such value can result only when practically limitless resources are placed at the command of engineering and artistic genius of the highest order—as is the case with the Fisher Body Corporation.

It is Body by Fisher which has enabled General Motors cars to triumph over the obstacles which formerly restricted to highest priced cars, the finest in motor car style.

You see the result in the superb style, comfort and value of every Body by Fisher. So evident to all are these superiorities that each month new thousands of men and women are attracted to ownership of the General Motors cars listed below.

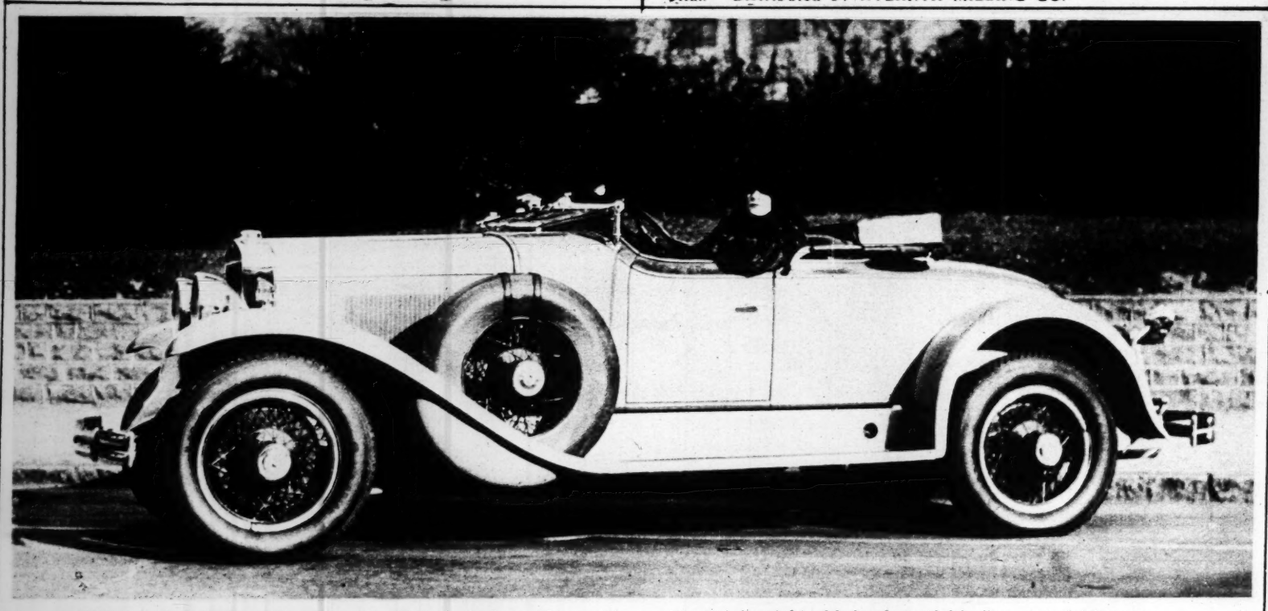
THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 9th, 1928

"What makes you have such rosy cheeks, my dear?" "Why are your eyes so bright, darling child?" "We drink PEDIGREE MILK, kind sir," says little Ethel Davis. It is because they all drink it at the Scottish Rite Hospital that the crippled children radiate health and happiness in spite of their physical handicap. GRADE "A" MILK, PASTEURIZED. Call MAin 3453 for home delivery.

The myth that brides make poor biscuits has passed into oblivion. Mrs. Edward K. VanWinkle, Jr., with CAPITOLA FLOUR as a working basis, proves that skill in cookery is among the fine arts. With pride she says, "They also use this flour at the Scottish Rite Hospital." Distributed by ATLANTA MILLING CO.

Mrs. John King Ottley, prominent civic and social leader, is delighted with her new "400" Series Nash Advanced Six Coupe. Mrs. Ottley says, "The beautiful appointments, unusual riding comfort, especially easy steering, quick get-away, and the efficient brakes, combine to make my car the ideal one for shopping, social calls, or formal evening parties."



This new LaSalle Roadster, driven by Mrs. A. J. Orme, Jr., is a true aristocrat, by right of being beautiful in line, graceful in movement, responsive in action, strong and dependable in service, a creation of charm and reliability.—Cadillac Company of Atlanta.

With convenient yards in practically every section of the city and suburbs, Randall Bros. offers prompt delivery of coal for grate, stove or furnace. No extra charge for hauling to Decatur, Kirkwood, East Point, College Park, Buckhead, and other suburban sections. RANDALL BROS., Inc., WAlnut 4714.

Mrs. Wardlaw, Chairman tells about – the pause that refreshes

For twelve years a part of the meetings of the Mending Committee

Drink Coca-Cola
Delicious and Refreshing

Mrs. Frank Spratlin, Mrs. Haralson Bleckley, Mrs. Roff Sims, Mrs. Solon Gray, Mrs. Esther Mandeville, Mrs. Sam Finley, Mrs. Albert Walden, Mrs. Mary Young, Mrs. Ransom Wright, Mrs. W. C. Wardlaw, Mrs. Robert Clower, Mrs. Julia Sawyer, Mrs. Olle Evans, Mrs. J. H. Hilsman, Mrs. G. Robert Argo, Mrs. Edgar Neely

MRS. W. C. WARDLAW, chairman of the Mending Committee of the Women's Auxiliary of the Scottish Rite Hospital, tells an interesting story about the above picture of the committee taken at her home in Atlanta on Thursday, November 22nd.

"Among the various committees of the Auxiliary, the Mending Committee takes care of mending the clothing and linen of the Hospital for Crippled Children. We meet at my home on alternate Thursdays—for a period of real work with needles and thread and sewing machines, from 8:30 in the morning until 1:30 in the afternoon.

"Of course there is a thrill in being helpful to crippled children. But work is work—ever tiring. And long ago someone suggested that we fix a definite time for a rest period, when we would relax for a minute and be served Coca-Cola. For twelve years now, at exactly 10 o'clock on meeting days, all work is laid aside and ice-cold Coca-Cola is served.

"This pause has proved a 'delicious and refreshing' moment—a break that gives us a fresh start on our work. And it has become firmly established as a regular part of our program."

Mrs. Wardlaw's story is another fine example of how ice-cold Coca-Cola, with that tingling, delicious taste and cool after-sense of refreshment, makes a little minute long enough for a big rest. Many similar stories come from all parts of the country—particularly about "Coca-Cola Clubs."

Groups of friends among women shoppers find that they all think alike about Coca-Cola, and that the soda fountain is a bright, cheerful and convenient place to meet. Any day in the shopping district, you'll find them gathered where the little red Coca-Cola sign flashes its invitation to pause and refresh yourself. Often their meetings are by appointment, and called "Coca-Cola Clubs."

The wholesome refreshment of Coca-Cola has caused it to make friends with all the world—prepared with a finished art that comes only from a lifetime of practice, under scientific supervision that permits no error.

OVER 8 MILLION A DAY

THE BEST SERVED DRINK IN THE WORLD

NOT SO DUMB- By INKO

DO ANY BUSINESS WHILE I WAS OUT.?

YES, I

I SOLD A SUIT TO A MAN WHO COULD ONLY PAY TWENTY-TWO DOLLARS FOR IT.

THE PRICE WAS TWENTY-TWO FIFTY, HE'LL COME IN TOMORROW AND PAY THE REST.

AW, YOU DUMB HEAD, HE WILL NEVER COME BACK.

OH YES HE WILL,-

THE PANTS I WRAPPED UP WERE THREE SIZES TOO SMALL FOR HIM-

Smitty.

BUY THAT FOR HERBY FOR XMAS?- NIX- HE'D HURT HIMSELF

I WONT LET HIM TOUCH IT, PA

I WANNA GUN FOR CHRISTMAS

A GUN !! SANTA CLAUS ISNT GOING TO BRING YOU ANY GUN

WHY DONT YOU ASK HIM FOR A NICE SAILBOAT- OR TRAINS?

NOPE, I WANNA GUN

OF COURSE, YOU DONT WANT A GUN, HERBY- YOU CAN HAVE MORE FUN WITH A BOX OF SOLDIERS -THEY HAVE GUNS

BESIDES I WROTE A LETTER LAST WEEK TO SANTA CLAUS TELLING HIM WHAT YOU WANTED, BUT I DIDNT TELL HIM ABOUT A GUN

I WANNA GUN

YOU'RE ONLY FOOLIN' YOU DONT WANT A GUN, -I'LL LEAVE IT TO SMITTY HERE

SAY, YOU WOULDNT KNOW HOW TO HANDLE A GUN. AND NOT ONLY THAT BUT THEY BUST AWFUL EASY AND THEN YOU'LL HAVE NOTHIN'

I KNOW WHAT YOU WANT- A SWELL RED AUTOMOBILE - SAY, ALL THE KIDS ON THE BLOCK WILL WANT A RIDE

EVERYBODY WILL KNOW YOU - YOU'LL BE THE KING OF THE KIDS WITH YOUR RED AUTOMOBILE - ISNT THAT BETTER THAN A GUN ?

YETH, I DONT WANNA GUN

WELL, WE GOT HIS MIND OFF WANTING A GUN - WE TALKED HIM OUT OF IT AT LAST

WE'LL TAKE HIM DOWN TO THE BIG STORE TO SEE SANTA CLAUS

HE CAN TELL HIM ABOUT THE RED AUTOMOBILE HE WANTS

LITTLE BOY, DO YOU KNOW WHAT I'M GOING TO BRING YOU FOR CHRISTMAS? - A GUN!

SANTA CLAUS

OH YES, MR. GOOF, HOW ARE YOU? DISSATISFIED,

WITH THESE PHOTOGRAPHS YOU MADE OF OUR BABY.-

DO YOU MEAN TO SAY IT'S NOT A GOOD LIKENESS? I DO.

WHY, IT'S A SPEAKING LIKENESS. I KNOW, -

-AND OUR BABY CAN'T SAY A WORD.
